WAUKESHA MOTOR CO. (A CORPORATION ORGANIZED AND EXISTING UNDER AND BY VIRTUE OF THE LAWS OF THE STATE OF WISCONSIN), COMPLAINANT, v. FAGEOL MOTORS CO. (A CORPORATION ORGANIZED AND EXISTING UNDER AND BY VIRTUE OF THE LAWS OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA) AND FAGEOL MOTORS SALES CO. (A CORPORATION ORGANIZED AND EXISTING UNDER AND BY VIRTUE OF THE LAWS OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA), DEFENDANTS. IN EQUITY NO. 3191

Bill of complaint

To the Honorable the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of California, Southern Division:

Waukesha Motor Co., a corporation duly organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Wisconsin and a citizen of that State, brings this, its bill of complaint, on its behalf and on behalf of all other creditors of Fageol Motors Co., a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California, and Fageol Motors Sales Co., a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California, and citizens of said State, and thereupon your orator alleges as follows:

First. That your orator is a corporation duly organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Wisconsin and a citizen of said State.

Second. That each of the defendants is a corporation duly organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California, and that each of them is a citizen of the State of California; each of said defendants having its principal place of business within the northern district of the State of California.

Third. That the defendant, Fageol Motors Co., a corporation, is engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling motor trucks and busses and parts therefor, and the defendant Fageol Motors Sales Co., a corporation, is engaged in the business of selling and distributing motor trucks and busses.

Fourth. That Fageol Motors Sales Co., a corporation, had at all times herein mentioned and now has an authorized capital stock of $10,000, divided into 100 shares of the par value of $100 each; that all of said shares are now issued and outstanding; that all of the stock of said Fageol Motors Sales Co. is owned and held by the defendant Fageol Motors Co.; that 997 shares thereof stand in the name of Fageol Motors Co.; that the remaining 3 shares stand in the name of 3 qualifying directors, but the beneficial right, title, and interest therein and thereto is vested in the defendant Fageol Motors Co.; that the said Fageol Motors Sales Co. is a wholly owned subsidiary of Fageol Motors Co. and is used and operated as an agency for the transaction of a certain branch of the business of Fageol Motors Co., to wit, the sale and distribution of certain trucks and busses.

That the defendant Fageol Motors Co. has transferred, loaned, and advanced to the defendant Fageol Motors Sales Co. from time to time large sums of money and other assets indiscriminately and without adequate security or protection as if the said two corporations were in fact one; that defendant Fageol Motors Co. has continuously, since the formation and organization of the defendant Fageol Motors Sales Co., issued and published a consolidated balance sheet, in which all of the assets and liabilities of both the defendant corporations were mingled together indiscriminately without segregation or classification as to ownership, and with recognition of and showing identity of interest and liability.

That the corporate entity of defendant Fageol Motors Sales Co. should be disregarded and the assets and liabilities of said Fageol Motors Sales Co. should be deemed and considered the assets and liabilities of defendant Fageol Motors Co.

Fifth. That the assets of the defendants consist of cash in bank, notes and trade acceptances receivable, accounts receivable, inventories of parts and raw materials and new and used trucks and busses, real estate and buildings, machinery, and fixtures of an aggregate value of upward of $2,000,000 if liquidated in the usual and ordinary course of the company's business.

Sixth. That within 2 years last passed defendants became indebted to your orator upon an open book account for goods, wares, and merchandise to the reasonable value of $22,734.49, sold and delivered by your orator to the defendants at defendants' special instance and request; that no part of said sum has been paid; that in addition thereto the defendants are indebted to your orator in the sum of $15,000 principal and $300 interest upon a promissory note executed and delivered to your orator by the defendant, Fageol Motors Co., dated October 19, 1931, bearing interest at the rate of 6 percent per annum, maturing on January 12, 1932; that no part of said principal or interest has been paid; that, furthermore, defendants are indebted to your orator upon a promissory note executed by the defendant, Fageol Motors Co., maturing on the 4th day of March 1932 in the principal sum of $54,459.77; that no part of said sum has been paid; that demand has been made by your orator of defendants for the payment of the first two sums hereinabove referred to, but payment thereof has been refused.

Seventh. That the defendants are indebted to your orator and other creditors for moneys borrowed and for merchandise purchased and delivered to them in a sum in excess of the sum of $935,000, of which said amount the sum of $375,000 is secured by a certain contract dated October 31, 1925, between the defendant Fageol Motors Co. and The Fageol Motors Co., a corporation, of Ohio; that the said $375,000 is evidenced by the 6½ percent sinking fund debenture bonds of the defendant Fageol Motors Co. dated February 1, 1928; that in addition to the foregoing indebtedness the said defendants have a contingent liability, the exact amount of which is unknown to your orator, upon conditional sale contracts covering the sale on the installment plan of trucks and busses, which contracts are unconditionally guaranteed by the said defendants, and have heretofore been sold, discounted, and/or hypothecated with banks and finance companies.

Eighth. That the defendants are at the present time without funds sufficient to meet their present obligations or their obligations due or shortly to mature, although if the assets of the companies can be liquidated in the usual and ordinary course of the defendants' business, and under proper management, their assets will be more than sufficient to cover all of their lawful obligations.

Ninth. That certain of the creditors of the defendants are pressing their claims for payment; that one of them has instituted suit against the defendants for a claim upward of $40,000, which said creditor has levied an attachment against the real estate and plant of the defendants located in the city of Oakland, county of Alameda, State of California; that other creditors have threatened to and will, unless otherwise restrained by this honorable court, file actions and levy attachments against the property and assets of the defendants; that any such further actions on the part of creditors will, as your orator believes, result in judgments, attachments, executions, and seizures by sheriffs and other like officers and forced sales of the property and assets of the defendants at less than the fair value thereof; and that, as a necessary consequence thereof, defendants will be compelled to cease the conduct of said business and their assets will be dissipated and sacrificed and there may not be realized an amount sufficient to pay the creditors of defendants in full, and that such action on the part of such creditors will cause great and irreparable loss and injury to the defendants and their creditors, including your orator.

Tenth. That the defendants are possessed of a large and varied stock of new and used trucks and busses, both completed and uncompleted, raw materials, and machinery, located at its factory in the city of Oakland, county of Alameda, State of California, and elsewhere; that this large stock of merchandise, parts, and materials if forced onto sale in bulk will necessarily be sacrificed for a small portion of its real value; and that a forced sale of the real property, plant, and equipment of the defendants would bring only a small fraction of the real value thereof, whereas if the business can be continued free from interruption and seizure under judgments, the said stock of merchandise, parts, and raw materials can be liquidated at its fair market value and the defendants enabled to discharge their obligations.

Eleventh. That if the defendants' assets are not taken into judicial custody, actions at law will be instituted by some of the creditors who are pressing for payment of their claims, and through such actions such creditors will obtain judgments and executions, and inequitable preference as against your orator and other creditors of the defendants will result. Likewise, unless the assets of the defendants are administered by a court of equity and all actions and proceedings of law, including executions, attachments, and other proceedings enjoined, your orator feels that the defendants will be subjected to a multiplicity of suits, which will result in an interruption of their business and a consequent serious dissipation of their assets.

Twelfth. That in order that the property of the defendants may be preserved for equitable distribution among those entitled thereto, your orator believes that this honorable court should intervene and appoint a receiver to take charge of all of the assets of the defendants, who shall conduct, manage, and administer the same under the power to be conferred upon him in the proposed decree herewith submitted.

Thirteenth. Your orator shows that the amount of the controversy in this action is in excess of $3,000, exclusive of interest and costs.

Fourteenth. That your orator has no plain, speedy, adequate, or any remedy in the ordinary course of law.

Inasmuch, therefore, as your orator has no plain, speedy, adequate, or any remedy at law, and can have relief only in equity, your orator files this bill of complaint on behalf of itself and other creditors of the defendant who may thereafter join herein and prays for equitable relief as follows:

1. That this honorable court will administer all the properties, assets and effects, rights, and business belonging to the defendant, and will adjudicate, enforce, adjust, and determine the rights, equities, and claims of all the creditors of the defendants, including the claim of your orator.

2. That this honorable court will forthwith appoint a receiver or receivers of all and singular the property of the defendants, of whatsoever nature, with full power to take into their possession, hold, and manage the same under the direction of this court, with such powers as this court may from time to time grant; to continue the business in his or their discretion; to bring suit for, collect, receive, and take into their possession all the property and assets of defendant, including books, records, vouchers, checks, moneys, real estate, and all other property, real, personal, and mixed; to institute, prosecute, become parties to, intervene in, compromise, or defend any actions at law or in equity or under any statute for the recovery, protection, and maintenance of any of the assets or properties of defendant as they may deem necessary or proper, including the institution and prosecution of any such ancillary proceedings as they may deem advisable; to settle, collect, compound, adjust, or make allowance upon any debts that may be due or owing to the defendant as they may deem proper; to pay any such claims or wages, or otherwise, as may have priority; and, in general, with all the usual powers of receivers in such cases.

3. That the officers, managers, employees, creditors, and stockholders of the defendant, and all other persons, firms, and corporations be required forthwith to transfer, convey, and deliver up to such receiver or receivers possession of all property of the defendant wheresoever situate.

4. That all persons, firms, and corporations be enjoined from instituting, commencing, prosecuting, or continuing the prosecution of any actions, suits, or proceedings at law or in equity or under any statute against defendant, or from levying or serving any attachments or executions or other processes upon the defendant or upon or against any of the property of the said defendant, save and except the filing of mechanic's or other statutory liens, and generally that all persons, firms, and corporations be enjoined from doing any act to interfere with said receivers in their possession of the property of defendant.

5. That a writ of injunction issue out of and under the seal of this honorable court or issue by one of your honors directing, enjoining, and restraining defendant and its officers, directors, agents, and employees and all other persons whatsoever from interfering with, transferring, selling, or disposing of any of the property of said defendant.

6. That this honorable court will grant a writ of subpoena under the seal of this honorable court, directed to defendant and commanding it on a date certain therein named, before this honorable court, to answer (but not under oath, answer by oath being expressly waived) all and any of premises and to stand by, perform, and abide by such orders and decrees as may be made by this honorable court.

7. That a decree appointing a receiver or receivers of the property of the defendant and granting the relief prayed for in this bill of complaint may be granted by this honorable court in the form herewith submitted.

8. That at such time as may be found just and proper the properties of the defendant may be ordered to be sold, in whole or in part, for cash or on credit, in such manner and upon such conditions as this court may deem just and equitable, and that any such decree of sale shall make proper and equitable provision for the preservation of all equities, rights, properties, claims, and liens of all creditors and shall provide for the sale of the property of the defendant subject to or free of liens and encumbrances, in whole or in part, as this court may direct, and that the proceeds of any such sale be distributed among those entitled thereto, as this honorable court shall adjudicate, or that the properties of the defendant, in whole or in part, may be returned to it; and that your orator may have such other and further relief in the premises as may be just and equitable, and that the defendant may be directed to make such bills of sale, assignments, transfers, and conveyances of any such property as may be directed to be sold by this court.

9. That such order shall be made by this honorable court, as to the service of this bill of complaint and of any order that may be made in this suit as may be deemed sufficient and proper by this court.

10. That your orator may have such other and further relief as may be just and proper.

And your orator will ever pray.

CHARACTER FINANCE CO. OF SANTA MONICA, A CALIFORNIA CORPORATION, PLAINTIFF, v. PRUDENTIAL HOLDING CO. OF LOS ANGELES, A NEVADA CORPORATION, DEFENDANT. IN EQUITY NO. 2984. BILL OF COMPLAINT

To the Honorable Judges of the United States District Court in and for the Northern District of California, Southern Division:

The complainant above named herein by its bill of complaint and on its own behalf and on behalf of all other stockholders of the defendant who may elect to come in and contribute to the expense of these proceedings, or who may hereafter join in the prosecution of this suit shows and submits to the court as follows:

I. That the complainant, Character Finance Co. of Santa Monica, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California and having its office and principal place of business in the city of Santa Monica, county of Los Angeles, in said State, and a citizen and resident of said State.

II. That the defendant, Prudential Holding Co. of Los Angeles, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Nevada, and a citizen of said State of Nevada, and a resident thereof, having its principal place of business in the city of Oakland, county of Alameda, State of California.

III. That the grounds upon which the jurisdiction of the court depends is the diversity of citizenship and the fact that the defendant has property in California within the jurisdiction of this court, and is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Nevada. The amount involved is in excess of $3,000. That this suit is brought for the appointment of a receiver, the determination of claims, the determination as to creditors and stockholders of the defendant corporation, and to obtain the assistance of this court in the preservation of the assets of the defendant corporation for the benefit of the creditors and stockholders of the said corporation.

IV. That at all times herein mentioned there was issued to your petitioner 6,400 shares of the capital stock of defendant corporation known as "class B preferred stock" and 3,200 shares of the common capital stock of said defendant corporation.

That your petitioner acquired the aforesaid shares of stock of said defendant corporation by reason of an agreement duly made and entered by and between your petitioner and said defendant on the 12th day of September 1929, wherein and whereby your petitioner did transfer to said defendant corporation all of its assets of whatsoever kind and character in exchange for the issuance to your petitioner by said defendant of the aforesaid shares of stock, and for the further consideration that said defendant agreed to assume all of the outstanding obligations of your petitioner existing at the said time; that the said assets transferred by petitioner to defendant by reason thereof consisted of personal and real property of the reasonable value of $96,000; that at the date of the said transfer your petitioner did have liabilities in the sum of approximately $15,000; that your petitioner has made demand upon said defendants to pay said obligations of your petitioner, in accordance with said agreement, but that said defendant has at all times refused, and now does refuse, to pay said obligations, except the sum of $10,000, and that there now remains owing and unpaid to divers and various creditors of your petitioner the sum of approximately $5,000, which said defendant refuses to pay, and your petitioner is informed and believes, and therefore alleges, that at the date hereof is unable to pay for the reasons herein-after set forth.

V. That your petitioner is informed and believes, and therefore alleges, the fact to be that the authorized capital stock of said defendant corporation is the sum of $5,000,000, and that at the date hereof there is outstanding and issued 88,938 shares of class B preferred stock of said corporation of the par value of $10 per share, and 288,128 shares of common no-par stock.

VI. That defendant is and was at all times herein mentioned engaged in the buying, selling, exchanging, and general dealing in real properties, improved and unimproved, office buildings, and store buildings, dwelling houses, ranch properties, apartment houses, and operating, maintaining, leasing dwelling houses, apartment houses, and business blocks of all kinds and description, and maintaining a general real-estate agency and broker's business, including the right to manage estates, to act as agent, and broker, for any person or corporation; to make and obtain loans on real estate, improved or unimproved, and to supervise, manage, and protect such property and loans, and all interests and claims affecting the same; to have the same insured against fire and other casualties; to investigate the credit, financial solvency, and sufficiency of borrowers, mortgagors, and sureties upon bonds, mortgages, and undertakings; to improve, manage, operate, sell, mortgage, lease, or otherwise dispose of any property, real or personal, and to take mortgages, deeds of trust, assignments of mortgages, and deeds of trust upon the same; and to operate and conduct a general finance and discount business.

VII. That defendant corporation is possessed of large assets and holds and owns properties throughout the State of California.

VIII. That your petitioner is informed and believes and therefore alleges the fact to be that, in addition to the foregoing, said defendant corporation was organized and is organized for the purpose of acquiring the capital stock, both preferred and common, and assets in numerous and divers finance companies, each of which finance companies was respectively organized with the powers and purposes as set forth specifically in the preceding paragraph.

IX. That said defendant corporation has from time to time within the last several years past acquired numerous and divers finance and mortgage companies and thrift banks in various parts of the State of California and elsewhere, and has assumed the obligations of each and every one of the said finance and mortgage companies and thrift banks so taken over by said defendant, and that at the date hereof said defendant owns and operates said numerous and divers finance and mortgage companies and thrift banks and is operating each of said companies.

X. That plaintiff is informed and believes and therefore alleges that the defendant is indebted to various creditors in the aggregate sum of approximately $1,100,000.

XI. That plaintiff is informed and believes and therefore alleges that defendant is without sufficient funds to meet its present obligations, a majority of which are past due, although defendant has assets sufficient to cover its said obligations and a substantial surplus, if said assets can be liquidated, but not through forced attachment, execution, foreclosure, or bankruptcy sale.

XII. Plaintiff is informed and believes and therefore alleges that defendant is in possession of assets of a fair and reasonable value of approximately $1,150,000 consisting of real and personal property and accounts receivable.

XIII. Plaintiff is informed and believes and therefore alleges that various creditors of the defendant are pressing their claims against it and that one creditor has commenced a suit and levied attachment proceedings against the defendant, and that unless a receiver is appointed, further suits will be commenced against the defendant, and that attachments and executions will be levied against the property of the defendant, and that such suits will result in forced sales of the assets and property of the defendant, which forced sales would result in hardship and damage to the creditors, the plaintiff, and other creditors and stockholders of the defendant.

XIV. Plaintiff is informed and believes and therefore alleges that if sales of the assets or some part thereof were forced at the present time it would result in a severe and irreparable loss to the plaintiff, creditors, and other shareholders of defendant, as well as to defendant, prevent the orderly liquidation of the outstanding loans of the defendant and the orderly disposition of the real and personal property belonging to said defendant, and the fair value of such assets would not be realized, but if said assets can be preserved against a forced sale and can be withheld from sale until such time as market conditions improve a sufficient amount of money will be realized to pay all the debts of the defendant in full with assets remaining over which would enure to the benefit of plaintiff and the other shareholders of said defendant.

Plaintiff is informed and believes and therefore alleges that there are numerous liens against the assets of defendant by way of mortgages and deeds of trust and unless a receiver is appointed a great number of actions will be commenced against defendant which litigation will be long continued and expensive and will inevitably result in greatly depreciating the value of defendant's assets, to the great detriment of all of its creditors and shareholders.

XV. That plaintiff is informed and believes and therefore alleges that if defendant's assets are not taken into judicial custody in equitable preferences against your petitioner and other stockholders and creditors of the defendant will result, and unless the assets of the defendant are administered upon in a court of equity and all acts or proceedings at law, including executions, attachments, and other proceedings enjoined, plaintiff feels that the defendant corporation will be subject to a multiplicity of litigation which will result in an interruption of its business, with consequent serious dissipation of its assets.

XVI. That your petitioner is informed and believes and therefore alleges that through the mismanagement of the board of directors of defendant and its officers that certain mortgages and deeds of trust securing certain loans have been allowed to be improperly foreclosed, with the result that the mortgagors and lenders of the said loans secured by said mortgages and deeds of trust against the properties and assets of said defendant have instituted and are about to institute suits for deficiency judgments against said corporation. That one of said suits has been brought by the First National Bank of Bakersfield, Kern County, State of California, in the sum of approximately $60,000, against said corporation, which suit is now pending against said corporation, and by reason thereof certain properties and assets of said defendant are now under attachment and are in great danger of being sold under execution sale to satisfy this judgment and to satisfy any judgments or attachments which might subsequently in the same manner be levied, which sales, as hereinabove set forth, would result in a severe and irreparable loss to the plaintiff and to other creditors and stockholders of the defendant as well as to the defendant.

XVII. That your petitioner is further informed and believes and therefore alleges the fact to be that if the affairs of said defendant were properly managed that said foreclosures and deficiency suit would not have been brought nor would other suits be threatened, which might result in a severe and irreparable loss to plaintiff and to other stockholders of defendant, as aforesaid.

XIX. That your petitioner is informed and believes and therefore alleges the fact to be that the defendant owned a large equity in certain real property located in the county of Santa Clara, State of California, which property is subject to a deed of trust, and that the beneficiaries thereunder have begun foreclosure proceedings. That your petitioner is further informed and believes and therefore alleges that the directors and officers of said defendant have taken no step to prevent said foreclosure or to refinance said properties; that if the beneficiaries under said deed of trust are allowed to foreclose said property it will cause a severe and irreparable loss to plaintiff and to stockholders of defendant corporation and to defendant.

XX. That plaintiff is informed and believes and therefore alleges that defendant, through its board of directors and president, has not paid the taxes which have accrued and are maturing against the various and divers real properties belonging to said defendant and that by reason thereof there is great danger that said properties subject to said taxes will be lost to said plaintiff and other stockholders of defendant and defendant.

XXI. That your petitioner is further informed and believes and therefore alleges the fact to be that without the proper authority or legal authority the president of said corporation has transferred certain of the assets, namely, certain accounts receivable to various parties, for the purpose of handling and adjusting; that in this manner these accounts receivable have passed beyond the direct control of the said defendant, which in effect, as plaintiff is informed and believes and, therefore alleges, has allowed a liquidating agent to take control of said assets.

XXII. That plaintiff and other stockholders have often made demand of the directors, and particularly of F. W. Beck, president of the corporation, and C. M. Hawkins, a director of said corporation, who are actively in charge of the affairs and conduct of said corporation, for information pertaining to the affairs of said defendant, but that said F. W. Beck and C. M. Hawkins have refused at all times to give or divulge any information pertaining to the affairs of said corporation to your petitioner.

XXIII. That plaintiff is informed and believes and therefore alleges the fact to be that by reason of the mismanagement, carelessness, and negligence of the directors and officers of said defendant corporation, said defendant corporation has been allowed to become involved financially in the manner as hereinabove set forth, and that said officers and directors of said defendant will take no steps or actions to economize or to properly conduct the said business, taking into consideration its present circumstances; that plaintiff is unable to obtain any relief from the directors of the defendant corporation now in office, and if demand were made upon them for such relief from the said acts and mismanagement herein mentioned, said relief would not be granted. That demand has been made upon the directors of said corporation as to a statement of their condition by petitioner herein but that said directors have at all times refused to give to petitioner herein any information pertaining to the affairs of said defendant.

XXIV. That inasmuch as plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law and can only have relief in equity, plaintiff files this bill of complaint on behalf of itself and other stockholders and creditors of defendant corporation who may hereafter join herein for judgment.

XXV. That it will be necessary for any receiver appointed herein to issue receiver's certificates for the payment of current obligations of the defendant corporation, and plaintiff prays for equitable relief pending the final determination of this action, as follows:

1. That this honorable court will forthwith appoint a receiver of all and singular the property and assets of every nature whatsoever situated, held, owned, or controlled by the defendant corporation with full power and authority to take into his possession, hold, manage, and conduct the business now being conducted by defendant corporation, with such powers as this honorable court may from time to time grant, including the power to borrow money on receiver's certificates or otherwise for that purpose to incur such expense as may be necessary or advisable in connection therewith; to purchase for cash or credit such merchandise, supplies, materials, or other property as may be necessary or advisable in connection with the administration of the assets of the defendant; to sell in the regular course or conduct of the business, or otherwise, all or any part of the assets and merchandise of the defendant; to bring suit for, collect, and receive and take to his possession all the property and assets, real or personal, goods, chattels, credits, moneys, rights, claims and effects, books, papers, securities, and all other property and assets, whatsoever and wheresoever situated, of the defendant; to institute, prosecute, become party to, intervene in, compromise, or defend suits and actions at law or in equity or otherwise, either for the recovery or the protection or maintenance of any of the property and assets of the defendant as he may deem necessary or proper, including the institution and prosecution of such ancillary proceedings as said receiver may deem advisable, and including any other suits or actions or proceedings at law or in equity or otherwise in which the defendant may have any interest as plaintiff, defendant, or otherwise, and including the power to continue any such pending suits; defend or otherwise dispose of any such proceedings, suits, or actions; to settle at compound or make allowance on any or all debts that may now or hereafter be due or owing to the defendant as he may deem advisable or proper, subject to the further authorization of this honorable court; to pay any claims for wages, taxes, interest, or other debts that may be entitled to priority and with the other usual powers of receivers in such cases; and that the officers, managers, superintendents, agents, and employees of the defendant be required forthwith to deliver up to said receiver possession of all or every part of the properties of the defendant, wherever situated, including the several books, vouchers, and papers in any way relating to the business of the defendant.

2. That this honorable court will administer all and singular the property rights and business belonging to the defendant and adjudicate and adjust any decree and enforce the several and respective liens and priorities existing thereon and the rights, liens, equities, and claims of all creditors of the defendant as the same may be finally ascertained and decreed by this court.

3. That all creditors, stockholders, and other persons be enjoined from instituting or prosecuting any actions, suits, or proceedings at law or in equity or under any statute against the defendant, and from levying any attachments, executions, or other processes upon or against any of the properties of the defendant or from taking or attempting to take into their possession the property or any part of the property of the defendant.

4. That all creditors of the defendant and all persons interested in the defendant be permitted to intervene and become parties to this suit if and as permitted and authorized to do by this honorable court.

5. That an order be made herein enjoining and restraining the defendant corporation and the officers, directors, agents, and employees of the defendant corporation from interfering with, transferring, selling, or disposing of any of the property or income of the defendant corporation, or from taking possession of or levying upon or attempting to sell or dispose of in any manner any part of the property of the defendant corporation.

6. That at such time as may be found just and proper the properties of the defendant may be ordered to be sold, in whole or in part, in such manner, upon such terms and conditions as this honorable court shall deem just and equitable, and that any such order of sale shall make suitable provision for the preservation of all equities, rights, priorities, claims, and liens of the creditors of the defendant corporation and shall provide for the sale of the property of the defendant, subject to or free from all and any liens and incumbrances in whole or in part, and in such manner and upon such terms as this honorable court may direct, and that the proceeds of any such sale be distributed among those entitled thereto as this honorable court shall adjudicate, or that the properties of the defendant corporation may be returned to it and that claimant corporation may have such other further relief in the premises as to this honorable court may seem proper and as may be necessary fully to enforce and protect the rights and equities of complainant and of all the creditors of defendant corporation and that in case of any sale herein of the property of the defendant corporation it may be directed to make, execute, and deliver to the accepted purchaser or purchasers upon any such sales such releases, bill of sale, and conveyances as may be necessary or proper to vest in such purchaser or purchasers the title to all such several properties.

7. That such order shall be made by this honorable court as to the services of this bill of complaint and of any order that may be made in this suit as may be deemed sufficient and proper to this honorable court.

8. That plaintiff may have such other and further relief in the premises as the nature and circumstances of this case may require and as to this honorable court may seem just and proper.

9. That the defendant corporation be required, pursuant to the rules and practice of this court, to answer all and singular the matters hereinbefore stated but not under oath, an answer under oath being expressly waived, and further to perform and abide by such order, direction, and decree herein as to the court shall seem meet.

May it please the court to grant unto your complainant a writ of subpoena to be issued out of and under the seal of this court and directed to the defendant requiring it to appear on a certain day before the court and make answer as aforesaid.

IN THE MATTER OF THE APPLICATION OF CATHERINE ARMSTRONG, REALTY MORTGAGE INSURANCE CO., A CALIFORNIA CORPORATION, AND PARKER LINTON FOR THE ADJUDICATION OF PRUDENTIAL HOLDING CO. OF LOS ANGELES, A NEVADA CORPORATION, ALLEGED BANKRUPT. NO. — IN BANKRUPTCY. PETITION IN INVOLUNTARY BANKRUPTCY

To the Honorable Judges of the United States District Court in and for the Northern District of California:

The petition of Catherine Armstrong, Realty Mortgage Insurance Co., a California corporation, and Parker Linton, respectfully represents:

I. That Prudential Holding Co. of Los Angeles is a corporation duly organized under the laws of the State of Nevada and has, for the greater portion of the 6 months next preceding the date of the filing of this petition, had its principal place of business at Oakland, county of Alameda, and State of California, in the Northern District of California, and owes debts to the amount of $1,000 and more, and is a business corporation, and is not a municipal railroad, insurance, or banking corporation, and is insolvent, and is not a wage earner nor a person engaged in farming or tillage of the soil.

II. That your petitioners are creditors of the said Prudential Holding Co. of Los Angeles, a Nevada corporation, having provable claims amounting in the aggregate in excess of securities held by them to the sum of $500 and more.

III. That the nature and amount of your petitioners' claims are as follows:

The claim of Catherine Armstrong is based upon a promissory note dated September 21, 1930, made, executed, and delivered to the petitioner herein by the alleged bankrupt for value received in the sum of $2,975. That said note was due on demand. That default has been made in the payment of said promissory note and demand made upon the alleged bankrupt for payment. That said alleged bankrupt failed, neglected, and refused to pay said amount due on said note, or any part thereof.

The claim of Realty Mortgage Insurance Co. is based upon a promissory note dated April 1, 1931, made, executed, and delivered to the petitioner herein by the alleged bankrupt for value received in the sum of $7,500. That said promissory note was due 2 years from date.

The claim of Parker Linton is an account stated within 2 years last past between the alleged bankrupt and the petitioner herein in the sum of $2,500. Said sum is agreed to be due, owing and payable from the alleged bankrupt to the petitioner herein. That at the time said account was stated the alleged bankrupt promised to pay the amount thereof to the petitioner herein. The alleged bankrupt has failed, neglected, and refused and does now fail, neglect, and refuse to pay said amount, or any part thereof, and that neither said amount, nor any part thereof, has been paid.

IV. Your petitioners further represent that the said Prudential Holding Co. of Los Angeles did within 4 months next preceding the date of the filing of this petition commit an act of bankruptcy, in that heretofore, to wit, on or about the 15th day of August 1931, while insolvent, a receiver in equity, G. H. Gilbert, was appointed by a judge of the United States District Court in and for the Northern District of California, Southern Division, in that certain case entitled "Character Finance Co. of Santa Monica, a California corporation, plaintiff, v. Prudential Holding Co. of Los Angeles, a Nevada corporation, defendant", in Equity No. 2934-L; that said receiver was put in charge of the alleged bankrupt's property; that said receiver has duly qualified by filing his bond in the penal sum of $50,000 and is now in possession of the alleged bankrupt's property.

Wherefore your petitioners pray that service of this petition, with subpoena, may be made upon the alleged bankrupt, as provided in the acts of Congress relating to bankrupts, and that the said alleged bankrupt may be adjudged by this court to be a bankrupt within the purview of said acts.

CORPORATION, ALLEGED BANKRUPT. NO. 21022-S IN BANKRUPTCY

Petition for order appointing attorneys for the receiver

To Hon. Harold Louderback, judge of the above-entitled court:

Now comes G. H. Gilbert, of the city and county of San Francisco, State and Northern District of California, and respectfully shows and alleges:

That on the 30th day of September 1931, by an order duly made and entered in the above-entitled proceedings, your petitioner was appointed receiver, prior to adjudication, of the estate and effects of the above-named bankrupt, and has duly qualified as such receiver; that your petitioner as such receiver has been duly authorized to take and hold possession of the assets of said alleged bankrupt until the appointment and qualification of a trustee herein, and with further authority to collect the accounts receivable and conduct the business of said bankrupt.

That your petitioner is informed and verily believes, and on that ground alleges, that the assets of said bankrupt approximate the sum of $1,000,000 and are situated in various portions of the State of California.

That ancillary proceedings are necessary to be taken in the Southern District of California, and that it will be necessary to examine the officers of said bankrupt corporation and other witnesses relative to the acts, conduct, and property of said bankrupt for the purpose of ascertaining the extent and whereabouts of such property subject to administration by your petitioner as such receiver.

That various suits are pending against the above-named bankrupt and it will be necessary for your receiver to appear in such suits for the protection of the estate herein; that various proceedings in foreclosure and sale under deeds of trust covering property of said bankrupt are threatened and that it will be necessary to apply both to this court and to other courts having ancillary jurisdiction for restraining orders in order to protect the interests of the general unsecured creditors of the estate of said bankrupt, and that it will be necessary to commence plenary and summary proceedings for the purpose of collecting the assets of said bankrupt estate and to conserve and protect the same until the election and qualification of a trustee herein; that in aid of his administration of said bankrupt estate your petitioner will require the services and advice of counsel relative to necessary legal proceedings to be taken by him to collect and conserve and protect the assets of said bankrupt estate and to conduct examinations of witnesses as aforesaid; your petitioner alleges that Messrs. Martin J. Dinkelspiel, Ernest J. Torregano, Charles M. Stark, and A. B. Kreft, attorneys at law, duly licensed and admitted to practice in the above-entitled court, are proper and competent attorneys to be retained by your petitioner, with the approval of this court, in aid of his administration of said bankrupt estate; and that said attorneys, and each of them, do not represent adverse interests to the general creditors, and that said attorneys are familiar and experienced with the laws in reference to the administration of bankrupt estates and the National Bankruptcy Act, and that such services which will be rendered by said attorneys to your petitioner will be beneficial to the general creditors of said bankrupt estate, and the appointment of such attorneys is sought for the reason of a large number of matters requiring services of counsel, and the appointment of such counsel will enable your petitioner to subdivide among them the various matters required to be attended to and the legal proceedings required to be instituted.

Wherefore your petitioner prays that an order be made and entered herein appointing as your petitioner's attorneys the said Martin J. Dinkelspiel, Ernest J. Torregano, Charles M. Stark, and A. B. Kreft in aid of his administration of said bankrupt estate in the above-entitled court and in such ancillary proceedings as may be brought by your petitioner. Your petitioner has annexed hereto the affidavit of said attorneys, as required by the general orders of the United States Supreme Court, and your petitioner prays that the court make such further and other order as may be just and proper in the premises.

RECESS

Mr. ASHURST. I move that the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment take a recess until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Arizona.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 38 minutes p.m.) the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment took a recess until tomorrow, Thursday, May 18, 1933, at 10 o'clock a.m.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The Senate, pursuant to the order for a recess entered yesterday, resumed legislative session.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—PUBLIC-WORKS PROGRAM FOR RELIEF OF UNEMPLOYMENT (H.DOC. NO. 37)

During the impeachment proceedings, on motion of Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas, and by unanimous consent, the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment took a recess in order to receive, as in legislative session, a message in writing from the President of the United States, which was communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

On request of Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas, the Presiding Officer (Mr. HASTINGS in the chair) laid before the Senate the message from the President of the United States, which was read, referred to the Committee on Finance, and ordered to be printed, as follows:

To the Congress:

Before the special session of the Congress adjourns, I recommend two further steps in our national campaign to put people to work.

My first request is that the Congress provide for the machinery necessary for a great cooperative movement throughout all industry in order to obtain wide reemployment, to shorten the working week, to pay a decent wage for the shorter week, and to prevent unfair competition and disastrous overproduction.

LXXVII—225

Employers cannot do this singly or even in organized groups, because such action increases costs and thus permits cutthroat underselling by selfish competitors unwilling to join in such a public-spirited endeavor.

One of the great restrictions upon such cooperative efforts up to this time has been our antitrust laws. They were properly designed as the means to cure the great evils of monopolistic price fixing. They should certainly be retained as a permanent assurance that the old evils of unfair competition shall never return. But the public interest will be served if, with the authority and under the guidance of Government, private industries are permitted to make agreements and codes insuring fair competition. However, it is necessary, if we thus limit the operation of antitrust laws to their original purpose, to provide a rigorous licensing power in order to meet rare cases of noncooperation and abuse. Such a safeguard is indispensable.

II

The other proposal gives the Executive full power to start a large program of direct employment. A careful survey convinces me that approximately $3,300,000,000 can be invested in useful and necessary public construction, and at the same time put the largest possible number of people to work.

Provision should be made to permit States, counties, and municipalities to undertake useful public works, subject, however, to the most effective possible means of eliminating favoritism and wasteful expenditures on unwarranted and uneconomic projects.

We must, by prompt and vigorous action, override unnecessary obstructions which in the past have delayed the starting of public-works programs. This can be accomplished by simple and direct procedure.

In carrying out this program it is imperative that the credit of the United States Government be protected and preserved. This means that at the same time we are making these vast emergency expenditures there must be provided sufficient revenue to pay interest and amortization on the cost, and that the revenue so provided must be adequate and certain rather than inadequate and speculative.

Careful estimates indicate that at least $220,000,000 of additional revenue will be required to service the contemplated borrowings of the Government. This will of necessity involve some form or forms of new taxation. A number of suggestions have been made as to the nature of these taxes. I do not make a specific recommendation at this time, but I hope that the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives will make a careful study of revenue plans and be prepared by the beginning of the coming week to propose the taxes which they judge to be best adapted to meet the present need and which will at the same time be least burdensome to our people. At the end of that time, if no decision has been reached, or if the means proposed do not seem to be sufficiently adequate or certain, it is my intention to transmit to the Congress my own recommendations in the matter.

The taxes to be imposed are for the purpose of providing reemployment for our citizens. Provision should be made for their reduction or elimination—

First. As fast as increasing revenues from improving business become available to replace them.

Second. Whenever the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, now pending before the States, shall have been ratified and the repeal of the Volstead Act effected. The prohibition revenue laws would then automatically go into effect and yield enough wholly to eliminate these temporary reemployment taxes.

Finally, I stress the fact that all of these proposals are based on the gravity of the emergency, and that therefore it is urgently necessary immediately to initiate a reemployment campaign if we are to avoid further hardships, to sustain business improvement, and to pass on to better things.

For this reason I urge prompt action on this legislation.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, May 17, 1933.

Mr. WAGNER. As in legislative session, I ask unanimous consent to introduce a bill to carry out the recommendations contained in the message of the President just read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, as in legislative session, the bill will be received and appropriately referred.

The bill (S. 1712) to encourage national industrial recovery, to foster fair competition, and to provide for the construction of certain useful public works, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that any amendments desired to be offered on the subject matter of the bill may also be submitted and printed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill and any proposed amendments thereto will be printed and referred to the Committee on Finance.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 5081) to provide for the common defense; to aid interstate commerce by navigation; to provide flood control; to promote the general welfare by creating the Tennessee Valley Authority; to operate the Muscle Shoals properties; and to encourage agricultural, industrial, and economic development.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Maryland, which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

Joint Resolution 5

A joint resolution requesting the Congress of the United States to repeal the tax on checks

Whereas the present national administration is meeting with remarkable success in restoring public confidence in our banking system and in preventing the hoarding of currency; and

Whereas one of the contributory causes of this hoarding was the tax of 2 cents on each check passing through the clearing houses and banks; and

Whereas the repeal of this tax would aid greatly in the resumption of normal banking transactions by the use of checks and thereby decrease the amount of currency withheld from circulation: Therefore be it

Resolved by the General Assembly of Maryland, That the Congress of the United States be, and it is hereby, urgently requested to repeal as speedily as possible the 2-cent tax on checks; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state of Maryland be, and he is hereby, requested to send a copy of this resolution to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, to the President of the Senate, and to all the Representatives from Maryland in the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States Congress.

Whereas the United States Naval Hospital and the United States Marine Hospital in the city of Chelsea have for many years rendered invaluable service in the care and treatment of veterans and employees of the Federal Government, and are equipped with excellent medical and surgical facilities and apparatus and skilled personnel; and

Whereas said hospitals have established a notable record for efficient and humanitarian work in this section of the United States, and have made an indelible impression upon the citizens of our Commonwealth for the admirable service rendered during a long period of years: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the senate respectfully petitions the President of the United States, in the interests of the public health and convenience, to continue these hospitals as necessary institutions of our Federal Government in the performance of the efficient and humanitarian functions for which they are especially adapted and fitted because of location, equipment, and personnel, as clearly demonstrated by their long record of public service; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be forwarded forthwith by the secretary of the Commonwealth to the President of the United States, to the presiding officers of both branches of Congress, and to the Members thereof representing this Commonwealth.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following memorial of the Legislature of the State of Florida, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

House Memorial 3

A memorial to the Congress of the United States requesting the passage of House Resolution 3083

Whereas a large percentage of the municipalities and other taxing districts within the State of Florida are hopelessly insolvent, due to the amount of bonds issued by said municipalities and other taxing districts within the State of Florida; and

Whereas said municipalities and other taxing districts are without sufficient sources of revenue to pay off and discharge the bonded indebtedness owing by the respective municipalities and other taxing districts; and if it were undertaken to levy a sufficient tax against the properties located within said respective municipalities and taxing districts, and enforce the collection of same, it would amount to a confiscation of the properties located within said municipalities or other taxing districts: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Legislature of the State of Florida, That the Congress of the United States of America is hereby respectfully petitioned and requested to pass House Resolution No. 3083, introduced in the House of Representatives on March 11, 1933, by the Honorable J. MARK WILCOX, and a companion measure introduced

He also laid before the Senate a petition of sundry citizens of New Orleans, La., praying for the passage of legislation establishing a 30-hour workweek of not more than 6 hours per day, with a flexible provision permitting the employment of a worker for not more than 40 hours per week or 8 hours per day during a period not to exceed 10 weeks in a year in cases of extraordinary need, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted by the Hoboken National Memorial Association, of Hoboken, N.J. He also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted by Vincent B. Costello Post, No. 15, the American Legion, department of the District of Columbia, favoring a recess only rather than an adjournment of Congress after the conclusion of pending business "because of the serious probability that during the period from June to next January there will be a real need and demand from the country for the repeal, modification, or possible extension of the authority of the President of the United States, and in such event it is important that the Congress be able to take necessary action immediately and independently of the wishes or views of the Chief Executive should he fail to call another special session", which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana presented a petition of sundry citizens of the State of California, praying that Congress restore to service-connected disabled veterans their former benefits, rights, privileges, ratings, schedules, compensation, presumptions, and pensions, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

REGULATION OF BANKING

Mr. BULKLEY. Mr. President, I ask for a vote on my motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1631, the Glass banking bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas in the chair). The question is on the motion of the Senator from Ohio that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1631.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, when the motion was made last evening I objected to the consideration of the bill upon the theory that I desired, and many Members of the Senate desired, further time in which to study the provisions of the Glass bill. I also made the observation that in my opinion expedition would be made in the trial of the impeachment case if our sessions were continued, and we kept that subject matter constantly before the attention of the Senate; not only that but in the interest of economy.

When the Senator from Ohio made his motion after my statement, at the suggestion of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] it was decided that the matter should go over until today, in order that I might have an opportunity to confer with the Senator from Virginia, the author of the proposal. I had a conference with the Senator from Virginia today. I suggested to him that in my opinion we should go along and finish the trial. He expressed a desire to get rid of his bill, and said that he did not want it delayed too long a time. I then suggested that we devote the remainder of this week to the trial, and stated that in my opinion if that were done we probably could conclude the trial between now and Saturday.

He seemed to appreciate that suggestion, and we had this understanding—I am sorry he is not here, but I want to tell the Senator from Ohio what the understanding is. I said that I should have no objection if he insisted on making his bill the unfinished business today, because I knew that he had the votes by which it could be done, with the understanding that we should go forward with the trial without taking up the bank bill this week. He agreed to that, but made the statement that if there should be any break or pause in the trial of the impeachment case, he might come in with his bill.

I will state to the able Senator from Ohio that I want that understanding to go into the Record in the absence of the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. BULKLEY. Mr. President, I am sure the Senator from Virginia is very anxious to get the status of unfinished business for the Glass banking bill. Whatever assurance he has given the Senator from Oregon with respect to pressing the bill will, of course, be carried out. I do not know exactly what the Senator from Virginia has said from his own statement. I of course accept what the Senator from Oregon relates as to his conversation.

Mr. McNARY. I am sure there is no difference of opinion between us. I regret the Senator's absence, but I am sure he will confirm that understanding, namely, that if the status of unfinished business is given to this bill there will be no effort to take it up pending the trial of the impeachment proceeding unless there should be a pause or an interruption in the impeachment trial.

Mr. BULKLEY. Certainly the Senator from Virginia has not said anything to me that is not consistent with that.

Mr. McNARY. Very well. I am sure that is the understanding, and for that reason I shall not oppose the motion of the Senator from Ohio.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Ohio.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill (S. 1631) to provide for the safer and more effective use of the assets of Federal Reserve banks and of national banking associations, to regulate inter-bank control, to prevent the undue diversion of funds into speculative operations, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency with amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio request that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside?

Mr. BULKLEY. I make that request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, that will be done.

ASSISTANT CLERK TO THE COMMITTEE ON PATENTS

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate today reported unanimously a resolution authorizing the appointment of an assistant clerk to the Committee on Patents. I ask that it may be considered at this time.

Mr. McNARY. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a resolution, which will be read.

The Chief Clerk read Senate Resolution 63, submitted by Mr. WAGNER on April 28, 1933, and it was considered by the Senate and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Patents hereby is authorized to employ an assistant clerk to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate at the rate of $2,400 per annum during the Seventy-third Congress.

SALARY SCHEDULES OF BANKS, PUBLIC UTILITIES, ETC.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, yesterday I called up Senate Resolution 75. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY] at that time objected to its immediate consideration. May I ask the courteous Senator whether at this time he has any objection to the consideration of the resolution?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, personally I have no objection, but I am sorry the Senator did not earlier in the day make his request, when there was a larger number of Senators present. I think he had better let the matter go now until tomorrow, and I suggest that the first thing tomorrow he make his request, because I am not able now, because of the absence of many Senators, to consent.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, I desire to give notice that at the appropriate time, if further objection is made to the consideration of the resolution, it is my intention to move that the resolution be taken up by the Senate.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

and the Dominion of Canada for the completion of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence deep waterway, signed on July 18, 1932, as first in order on the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The treaty will be passed over.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Charles Wyzanski, Jr., of Massachusetts, to be Solicitor of Labor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

That completes the calendar.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I move that the Senate resume the consideration of legislative business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate resumed legislative session.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE CHARLES HILLYER BRAND, OF GEORGIA

Mr. GEORGE. I send to the desk resolutions which I ask to have read and immediately considered.

The resolutions (S.Res. 81) were read, considered by unanimous consent, and unanimously agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That a committee of two Senators be appointed by the Vice President to join the committee appointed on the part of the House of Representatives to attend the funeral of the deceased Representative.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the second resolution, the Chair announces the appointment of the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] and the junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] as members of the committee on the part of the Senate.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased Representative I move that the Senate do now take a recess until the conclusion of the session of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment on tomorrow.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 50 minutes p.m.), the Senate took a recess until the conclusion of the proceedings of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment on tomorrow, Thursday, May 18, 1933, the hour of meeting of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment being 10 o'clock a.m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WEDNESDAY, MAY 17, 1933

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Our Heavenly Father, Thou who art crowned with glory and dominion, with infinite love and compassion toward all men and nations, Thou art our God. At Thy feet we lift our hearts and pray for that day for which the prophets, the apostles, and the martyrs labored and died, and for which we long and wait. O sacred moment, O hallowed spot! Lord God of hosts, the heart of the world has been made a common, a crimsoned, and a bloody roadway for man's inhumanity to man. O it must not murder, it must not rob, it must not leave in misery any of Thy children of whatever land or race. Hear us for its redemption from the barbarities and the cruelties of warfare. Awaken the whole earth from its nightmare of wrath and hate and from its threatened quicksand of destruction and ruin. Be Thou, Almighty God, a bountiful Providence to our President as he seeks to hold the gates, and put into the skies of all lands the star of hope and the bow of promise. O breath of the Most High, breathe upon him and our country. Reign, reign, Thou art the King of Kings and the Lord of Lords, and unto Thee be eternal praises. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the Committee of Conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 5081) entitled "An act to provide for the common defense; to aid interstate commerce by navigation; to provide flood control; to promote the general welfare by creating the Tennessee Valley Authority; to operate the Muscle Shoals properties; and to encourage agricultural, industrial, and economic development."

The message also announced that the Senate disagrees to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 753) entitled "An act to confer the degree of bachelor of science upon graduates of the Naval Academy", requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. TRAMMELL, Mr. RUSSELL, and Mr. HALE to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

MUSCLE SHOALS

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 5081) to provide for the common defense; to aid interstate commerce by navigation; to provide flood control; to promote the general welfare by creating the Tennessee Valley Authority; to operate the Muscle Shoals properties; and to encourage agricultural, industrial, and economic development, and ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Carolina asks unanimous consent that the statement of the managers be read in lieu of the report. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 5081) to provide for the common defense; to aid interstate commerce by navigation; to provide flood control; to promote the general welfare by creating the Tennessee Valley Authority; to operate the Muscle Shoals properties; and to encourage agricultural, industrial, and economic development, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by the Senate insert the following:

"That for the purpose of maintaining and operating the properties now owned by the United States in the vicinity of Muscle Shoals, Ala., in the interest of the national defense and for agricultural and industrial development, and to improve navigation in the Tennessee River and to control the destructive flood waters in the Tennessee River and Mississippi River Basins, there is hereby created a body corporate by the name of the 'Tennessee Valley Authority' (hereinafter referred to as the 'Corporation'). The board of directors first appointed shall be deemed the incorporators, and the incorporation shall be held to have been effected from the date of the first meeting of the board. This act may be cited as the 'Tennessee Valley Authority Act of 1933.'

"Sec. 2. (a) The board of directors of the Corporation (hereinafter referred to as the 'board') shall be composed of three members, to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. In appointing the members of the board, the President shall designate the chairman. All other officials, agents, and employees shall be designated and selected by the board.

"(b) The terms of office of the members first taking office after the approval of this act shall expire as designated by the President at the time of nomination, 1 at the end of the third year, 1 at the end of the sixth year, and 1 at the end of the ninth year, after the date of approval of this act. A successor to a member of the board shall be appointed in the same manner as the original members and shall have a term of office expiring 9 years from the date of the expiration of the term for which his predecessor was appointed.

"(c) Any member appointed to fill a vacancy in the board occurring prior to the expiration of the term for which his predecessor was appointed shall be appointed for the remainder of such term.

"(d) Vacancies in the board so long as there shall be 2 members in office shall not impair the powers of the board to execute the functions of the Corporation, and 2 of the members in office shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of the business of the board.

"(e) Each of the members of the board shall be a citizen of the United States, and shall receive a salary at the rate of $10,000 a year, to be paid by the Corporation as current expenses. Each member of the board, in addition to his salary, shall be permitted to occupy as his residence one of the dwelling houses owned by the Government in the vicinity of Muscle Shoals, Ala., the same to be designated by the President of the United States. Members of the board shall be reimbursed by the Corporation for actual expenses (including traveling and subsistence expenses) incurred by them in the performance of the duties vested in the board by this act. No member of said board shall, during his continuance in office, be engaged in any other business, but each member shall devote himself to the work of the Corporation.

"(f) No director shall have financial interest in any public-utility corporation engaged in the business of distributing and selling power to the public nor in any corporation engaged in the manufacture, selling, or distribution of fixed nitrogen or fertilizer, or any ingredients thereof, nor shall any member have any interest in any business that may be adversely affected by the success of the Corporation as a producer of concentrated fertilizers or as a producer of electric power.

"(g) The board shall direct the exercise of all the powers of the Corporation.

"(h) All members of the board shall be persons who profess a belief in the feasibility and wisdom of this act.

"Sec. 3. Any appointee of the board may be removed in the discretion of the board. No regular officer or employee of the Corporation shall receive a salary in excess of that received by the members of the board.

"All contracts to which the Corporation is a party and which require the employment of laborers and mechanics in the construction, alteration, maintenance, or repair of buildings, dams, locks, or other projects shall contain a provision that not less than the prevailing rate of wages for work of a similar nature prevailing in the vicinity shall be paid to such laborers or mechanics.

"In the event any dispute arises as to what are the prevailing rates of wages, the question shall be referred to the Secretary of Labor for determination, and his decision shall be final. In the determination of such prevailing rate or rates, due regard shall be given to those rates which have been secured through collective agreement by representatives of employers and employees.

"Where such work as is described in the two preceding paragraphs is done directly by the Corporation the prevailing rate of wages shall be paid in the same manner as though such work had been let by contract.

"Insofar as applicable the benefits of the act entitled 'An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes', approved September 7, 1916, as amended, shall extend to persons given employment under the provisions of this act.

"(f) May purchase or lease and hold such real and personal property as it deems necessary or convenient in the transaction of its business, and may dispose of any such personal property held by it.

"The board shall select a treasurer and as many assistant treasurers as it deems proper, which treasurer and assistant treasurers shall give such bonds for the safe keeping of the securities and moneys of the said Corporation as the board may require: Provided, That any member of said board may be removed from office at any time by a concurrent resolution of the Senate and the House of Representatives.

"(g) Shall have such powers as may be necessary or appropriate for the exercise of the powers herein specifically conferred upon the Corporation.

"(h) Shall have power in the name of the United States of America to exercise the right of eminent domain, and in the purchase of any real estate or the acquisition of real estate by condemnation proceedings, the title to such real estate shall be taken in the name of the United States of America, and thereupon all such real estate shall be entrusted to the Corporation as the agent of the United States to accomplish the purposes of this act.

"(i) Shall have power to acquire real estate for the construction of dams, reservoirs, transmission lines, power houses, and other structures, and navigation projects at any point along the Tennessee River, or any of its tributaries, and in the event that the owner or owners of such property shall fail and refuse to sell to the Corporation at a price deemed fair and reasonable by the board, then the Corporation may proceed to exercise the right of eminent domain, and to condemn all property that it deems necessary for carrying out the purposes of this act, and all such condemnation proceedings shall be had pursuant to the provisions and requirements hereinafter specified, with reference to any and all condemnation proceedings.

"(j) Shall have power to construct dams, reservoirs, power houses, power structures, transmission lines, navigation projects, and incidental works in the Tennessee River and its tributaries, and to unite the various power installations into one or more systems by transmission lines.

"Sec. 5. The board is hereby authorized—

"(a) To contract with commercial producers for the production of such fertilizers or fertilizer materials as may be needed in the Government's program of development and introduction in excess of that produced by Government plants. Such contracts may provide either for outright purchase of materials by the board or only for the payment of carrying charges on special materials manufactured at the board's request for its program.

"(b) To arrange with farmers and farm organizations for large-scale practical use of the new forms of fertilizers under conditions permitting an accurate measure of the economic return they produce.

"(c) To cooperate with National, State, district, or county experimental stations or demonstration farms, for the use of new forms of fertilizer or fertilizer practices during the initial or experimental period of their introduction.

"(d) The board in order to improve and cheapen the production of fertilizer is authorized to manufacture and sell fixed nitrogen, fertilizer, and fertilizer ingredients at Muscle Shoals by the employment of existing facilities, by modernizing existing plants, or by any other process or processes that in its judgment shall appear wise and profitable for the fixation of atmospheric nitrogen or the cheapening of the production of fertilizer.

"(e) Under the authority of this act the board may make donations or sales of the product of the plant or plants operated by it to be fairly and equitably distributed through the agency of county demonstration agents, agricultural colleges, or otherwise as the board may direct, for experimentation, education, and introduction of the use of such products in cooperation with practical farmers so as to obtain information as to the value, effect, and best methods of their use.

"(f) The board is authorized to make alterations, modifications, or improvements in existing plants and facilities, and to construct new plants.

"(g) In the event it is not used for the fixation of nitrogen for agricultural purposes, or leased, then the board shall maintain in stand-by condition nitrate plant no. 2, or its equivalent, for the fixation of atmospheric nitrogen, for the production of explosives in the event of war or a national emergency, until the Congress shall by joint resolution release the board from this obligation, and if any part thereof be used by the board for the manufacture of phosphoric acid or potash, the balance of nitrate plant no. 2 shall be kept in stand-by condition.

"(h) To establish, maintain, and operate laboratories and experimental plants, and to undertake experiments for the purpose of enabling the corporation to furnish nitrogen products for military purposes, and nitrogen and other fertilizer products for agricultural purposes in the most economical manner and at the highest standard of efficiency.

"(i) To request the assistance and advice of any officer, agent, or employee of any executive department or of any independent office of the United States, to enable the Corporation the better to carry out its powers successfully, and as far as practicable shall utilize the services of such officers, agents, and employees, and the President shall, if in his opinion the public interest, service, or economy so require, direct that such assistance, advice, and service be rendered to the Corporation, and any individual that may be by the President directed to render such assistance, advice, and service shall be thereafter subject to the orders, rules, and regulations of the board: Provided, That any invention or discovery made by virtue of and incidental to such service by an employee of the Government of the United States serving under this section, or by any employee of the Corporation, together with any patents which may be granted thereon, shall be the sole and exclusive property of the Corporation, which is hereby authorized to grant such licenses thereunder as shall be authorized by the board: Provided further, That the board may pay to such inventor such sum from the income from sale of licenses as it may deem proper.

"(j) Upon the requisition of the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy to manufacture for and sell at cost to the United States explosives or their nitrogenous content.

"(k) Upon the requisition of the Secretary of War the Corporation shall allot and deliver without charge to the War Department so much power as shall be necessary in the judgment of said Department for use in operation of all locks, lifts, or other facilities in aid of navigation.

"(l) To produce, distribute, and sell electric power, as herein particularly specified.

"(m) No products of the Corporation shall be sold for use outside of the United States, its Territories and possessions, except to the United States Government for the use of its Army and Navy, or to its allies in case of war.

"(n) The President is authorized, within 12 months after the passage of this act, to lease to any responsible farm organization or to any corporation organized by it nitrate plant no. 2 and Waco Quarry, together with the railroad connecting said quarry with nitrate plant no. 2, for a term not exceeding 50 years at a rental of not less than $1 per year, but such authority shall be subject to the express condition that the lessee shall use said property during the term of said lease exclusively for the manufacture of fertilizer and fertilizer ingredients to be used only in the manufacture of fertilizer by said lessee and sold for use as fertilizer. The said lessee shall covenant to keep said property in first-class condition, but the lessee shall be authorized to modernize said plant no. 2 by the installation of such machinery as may be necessary, and is authorized to amortize the cost of said machinery and improvements over the term of said lease or any part thereof. Said lease shall also provide that the board shall sell to the lessee power for the operation of said plant at the same schedule of prices that it charges all other customers for power of the same class and quantity. Said lease shall also provide that, if the said lessee does not desire to buy power of the publicly owned plant, it shall have the right to purchase its power for the operation of said plant of the Alabama Power Co. or any other publicly or privately owned corporation engaged in the generation and sale of electric power, and in such case the lease shall provide further that the said lessee shall have a free right of way to build a transmission line over Government property to said plant, paying the actual expenses and damages, if any, incurred by the Corporation on account of such line. Said lease shall also provide that the said lessee shall covenant that during the term of said lease the said lessee shall not enter into any illegal monopoly, combination, or trust with any privately owned corporation engaged in the manufacture, production, and sale of fertilizer with the object or effect of increasing the price of fertilizer to the farmer.

"SEC. 6. In the appointment of officials and the selection of employees for said Corporation, and in the promotion of any such employees or officials, no political test or qualification shall be permitted or given consideration, but all such appointments and promotions shall be given and made on the basis of merit and efficiency. Any member of said board who is found by the President of the United States to be guilty of a violation of this section shall be removed from office by the President of the United States, and any appointee of said board who is found by the board to be guilty of a violation of this section shall be removed from office by said board.

"SEC. 7. In order to enable the Corporation to exercise the powers and duties vested in it by this act—

"(b) The President of the United States is authorized to provide for the transfer to the Corporation of the use, possession, and control of such other real or personal property of the United States as he may from time to time deem necessary and proper for the purposes of the Corporation as herein stated.

The Corporation shall be held to be an inhabitant and resident of the northern judicial district of Alabama within the meaning of the laws of the United States relating to the venue of civil suits.

"(b) The Corporation shall at all times maintain complete and accurate books of accounts.

"(c) Each member of the board, before entering upon the duties of his office, shall subscribe to an oath (or affirmation) to support the Constitution of the United States and to faithfully and impartially perform the duties imposed upon him by this act.

"SEC. 9. (a) The board shall file with the President and with the Congress, in December of each year, a financial statement and a complete report as to the business of the Corporation covering the preceding governmental fiscal year. The expenses of each such audit may be paid from moneys advanced therefor by the Corporation, or from any appropriation or appropriations for the General Accounting Office, and appropriations so used shall be reimbursed promptly by the Corporation as billed by the Comptroller General. All such audit expenses shall be charged to operating expenses of the Corporation. The Comptroller General shall make special report to the Presi-

"SEC. 10. The board is hereby empowered and authorized to sell the surplus power not used in its operations, and for operation of locks and other works generated by it, to States, counties, municipalities, corporations, partnerships, or individuals, according to the policies hereinafter set forth; and to carry out said authority, the board is authorized to enter into contracts for such sale for a term not exceeding 20 years, and in the sale of such current by the board it shall give preference to States, counties, municipalities, and cooperative organizations of citizens or farmers, not organized or doing business for profit, but primarily for the purpose of supplying electricity to its own citizens or members: Provided, That all contracts made with private companies or individuals for the sale of power, which power is to be resold for a profit, shall contain a provision authorizing the board to cancel said contract upon 5 years' notice in writing, if the board needs said power to supply the demands of States, counties, or municipalities. In order to promote and encourage the fullest possible use of electric light and power on farms within reasonable distance of any of its transmission lines the board in its discretion shall have power to construct transmission lines to farms and small villages that are not otherwise supplied with electricity at reasonable rates, and to make such rules and regulations governing such sale and distribution of such electric power as in its judgment may be just and equitable: Provided further, That the board is hereby authorized and directed to make studies, experiments, and determinations to promote the wider and better use of electric power for agricultural and domestic use, or for small or local industries, and it may cooperate with State governments, or their subdivisions or agencies, with educational or research institutions, and with cooperatives or other organizations, in the application of electric power to the fuller and better balanced development of the resources of the region.

"SEC. 11. It is hereby declared to be the policy of the Government so far as practical to distribute and sell the surplus power generated at Muscle Shoals equitably among the States, counties, and municipalities within transmission distance. This policy is further declared to be that the projects herein provided for shall be considered primarily as for the benefit of the people of the section as a whole and particularly the domestic and rural consumers to whom the power can economically be made available, and accordingly that sale to and use by industry shall be a secondary purpose, to be utilized principally to secure a sufficiently high load factor and revenue returns which will permit domestic and rural use at the lowest possible rates and in such manner as to encourage increased domestic and rural use of electricity. It is further hereby declared to be the policy of the Government to utilize the Muscle Shoals properties so far as may be necessary to improve, increase, and cheapen the production of fertilizer and fertilizer ingredients by carrying out the provisions of this act.

"SEC. 12. In order to place the board upon a fair basis for making such contracts and for receiving bids for the sale of such power, it is hereby expressly authorized, either from appropriations made by Congress or from funds secured from the sale of such power, or from funds secured by the sale of bonds hereafter provided for, to construct, lease, purchase, or authorize the construction of transmission lines within transmission distance from the place where generated, and to interconnect with other systems. The board is also authorized to lease to any person, persons, or corporation the use of any transmission line owned by the Government and operated by the board, but no such lease shall be made that in any way interferes with the use of such transmission line by the board: Provided, That if any State, county, municipality, or other public or cooperative organization of citizens or farmers, not organized or doing business for profit, but primarily for the purpose of supplying electricity to its own citizens or members, or any two or more of such municipalities or organizations, shall construct or agree to construct and maintain a properly designed and built transmission line to the Government reservation upon which is located a Government generating plant, or to a main transmission line owned by the Government or leased by the board and under the control of the board, the board is hereby authorized and directed to contract with such State, county, municipality, or other organization, or two or more of them, for the sale of electricity for a term not exceeding 30 years; and in any such case the board shall give to such State, county, municipality, or other organization ample time to fully comply with any local law now in existence or hereafter enacted providing for the necessary legal authority for such State, county, municipality, or other organization to contract with the board for such power: Provided further, That all contracts entered into between the Corporation and any municipality or other political subdivision or cooperative organization shall provide that the electric power shall be sold and distributed to the ultimate consumer without discrimination as between consumers of the same class, and such contract shall be voidable at the election of the board if a discriminatory rate, rebate, or other special concession is made or given to any consumer or user by the municipality or other political subdivision or cooperative organization: And provided further, That as to any surplus power not so sold as above provided to States, counties, municipalities, or other said organizations, before the board shall sell the same to any person or corporation engaged in the distribution and resale of electricity for profit, it shall require said person or corporation to agree that any resale of such electric power by said person or corporation shall be made to the ultimate consumer of such electric power at prices that shall not exceed a schedule fixed by the board from time to time as reasonable, just, and fair; and in case of any such sale, if an amount is charged the ultimate consumer which is in excess of the price so deemed to be just, reasonable, and fair by the board, the contract for such sale between the board and such distributor of electricity shall be voidable at the election of the board: And provided further, That the board is hereby authorized to enter into contracts with other power systems for the mutual exchange of unused excess power upon suitable terms, for the conservation of stored water, and as an emergency or break-down relief.

"SEC. 13. Five percent of the gross proceeds received by the board for the sale of power generated at Dam No. 2, or from any other hydropower plant hereafter constructed in the State of Alabama, shall be paid to the State of Alabama; and 5 percent of the gross proceeds from the sale of power generated at Cove Creek Dam, hereinafter provided for, or any other dam located in the State of Tennessee, shall be paid to the State of Tennessee. Upon the completion of said Cove Creek Dam the board shall ascertain how much additional power is thereby generated at Dam No. 2 and at any other dam hereafter constructed by the Government of the United States on the Tennessee River, in the State of Alabama, or in the State of Tennessee, and from the gross proceeds of the sale of such additional power 2½ percent shall be paid to the State of Alabama and 2½ percent to the State of Tennessee. These percentages shall apply to any other dam that may hereafter be constructed and controlled and operated by the board on the Tennessee River or any of its tributaries, the main purpose of which is to control flood waters and where the development of electric power is incidental to the operation of such flood-control dam. In ascertaining the gross proceeds from the sale of such power upon which a percentage is paid to the States of Alabama and Tennessee, the board shall not take into consideration the proceeds of any power sold or delivered to the Government of the United States, or any department or agency of the Government of the United States, used in the operation of any locks on the Tennessee River or for any experimental purpose, or for the manufacture of fertilizer or any of the ingredients thereof, or for any other governmental purpose: Provided, That the percentages to be paid to the States of Alabama and Tennessee, as provided in this section, shall be subject to revision and change by the board, and any new percentages established by the board, when approved by the President, shall remain in effect until and unless again changed by the board with the approval of the President. No change of said percentages shall be made more often than once in 5 years, and no change shall be made without giving to the States of Alabama and Tennessee an opportunity to be heard.

"Sec. 14. The board shall make a thorough investigation as to the present value of Dam No. 2, and the steam plants at nitrate plant no. 1, and nitrate plant no. 2, and as to the cost of Cove Creek Dam, for the purpose of ascertaining how much of the value or the cost of said properties shall be allocated and charged up to (1) flood control, (2) navigation, (3) fertilizer, (4) national defense, and (5) the development of power. The findings thus made by the board, when approved by the President of the United States, shall be final, and such findings shall thereafter be used in all allocation of value for the purpose of keeping the book value of said properties. In like manner, the cost and book value of any dams, steam plants, or other similar improvements hereafter constructed and turned over to said board for the purpose of control and management shall be ascertained and allocated.

"Sec. 15. In the construction of any future dam, steam plant, or other facility, to be used in whole or in part for the generation or transmission of electric power, the board is hereby authorized and empowered to issue on the credit of the United States and to sell serial bonds not exceeding $50,000,000 in amount, having a maturity not more than 50 years from the date of issue thereof, and bearing interest not exceeding 3½ percent per annum. Said bonds shall be issued and sold in amounts and prices approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, but all such bonds as may be so issued and sold shall have equal rank. None of said bonds shall be sold below par, and no fee, commission, or compensation whatever shall be paid to any person, firm, or corporation for handling, negotiating the sale, or selling the said bonds. All of such bonds so issued and sold shall have all the rights and privileges accorded by law to Panama Canal bonds, authorized by section 8 of the act of June 28, 1902, chapter 1302, as amended by the act of December 21, 1905 (ch. 3, sec. 1, 34 Stat. 5), as now compiled in section 743 of title 31 of the United States Code. All funds derived from the sale of such bonds shall be paid over to the Corporation.

"Sec. 16. The board, whenever the President deems it advisable, is hereby empowered and directed to complete Dam No. 2 at Muscle Shoals, Ala., and the steam plant at nitrate plant no. 2, in the vicinity of Muscle Shoals, by installing in Dam No. 2 the additional power units according to the plans and specifications of said dam, and the additional power unit in the steam plant at nitrate plant no. 2.

"Sec. 17. The Secretary of War, or the Secretary of the Interior, is hereby authorized to construct, either directly or by contract to the lowest responsible bidder, after due advertisement, a dam in and across Clinch River in the State of Tennessee, which has by long custom become known and designated as the Cove Creek Dam, together with a transmission line from Muscle Shoals, according to the latest and most approved designs, including power house and hydroelectric installations and equipment for the generation of power, in order that the waters of the said Clinch River may be impounded and stored above said dam for the purpose of increasing and regulating the flow of the Clinch River and the Tennessee River below, so that the maximum amount of primary power may be developed at Dam No. 2 and at any and all other dams below the said Cove Creek Dam: Provided, however, That the President is hereby authorized by appropriate order to direct the employment by the Secretary of War, or by the Secretary of the Interior, of such engineer or engineers as he may designate, to perform such duties and obligations as he may deem proper, either in the drawing of plans and specifications for said dam, or to perform any other work in the building or construction of the same. The President may, by such order, place the control of the construction of said dam in the hands of such engineer or engineers taken from private life as he may desire: And provided further, That the President is hereby expressly authorized, without regard to the restriction or limitation of any other statute, to select attorneys and assistants for the purpose of making any investigation he may deem proper to ascertain whether, in the control and management of Dam No. 2, or any other dam or property owned by the Government in the Tennessee River Basin, or in the authorization of any improvement therein, there has been any undue or unfair advantage given to private persons, partnerships, or corporations, by any officials or employees of the Government, or whether in any such matters the Government has been injured or unjustly deprived of any of its rights.

"Sec. 18. In order to enable and empower the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Interior, or the board to carry out the authority hereby conferred, in the most economical and efficient manner, he or it is hereby authorized and empowered in the exercise of the powers of national defense, in aid of navigation, and in the control of the flood waters of the Tennessee and Mississippi Rivers, constituting channels of interstate commerce, to exercise the right of eminent domain for all purposes of this act, and to condemn all lands, easements, rights of way, and other area necessary in order to obtain a site for said Cove Creek Dam, and the flowage rights for the reservoir of water above said dam, and to negotiate and conclude contracts with States, counties, municipalities, and all State agencies and with railroads, railroad corporations, common carriers, and all public-utility commissions and any other person, firm, or corporation, for the relocation of railroad tracks, highways, highway bridges, mills, ferries, electric-light plants, and any and all other properties, enterprises, and projects whose removal may be necessary in order to carry out the provisions of this act. When said Cove Creek Dam, transmission line, and power house shall have been completed, the possession, use, and control thereof shall be intrusted to the Corporation for use and operation in connection with the general Tennessee Valley project, and to promote flood control and navigation in the Tennessee River.

"Sec. 19. The Corporation, as an instrumentality and agency of the Government of the United States for the purpose of executing its constitutional powers, shall have access to the Patent Office of the United States for the purpose of studying, ascertaining, and copying all methods, formulas and scientific information (not including access to pending applications for patents) necessary to enable the Corporation to use and employ the most efficacious and economical process for the production of fixed nitrogen, or any essential ingredient of fertilizer, or any method of improving and cheapening the production of hydroelectric power, and any owner of a patent whose patent rights may have been thus in any way copied, used, infringed, or employed by the exercise of this authority by the Corporation shall have as the exclusive remedy a cause of action against the Corporation to be instituted and prosecuted on the equity side of the appropriate district court of the United States, for the recovery of reasonable compensation for such infringement. The Commissioner of Patents shall furnish to the Corporation, at its request and without payment of fees, copies of documents on file in his office: Provided, That the benefits of this section shall not apply to any art, machine, method of manufacture, or composition of matter, discovered or invented by such employee during the time of his employment or service with the Corporation or with the Government of the United States.

"Sec. 20. The Government of the United States hereby reserves the right, in case of war or national emergency declared by Congress, to take possession of all or any part of the property described or referred to in this act for the purpose of manufacturing explosives or for other war purposes; but, if this right is exercised by the Government, it shall pay the reasonable and fair damages that may be suffered by any party whose contract for the purchase of electric power or fixed nitrogen or fertilizer ingredients is hereby violated, after the amount of the damages has been fixed by the United States Court of Claims in proceedings instituted and conducted for that purpose under rules prescribed by the court.

"Sec. 21. (a) All general penal statutes relating to the larceny, embezzlement, conversion, or to the improper handling, retention, use, or disposal of public moneys or property of the United States shall apply to the moneys and property of the Corporation and to moneys and properties of the United States intrusted to the corporation.

"(b) Any person who, with intent to defraud the Corporation, or to deceive any director, officer, or employee of the Corporation or any officer or employee of the United States, (1) makes any false entry in any book of the Corporation, or (2) makes any false report or statement for the Corporation, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"(c) Any person who shall receive any compensation, rebate, or reward, or shall enter into any conspiracy, collusion, or agreement, express or implied, with intent to defraud the Corporation or wrongfully and unlawfully to defeat its purposes, shall, on conviction thereof, be fined not more than $5,000, or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"Sec. 22. To aid further the proper use, conservation, and development of the natural resources of the Tennessee River drainage basin and of such adjoining territory as may be related to or materially affected by the development consequent to this act, and to provide for the general welfare of the citizens of said areas, the President is hereby authorized, by such means or methods as he may deem proper within the limits of appropriations made therefor by Congress, to make such surveys of and general plans for said Tennessee Basin and adjoining territory as may be useful to the Congress and to the several States in guiding and controlling the extent, sequence, and nature of development that may be equitably and economically advanced through the expenditure of public funds, or through the guidance or control of public authority, all for the general purpose of fostering an orderly and proper physical, economic, and social development of said areas; and the President is further authorized in making said surveys and plans to cooperate with the States affected thereby, or subdivisions or agencies of such States, or with cooperative or other organizations, and to make such studies, experiments, or demonstrations as may be necessary and suitable to that end.

"Sec. 23. The President shall, from time to time, as the work provided for in the preceding section progresses, recommend to Congress such legislation as he deems proper to carry out the general purposes stated in said section, and for the especial purpose of bringing about in said Tennessee drainage basin and adjoining territory in conformity with said general purposes (1) the maximum amount of flood control; (2) the maximum development of said Tennessee River for navigation purposes; (3) the maximum generation of electric power consistent with flood control and navigation; (4) the proper use of marginal lands; (5) the proper method of reforestation of all lands in said drainage basin suitable for reforestation; and (6) the economic and social well-being of the people living in said river basin.

"Sec. 24. For the purpose of securing any rights of flowage, or obtaining title to or possession of any property, real or personal, that may be necessary or may become necessary, in the carrying out of any of the provisions of this act, the President of the United States for a period of 3 years from the date of the enactment of this act, is hereby authorized to acquire title in the name of the United States to such rights or such property, and to provide for the payment for same by directing the board to contract to deliver power generated at any of the plants now owned or hereafter owned or constructed by the Government or by said

Corporation, such future delivery of power to continue for a period not exceeding 30 years. Likewise, for 1 year after the enactment of this act, the President is further authorized to sell or lease any parcel or part of any vacant real estate now owned by the Government in said Tennessee River Basin, to persons, firms, or corporations who shall contract to erect thereon factories or manufacturing establishments, and who shall contract to purchase of said Corporation electric power for the operation of any such factory or manufacturing establishment. No contract shall be made by the President for the sale of any of such real estate as may be necessary for present or future use on the part of the Government for any of the purposes of this act. Any such contract made by the President of the United States shall be carried out by the board: Provided, That no such contract shall be made that will in any way abridge or take away the preference right to purchase power given in this act to States, counties, municipalities, or farm organizations: Provided further, That no lease shall be for a term to exceed 50 years: Provided further, That any sale shall be on condition that said land shall be used for industrial purposes only.

"Sec. 25. The Corporation may cause proceedings to be instituted for the acquisition by condemnation of any lands, easements, or rights of way which, in the opinion of the Corporation, are necessary to carry out the provisions of this act. The proceedings shall be instituted in the United States district court for the district in which the land, easement, right of way, or other interest, or any part thereof, is located, and such court shall have full jurisdiction to divest the complete title to the property sought to be acquired out of all persons or claimants and vest the same in the United States in fee simple, and to enter a decree quieting the title thereto in the United States of America.

"Upon the filing of a petition for condemnation and for the purpose of ascertaining the value of the property to be acquired, and assessing the compensation to be paid, the court shall appoint three commissioners who shall be disinterested persons and who shall take and subscribe an oath that they do not own any lands, or interest or easement in any lands, which it may be desirable for the United States to acquire in the furtherance of said project, and such commissioners shall not be selected from the locality wherein the land sought to be condemned lies. Such commissioners shall receive a per diem of not to exceed $15 for their services, together with an additional amount of $5 per day for subsistence for time actually spent in performing their duties as commissioners.

"It shall be the duty of such commissioners to examine into the value of the lands sought to be condemned, to conduct hearings and receive evidence, and generally to take such appropriate steps as may be proper for the determination of the value of the said lands sought to be condemned, and for such purpose the commissioners are authorized to administer oaths and subpoena witnesses, which said witnesses shall receive the same fees as are provided for witnesses in the Federal courts. The said commissioners shall thereupon file a report setting forth their conclusions as to the value of the said property sought to be condemned, making a separate award and valuation in the premises with respect to each separate parcel involved. Upon the filing of such award in court the clerk of said court shall give notice of the filing of such award to the parties to said proceeding, in manner and form as directed by the judge of said court.

"Either or both parties may file exceptions to the award of said commissioners within 20 days from the date of the filing of said award in court. Exceptions filed to such award shall be heard before three Federal district judges unless the parties, in writing, in person, or by their attorneys, stipulate that the exceptions may be heard before a lesser number of judges. On such hearing such judges shall pass de novo upon the proceedings had before the commissioners, may view the property, and may take additional evidence. Upon such hearings the said judges shall file their own award, fixing therein the value of the property sought to be condemned, regardless of the award previously made by the said commissioners.

"At any time within 30 days from the filing of the decision of the district judges upon the hearing on exceptions to the award made by the commissioners, either party may appeal from such decision of the said judges to the circuit court of appeals, and the said circuit court of appeals shall upon the hearing on said appeal dispose of the same upon the record, without regard to the awards or findings theretofore made by the commissioners or the district judges, and such circuit court of appeals shall thereupon fix the value of the said property sought to be condemned.

"Upon acceptance of an award by the owner of any property herein provided to be appropriated, and the payment of the money awarded or upon the failure of either party to file exceptions to the award of the commissioners within the time specified, or upon the award of the commissioners, and the payment of the money by the United States pursuant thereto, or the payment of the money awarded into the registry of the court by the Corporation, the title to said property and the right to the possession thereof shall pass to the United States, and the United States shall be entitled to a writ in the same proceeding to dispossess the former owner of said property, and all lessees, agents, and attorneys of such former owner, and to put the United States, by its corporate creature and agent, the Corporation, into possession of said property.

"In the event of any property owned in whole or in part by minors, or insane persons, or incompetent persons, or estates of deceased persons, then the legal representatives of such minors, insane persons, incompetent persons, or estates shall have power, by and with the consent and approval of the trial judge in whose court said matter is for determination, to consent to or reject the awards of the commissioners herein provided for, and in the event that there be no legal representatives, or that the legal representatives for such minors, insane persons, or incompetent persons shall fail or decline to act, then such trial judge may, upon motion, appoint a guardian ad litem to act for such minors, insane persons, or incompetent persons, and such guardian ad litem shall act to the full extent and to the same purpose and effect as his ward could act, if competent, and such guardian ad litem shall be deemed to have full power and authority to respond, to conduct, or to maintain any proceeding herein provided for affecting his said ward.

"Sec. 26. The net proceeds derived by the board from the sale of power and any of the products manufactured by the Corporation, after deducting the cost of operation, maintenance, depreciation, amortization, and an amount deemed by the board as necessary to withhold as operating capital, or devoted by the board to new construction, shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States at the end of each calendar year.

"Sec. 27. All appropriations necessary to carry out the provisions of this act are hereby authorized.

"Sec. 28. That all acts or parts of acts in conflict herewith are hereby repealed, so far as they affect the operations contemplated by this act.

"Sec. 29. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly declared and reserved, but no such amendment or repeal shall operate to impair the obligation of any contract made by said Corporation under any power conferred by this act.

"Sec. 30. The sections of this act are hereby declared to be separable, and in the event any one or more sections of this act be held to be unconstitutional, the same shall not affect the validity of other sections of this act."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amend the title as proposed by the Senate so as to read: "An act to improve the navigability and to provide for the flood control of the Tennessee River; to provide for reforestation and the proper use of marginal lands in the Tennessee Valley; to provide for the agricultural and industrial development of said valley; to provide for the national defense by the creation of a corporation for the operation of Government properties at and near Muscle Shoals in the State of Alabama, and for other purposes"; and the House agree to the same.

STATEMENT

It will be noted from a reading of the conference amendment, the Senate amendment, and the House bill, hereinafter set out, that the mechanics of the House bill and the Senate amendment were substantially the same and in most instances were embodied in identical language.

The House bill provided, however, for liability to make compensation under the Federal Employees' Liability Compensation Act for all employees of the Corporation sustaining hurt or injury and there was no similar provision in the Senate amendment. The Senate conferees agreed to the insertion of same in the conference amendment.

There was a provision in the House bill for the protection of laborers to apply in all construction contracts made by the Corporation. No similar provision was carried in the Senate amendment, but the Senate conferees agreed to the insertion of the provision in the conference amendment as to prevailing wage scale.

Direct and specific authority for the Corporation to construct in the future any and all dams needed on the Tennessee River and its tributaries was carried in the House bill. There was a question as to whether the implied authority for the construction of such dams was sufficient as carried in the Senate amendment, and the provision of the House bill was inserted in the conference amendment to insure future development.

The House bill provided that all property hereafter to be acquired by purchase, condemnation, construction, or otherwise should be intrusted to the Corporation as the agent of the United States, and this provision was inserted in the conference amendment.

The Senate amendment limited the suability of the Corporation solely to suits for the enforcement of contracts and the defense of property. The House bill placed no limitations whatever upon the suability of the Corporation, so that all persons who had a cause of action against the Corporation might have their day in court. The House provision was written into the conference amendment in the interest of justice.

A most important provision in the House bill was the one requiring that nitrate plant no. 2, the big nitrate plant, be kept in stand-by condition for war purposes, in the event it was not being operated for the fixation of nitrogenous fertilizer. There was no similar provision in the Senate amendment, and the House provision was incorporated in the conference amendment. This safeguards national defense.

The House bill and the Senate amendment both declared it to be the policy to utilize the Muscle Shoals properties to improve and cheapen the production of fertilizer and fertilizer ingredients. But the House bill went further and declared it also to be the policy to "increase" the production of fertilizer and fertilizer ingredients, and this was written into the conference amendment. The provisions of the House bill and the Senate amendment with reference to experimentation in the production of fertilizer and fertilizer ingredients were substantially the same. The conference amendment gives the board full authority to manufacture and sell fertilizer and fertilizer ingredients by the use of existing plants or by modernizing existing plants and by building new plants or by any process or processes the board may select and in such amounts as the board may determine.

A similar provision was carried in the House bill and there was also in the House bill a provision requiring the board to operate either one of the two nitrate plants if such operation was in the judgment of both the board and the President feasible and economically justifiable. Agreement in conference leaves it discretionary with the board to decide how much fertilizer it will make and sell, what kind of fertilizer it will make, and what methods, processes, or plant or plants it will use.

With reference to leasing, the House bill authorized the leasing of nitrate plant no. 2 to any person, firm, or corporation but made no provision with reference to a nominal rental and imposed certain very specific conditions and limitations on the lessee. The Senate amendment authorized the leasing of nitrate plant no. 2 to the American Farm Bureau Federation only and imposed certain very specific conditions and limitations on the lessee. The conference amendment authorizes the leasing of nitrate plant no. 2 to any "farm organization or corporation organized by it" at a nominal rental and with no conditions or limitations on the lessee except that the plant be used to manufacture fertilizer. The manufactured fertilizer being seasonal, it is thought that a farm organization or its corporate agent can with the nominal rental and with the use of very cheap secondary power operate nitrate plant no. 2 in a most effective and successful manner for the benefit of agriculture.

The provision in the Senate amendment giving 5 percent of the gross proceeds from the sale of power to the States of Tennessee and Alabama in lieu of taxes was modified in conference by limiting the 5 percent to the gross proceeds derived from hydro power, and eliminated payment from any proceeds derived from the sale of steam or any other power.

With reference to power, the provision in the House bill dedicating the power projects primarily for the benefit of domestic and rural consumers was incorporated in the conference amendment. The language of the Senate amendment with reference to the construction of transmission lines was retained in the conference amendment. It will be remembered that the provision in the House bill requiring the board to negotiate for the use of private lines before constructing its own transmission lines laid down no specifications whatever as to just what these negotiations should be, and in no way required the board to conduct indefinite negotiations, but left the matter of the extent of the negotiations entirely to the discretion of the board. It must be remembered that the requirement in the beginning of section 13 of the House bill that the board first seek to make satisfactory contracts to purchase existing transmission lines or to make satisfactory arrangements with persons, firms, and corporations to resell and distribute surplus power was clearly intended solely in the interest of economy and lower rates to the public and could in no sense have restricted the power of the board to build new transmission lines. Further, "satisfactory" arrangements undoubtedly would have meant that the board itself would, as expressly required in said section, fix the prices at which such power should be sold to the ultimate consumer. Consequently, it was the purpose of the House bill to insure even cheaper power to the public. But the elimination in conference of the language in the House bill as to "negotiations" will not mean that the board will not probably, as good business men, seek to prevent duplication of lines and facilities by purchasing existing lines or by negotiating contracts to distribute and resell power at low stipulated rates to the public. It must also be remembered that the Senate bill was frequently amended on the floor of the Senate, thus greatly liberalizing its transmission-lines provisions, even to the extent of permitting the use of Government lines by private companies and of connecting Government lines in with a system or systems of private lines and authorizing the board to purchase existing lines.

Besides the provision with reference to the construction of transmission lines there were five other provisions with reference to power and the sale and distribution thereof in which the House bill was different from the Senate amendment, and in the case of each of these five provisions the House bill provision was written into the conference amendment. The first of these provisions was where the House bill provided that contracts with private companies for the purchase of power could be canceled after 5 years' notice, where the Senate amendment provided for only 2 years' notice. The second of these provisions was where the House bill provided that contracts with States, counties, and municipalities should be limited to 20 years, while the Senate amendment limited such contracts to 30 years. The third of these provisions was where the House bill provided that where States, counties, and municipalities built their own transmission lines contracts for the sale of power to them should be limited to 30 years, and the Senate amendment limited such contracts to 40 years. The fourth of these provisions was that the House bill provided that in certain cases contracts with private companies should be voidable at the election of the board, and the Senate amendment provided that such contracts should be absolutely null and void. The fifth provision which was carried in the House bill and placed in the conference amendment gave cooperative organizations the same preference in the purchase of power as is given to States, counties, and municipalities.

It was extremely questionable as to whether or not the bonds provided for in the Senate amendment would be marketable. There was no question but that the bonds provided for in the House bill could be readily and easily sold. To insure the Corporation's not being handicapped and not being thwarted in its work of development of the Tennessee Valley, and the carrying out of its great projects, the bond provision of the House bill was incorporated in the conference amendment.

The provision for the construction of Cove Creek Dam and the transmission line connecting it with Wilson Dam was substantially the same in both the House bill and the Senate amendment, and the construction of these necessary projects will begin just as soon as funds are made available for that purpose at this session of Congress.

Provisions for condemnation proceedings in both House bill and Senate amendment were modified so as to insure more expeditious acquisition of property and were incorporated in the conference amendment.

A most important provision in the House bill requiring all net proceeds, after meeting all expenses of the Corporation and construction needs, to be covered into the Treasury of the United States, was accepted by the Senate conferees and incorporated in the conference amendment.

A careful comparison of the Senate bill with the Senate amendment will show that the Senate bill was amended many times and in many important particulars by the Senate before it was adopted by the Senate as the Senate amendment to the House bill. A study of the conference amendment shows that because of the work of the House Committee on Military Affairs and the cooperation of the membership of the House, the House conferees were able to get some 31 material provisions in the conference amendment that were absent from the Senate amendment.

We are fully persuaded that the full success of the Tennessee Valley development project will depend more upon the ability, vision, and executive capacity of the members of the board than upon legislative provisions. We have sought to set up a legislative framework, but not to encase it in a legislative strait-jacket. We intend that the corporation shall have much of the essential freedom and elasticity of a private business corporation. We have indicated the course it shall take, but have not directed the particular steps it shall make. We have given it ample power and tried to prevent the perversion and abuse of that power. We have set bounds to prevent its liberty from becoming license. For emphasis, we quote a brief extract from the report of the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs to accompany H.R. 5081:

PLANNING FOR FUTURE DEVELOPMENT

The board of three members should not only be sound and experienced men of affairs, they should not only be soundly educated and widely traveled and well-read men; but they should be men of constructive vision, to seek to fit the future into the form of the present. Therefore the board is charged with the duty of constantly studying the whole situation presented by the Tennessee River Valley, and the adjoining territory, with the view of encouraging and guiding in the orderly and balanced development of the diverse and rich resources of that section. It is a great responsibility imposed upon the members of the board. But it is a great opportunity that will come to those chosen for this great service. For such position of trust and responsibility undoubtedly the President will search the Nation over for the right men to whom to entrust not only this vast investment of money but this great responsibility, not only to the people of that section of the country but to the people of the whole Nation. If, through the incapacity or the indifference of the members of the board, this great humanitarian project should fail, then progress along this line in other parts of the country will be set back for 2 or 3 generations.

With such a responsibility upon the President in choosing the right men, and with such a responsibility resting upon the consciences of the men thus chosen, we cannot believe that there will be failure. When the race advances it must do so along the road of faith in ourselves and our fellows. The members of the board are given the term of 9 years so there may be consistency and continuity in the policies of the authority.

In order to make perfectly plain for anyone seeking to understand the difference between the bill passed by the House and the amendment passed by the Senate and the amendment now proposed by the House as a substitute for the Senate we are printing as a part of our report the three bills in parallel columns, and, by reference from one column to the other, the identities, similarities, and the differences may be easily obtained.

JOHN J. McSWAIN,

LISTER HILL,

Managers on the part of the House.

(b) To arrange with farmers and farm organizations for large-scale practical use of the new forms of fertilizers under conditions permitting an accurate measure of the economic return they produce.

(c) To cooperate with National, State, district, or county experimental stations or demonstration farms, for the use of new forms of fertilizer or fertilizer practices during the initial or experimental period of their introduction.

(d) The board shall manufacture fixed nitrogen and/or other fertilizer ingredients at Muscle Shoals by the employment of existing facilities (by modernizing existing plants), or by any other process or processes that in its judgment shall appear wise and profitable for the fixation of atmospheric nitrogen, and/or other fertilizer ingredients for agricultural and military uses.

(e) It shall be the duty of the board to operate the nitrate plants or either of them by employment of existing facilities or by modernizing the existing plants and facilities for the production of nitrogenous plant food of a kind and quality and in form available as plant food and capable of being applied directly to the soil in connection with the growth of crops containing not less than 10,000 tons of fixed nitrogen, and said amount of such fertilizer or fertilizer ingredients shall periodically be increased from time to time as the market demands may reasonably require until the maximum production capacity of the plants now owned by the Government at Muscle Shoals, as the board may find them to be economically adapted, or susceptible of being made economically adapted for the fixation of nitrogen is reached, if the reasonable demands of the market shall justify except when the market demands are satisfied by maintenance in storage and unsold of such fertilizer or fertilizer ingredients containing at least 2,500 tons of fixed nitrogen if such production is economically justifiable and so found by the Authority

Whenever such stock in storage shall fall below the quantity containing 2,500 tons of fixed nitrogen the production of such nitrogenous plant food shall thereupon be resumed. In the event such production is not so found economically justifiable, then it shall be the duty of the Authority to operate such plants and facilities for the production of phosphoric acid and/or other fertilizer ingredients in a form available as plant food and capable of being applied directly to the soil, and in an amount and quantity equal to the production of nitrogenous plant food herein required.

(f) To lease upon such terms and conditions as may safeguard the interests of the United States and insure the mass production of fertilizer and/or fertilizer ingredients the existing plants and facilities and any such additional plants and facilities as may be constructed and any other property or properties, in whole or in part, for the benefit of the farmer and for agricultural conservation, except that there shall be no lease of power dams, power plants, and power-generating facilities: Provided, That all fertilizer produced shall be in such form and in combination with such other ingredients as shall make such fertilizer immediately available and practical for use by farmers in application to soil and crops. In the event that a lease be made, the board shall supply the said lessee the power necessary for the operation of the properties leased and for such other manufacturing purposes as the President and the board may agree upon at a price which shall be deemed fair and just by the President and the board. The lease of any such properties for the production of fertilizer or fertilizer ingredients shall contain a stipulation that the operation of any properties used in the manufacture of fertilizer or fertilizer ingredients shall be conducted in an economical manner and that there must be manufactured annually at least a prescribed amount of nitrogenous plant food of a kind and quality and in a form available as plant food and capable of being applied directly to the soil in connection with the growth of crops: And provided further, That the contract shall contain a stipulation requiring the lessee to produce within 2 years from the date such lease shall become effective, such fertilizer or fertilizer ingredients containing not less than 10,000 tons of fixed nitrogen, and shall require periodic increases in quantity of fixed nitrogen from time to time as the market demands may reasonably require, and such lease shall provide that such increases shall finally reach the maximum production capacity of such plant or plants as the board may find to be economically adapted, or susceptible of being made economi-

(g) To make alterations, modifications, or improvements in existing plants and facilities, and to construct new plants, for the production of concentrated fertilizers, and/or fertilizer ingredients, in form suitable for home mixing, or for direct application to soil, and for use in connection with growing crops, and to sell same at cost plus 4 per centum, under such rules and regulations as will insure the widest practicable distribution thereof, and preference in such sale shall be given to farmers or to their authorized purchasing agents.

(h) It shall be the duty of the board to maintain in stand-by condition nitrate plant numbered 2, or its equivalent, for the fixation of atmospheric nitrogen, for the production of explosives in the event of war or a national emergency, until the Congress shall by joint resolution release the board from this obligation.

The Authority, with the approval of the President of the United States, is hereby authorized to ascertain and declare, for the purpose of fixing the cost of fertilizers and/or fertilizer ingredients, the value of such part of any plant or plants as may be employed by the Authority in the production of fertilizer and/or fertilizer ingredients: Provided, That the total value of nitrate plant numbered 2 shall not be fixed to exceed $6,000,000.

Upon the filing of a petition for condemnation and for the purpose of ascertaining the value of the property to be acquired, and assessing the compensation to be paid, the court shall appoint three commissioners who shall be disinterested persons and who shall take and subscribe an oath that they do not own any lands, or interest or easement in any lands, which it may be desirable for the United States to acquire in the furtherance of said project, and such commissioners shall not be selected from the locality wherein the land sought to be condemned lies. Such commissioners shall receive a per diem of not to exceed $15 for their services, together with an additional amount of $5 per day for subsistence for time actually spent in performing their duties as commissioners.

It shall be the duty of such commissioners to examine into the value of the lands sought to be condemned, to conduct hearings and receive evidence, and generally to take such appropriate steps as may be proper for the determination of the value of the said lands sought to be condemned, and for such purpose the commissioners are authorized to administer oaths and subpoena witnesses, which said witnesses shall receive the same fees as are provided for witnesses in the Federal courts. The said commissioners shall thereupon file a report setting forth their conclusions as to the value of the said property sought to be condemned, making a separate award and valuation in the premises with respect to each separate parcel involved. Upon the filing of such award in court the clerk of said court shall give notice of the filing of such award to the parties to said proceeding, in manner and form as directed by the judge of said court.

Either or both parties may file exceptions to the award of said commissioners within 20 days from the date of the filing of said award in court. Exceptions filed to such award shall be heard before three Federal district judges unless the parties, in writing, in person, or by their attorneys, stipulate that the exceptions may be heard before a lesser number of judges. On such hearings such judges shall pass de novo upon the proceedings had before the commissioners, may view the property, and may take additional evidence. Upon acceptance of an award by the owners of any property herein provided to be appropriated, and the payment of the money awarded or upon the failure of either party to file exceptions to the award of the commissioners within the time specified, or upon the award of the commissioners, and the payment of the money by the United States pursuant thereto, or the payment of the money awarded into the registry of the court by the Corporation, the title to said property and the right to the possession thereof shall pass to the United States, and the United States shall be entitled to a writ in the same proceeding to dispossess the former owner of said property, and all lessees, agents, and attorneys of such former owner, and to put the United States, by its corporate creature and agent, the Corporation, into possession of said property.

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. ALMON]. [Applause.]

Mr. ALMON. Mr. Speaker, I am in favor of and will vote for the adoption of this conference report. [Applause.]

I regret that the provision of the House bill for the operation of nitrate plant no. 2 for the manufacture of fertilizer was not made a part of this bill by the conferees. The House bill required the board to operate this plant for the manufacture of fertilizer. The conferees' report authorizes the President to lease the plant within 1 year; if he fails in this, the board of directors are authorized but not required to operate plant no. 2. I sincerely hope that the board of directors appointed by the President will by that time conclude to put the plant into operation for the purpose of furnishing to the farmers a cheap and better grade of fertilizer. It is also unfortunate that the plant is not to be put in operation at once to relieve unemployment.

Plant no. 2 is one of the best plants for the fixation of atmospheric nitrogen in the world, and I am informed is the only one of the kind that is idle. The cyanamide process used in this plant is in my opinion the best process for that locality, where there is an abundance of cheap power. I sincerely hope the board will place this plant in operation for the purpose for which it was constructed, and in that way maintain it in an up-to-date running condition for the manufacture of explosives in the event of war.

I am pleased with that provision of the bill providing for the immediate construction of Cove Creek Storage Dam and that it authorizes the construction of all the other dams on the Tennessee River and its tributaries. I urged that provision be made in this bill for the immediate construction of Dam No. 3, and while this report does not specifically require the construction of this dam I hope and believe that it will be done by the board. This is not only important for the purpose of improving navigation, pre-amendment or repeal shall operate to impair the obligation of any contract made by said Corporation under any power conferred by this act.

SEC. 30. The sections of this act are hereby declared to be separable, and in the event any one or more sections of this act be held to be unconstitutional, the same shall not affect the validity of other sections of this act.

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amend the title so as to read: "An Act to improve the navigability and to provide for the flood control of the Tennessee River; to provide for reforestation and the proper use of marginal lands in the Tennessee Valley; to provide for the agricultural and industrial development of said valley; to provide for the national defense by the creation of a corporation for the operation of Government properties at and near Muscle Shoals in the State of Alabama, and for other purposes."

And the House agree to the same.

venting floods, and development of water power, but it would do more to relieve unemployment now than later on. However, there are many other good things in this bill, better than has been provided in other Muscle Shoals bills heretofore.

I am also pleased that Alabama and Tennessee will each receive 5 percent of the gross receipts and an additional 2½ percent of the gross receipts to each of said States after the completion of Cove Creek Dam.

I am happy that we have at last succeeded in enacting wise and far-reaching provisions for the rehabilitation of the Muscle Shoals plants and development of the entire Tennessee River Basin.

On behalf of the people of the Muscle Shoals district, which I have the honor to represent, I desire to express my appreciation to President Franklin D. Roosevelt and all others who have aided in bringing about this great development in the Tennessee Valley. [Applause.]

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 7 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. GOSS].

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein certain excerpts from the conference report, and public documents.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FULLER). Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, it is quite interesting to note that when this conference report came back from the Senate the name of the minority member on the Committee of Conference, the distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. JAMES], was not attached to it. I think this is the first bill with reference to Muscle Shoals development that the gentleman from Michigan has not been for.

We hardly recognize the bill as the bill H.R. 5081 which left the House recently. It has come back to us almost entirely as the "Norris bill", so-called.

I call attention to section 13 of this bill, page 54:

Sec. 13. Five percent of the gross proceeds received by the board for the sale of power generated at Dam No. 2, or from the steam plant located in that vicinity, or from any other steam plant hereafter constructed in the State of Alabama, shall be paid to the State of Alabama; and 5 percent of the gross proceeds from the sale of power generated at Cove Creek Dam, hereinafter provided for, or any other dam or steam plant located in the State of Tennessee, shall be paid to the State of Tennessee.

I call attention to the fact that regardless of what the gross revenues may be and regardless of any losses that may occur in the operation of these plants, nevertheless, 5 percent of the gross proceeds will be paid to those two States. It is possible to conceive that if perhaps a billion dollars may be invested there, as some think it will, many, many millions of dollars of gross revenue will be earned, and yet it is also equally easy to observe that we may have millions of dollars of losses. I said before, those two States will be paid out of the gross proceeds from the sale of power, regardless of what the situation is.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOSS. Yes; I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. This is supposed to be in lieu of taxes.

Mr. GOSS. It is in lieu of taxes, but I think that if a maximum of the amount of taxes paid now were placed in the bill, it would have been a much fairer basis than is in the bill.

Mr. RANKIN. If those plants had been built and operated by private enterprise, the States of Alabama and Tennessee could then levy taxes, whether the corporations made anything or not; is that not true?

Mr. GOSS. Well, we could have given it to the States willingly.

Mr. RANKIN. But the gentleman just stated that the States of Alabama and Tennessee would get this 5 percent whether the Authority lost money or not.

Mr. GOSS. That is true.

Mr. RANKIN. Now, this is in lieu of taxes—

Mr. GOSS. That is true; but the State of Alabama granted a 10-year relief in taxes to the Alabama Power Co.

Mr. RANKIN. If this property had been purchased and the plants built by private enterprise, the States of Alabama and Tennessee could still have collected taxes, whether the corporations made money or not.

Mr. GOSS. The gentleman knows it is pretty hard to have the cake and eat it too, and that is what we are doing in this bill.

Mr. RANKIN. But the justification for this is that we are taking this property from the States of Alabama and Tennessee, and this is in lieu of what taxes they would otherwise get.

Mr. GOSS. Would you take it back as a gift?

Mr. ALLGOOD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOSS. I yield.

Mr. ALLGOOD. In addition to the properties where the dams are, there will be a great area, acres and acres of land, to be condemned and removed from taxation.

Mr. GOSS. Oh, yes; but the gentleman knows that provision was not in the House bill; and there are many gentlemen on the Democratic side, if they had an opportunity to amend it, who would not want to see that provision in this bill as a matter of fairness to all of the other 46 States.

Mr. ALLGOOD. But the other body has to be taken into consideration. We cannot pass just the bill which the House wants.

Mr. GOSS. Oh, the gentleman knows better than that.

Mr. ALLGOOD. How does he know better?

Mr. GOSS. What are you going to do with this report this morning? Are you going to vote up or vote down the conference report? If you vote it down, you can send it back to conference and have this provision removed, or move then an amendment to the Senate amendment and accomplish the purpose.

Mr. ALLGOOD. We are going to vote upon the conference report and dispose of it.

Mr. GOSS. I am telling the gentleman how he can fix that, and he knows that himself.

The language of section 12 of H.R. 5081, as approved in conference, creating the Tennessee Valley authority, which authorizes construction of transmission lines within transmission distance from Government-owned power plants, is as follows:

In order to place the board upon a fair basis for making such contracts and for receiving bids for the sale of such power it is hereby expressly authorized * * * to construct, lease, purchase, or authorize the construction of transmission lines within transmission distance from the place where generated and to interconnect with other systems.

The above language is incorporated in the act as finally passed in lieu of a provision as it passed the House, as follows:

In event the board is unable to make satisfactory contracts with persons, firms, or corporations engaged in the distribution and resale of electricity as in this act provided, or for the use or purchase of such transmission lines, it is hereby expressly authorized, either from appropriations made by Congress or from funds secured from the sale of such power or from proceeds from the sale of bonds as herein authorized, with the approval of the President, to construct, lease, or authorize the construction of transmission lines within transmission distance not to exceed 400 miles from the place where the power is generated, if transmission lines are found economically justified and necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

The language agreed to in conference, being the same as it passed the Senate, admits of the construction that in order for the Federal corporation to be in position to make contracts for sale of power upon a fair basis and to receive bids for power, it is necessary as a condition precedent to negotiating contracts that the Government shall construct transmission lines for disposing of surplus power, and thus create a system to be interconnected with other systems. Whether that is the intention, the implication is that the Government will be unable to market surplus power upon a fair basis either to States, political subdivisions or to individuals, partnerships, or corporations unless it first builds transmission lines to power markets. If such is the purpose of the language employed and the legislative intent, it is not sustained by the facts surrounding the history of attempts to enact Muscle Shoals legislation during recent years.

Section 18 authorizes the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Interior to construct or contract for the construction of a power and storage dam some 300 miles upstream from Muscle Shoals on the Clinch River, a tributary of the Tennessee, at a site known as Cove Creek, and also to construct a transmission line connecting the Cove Creek power plant with the power plants at Muscle Shoals. The language of section 18 in connection with section 27 which authorizes all necessary appropriations for the purposes of the act, in effect makes mandatory the construction of a transmission line connecting the Cove Creek and Muscle Shoals power plants, estimated according to the evidence before the Military Affairs Committee and reports of Army engineers to cost $5,000,000. This mandatory duty upon an executive officer of the Government to construct an interconnecting line appears to be independent of any discretion in the board of directors of the Government corporation in event funds are appropriated by some subsequent act of Congress or authority is included in some blanket power to proceed with a program of public-works construction.

The language of the bill as it passed the House—H.R. 5081, section 16—qualified the authority to construct a transmission line from Cove Creek to Muscle Shoals as follows:

Provided, That such transmission line may be constructed only if the board is unable to make contracts satisfactory to the Authority with owners of privately owned lines for the transmission of power or for the use or the purchase of transmission lines, and if, after investigation, the Authority shall find that such transmission line is economically justifiable and necessary to carry the purposes of this act.

The report of the managers on the part of the House contains the following statement:

The language of the Senate amendment with reference to the construction of transmission lines was retained in the conference amendment. It will be remembered that the provision in the House bill requiring the board to negotiate for the use of private lines before constructing its own transmission lines laid down no specifications whatever as to just what these negotiations should be, and in no way required the board to conduct indefinite negotiations, but left the matter of the extent of the negotiations entirely to the discretion of the board. It must be remembered that the requirement in the beginning of section 13 of the House bill that the board first seek to make satisfactory contracts to purchase existing transmission lines or to make satisfactory arrangements with persons, firms, and corporations to resell and distribute surplus power was clearly intended solely in the interest of economy and lower rates to the public and could in no sense have restricted the power of the board to build new transmission lines. Further, "satisfactory" arrangements undoubtedly would have meant that the board itself would, as expressly required in said section, fix the prices at which such power should be sold to the ultimate consumer. Consequently, it was the purpose of the House bill to insure even cheaper power to the public. But the elimination in conference of the language in the House bill as to "negotiations" will not mean that the board will not probably, as good business men, seek to prevent duplication of lines and facilities by purchasing existing lines or by negotiating contracts to distribute and resell power at low stipulated rates to the public.

With reference to the construction of a transmission line from Cove Creek to Wilson Dam—Muscle Shoals—the managers stated as follows:

The provision for the construction of Cove Creek Dam and the transmission line connecting it with Wilson Dam was substantially the same in both the House bill and the Senate amendment, and the construction of these necessary projects will begin just as soon as funds are made available for that purpose at this session of Congress.

Whether or not the purpose of the language accepted in conference and incorporated in the law is to make mandatory the construction of transmission lines, including a line from Cove Creek to Wilson Dam, it appears to be the purpose of the author [Senator NORRIS, of Nebraska] of the Senate amendment to require the construction of transmission lines without regard to their economic necessity and without regard to the ability of the corporation to dispose of its surplus power on a fair basis both with respect to the public interest involved and to the ability of the corporation to dispose of the power on a reasonable basis for its market value. Such purpose of the legislation seems to be borne out by the statement of the Senator from Nebraska in the Senate during discussion of this legislation (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, May 2, 1933), as follows:

One of the first things, if this bill shall become a law, that they will be called upon to do, I think, will be to build a transmission line from Muscle Shoals to Cove Creek Dam to include the two governmental generating plants, and in order to use the power which is now going to waste and from which nobody is getting anything, in connection with the construction of Cove Creek Dam.

However, regardless of the legislative intent, as evidenced by the debates and the reports, and regardless of the plain import of the language employed in the legislation, the record of Muscle Shoals legislation since 1921 amply sustains the statement that private industry has all along shown a willingness to cooperate with the Government and has offered to purchase surplus power from the Muscle Shoals plants on a fair basis and, as to the transmission line to Cove Creek, to cooperate with the Government either in the sale at fair prices of power for construction purposes at Cove Creek or to transmit or interchange power between the two points over existing privately owned lines at reasonable prices. Thus there is no necessity for the Government to build transmission lines in order to dispose of surplus power at a fair market value.

These various proposals have been submitted by individuals and corporations reputed to be financially able to carry out their contracts—corporations of well-known business success and integrity.

The first was an offer by Mr. Henry Ford, the automobile magnate, made to the Secretary of War on the 8th day of July 1921, and transmitted by the Secretary of War to the Congress, in which Mr. Ford agreed to take title to the nitrate plants, subject to use for national defense when needed, and to make total payments of $132,515,000 for lease of the power plants for a period of 100 years—an average of $1,325,000 annually. On the basis of the allocated investment of the Government in power-plant facilities at Muscle Shoals, this would have earned a reasonable return without obligation for additional expenditures from the Public Treasury. The proposal of Mr. Ford was resubmitted at each succeeding session of Congress until in October 1924, when it was withdrawn.

On January 15, 1922, the Alabama Power Co. proposed to complete the construction of the Wilson Dam power plant at its own expense and to lease for 50 years as a licensee under the Federal Water Power Act, and to supply certain quantities of power free of cost for operation of the nitrate plants or, if not used in that manner, to pay a fair value for the same.

A subsequent proposal, submitted January 15, 1924, jointly by the Tennessee Electric Power Co., the Alabama Power Co., and the Memphis Power & Light Co. offered a total of $87,600,000 for a 50-year lease, plus such future payments as might be assessed against the lessee under the provisions of the Federal Water Power Act for benefits from headwater improvements.

On January 21, 1924, the Union Carbide Co. submitted an offer to lease and operate the nitrate and power plants for commercial chemical operations and to pay over a period of 50 years the sum of $28,324,200.

On March 9, 1926, the Air Nitrates Corporation submitted an offer to take over the entire Muscle Shoals project, to operate in a manner to serve national defense, to manufacture fertilizer and other chemicals, and to pay $75,509,000 for a 50-year lease contract. This proposal, modified in certain details, was renewed to each Congress until 1928.

In April 1926 a proposal was submitted on behalf of a group of power companies, known as Associated Southern Power Cos., to lease the entire Muscle Shoals project for a period of 50 years and to pay $88,300,000 as rental, plus certain stipulated amounts for headwater improvements estimated to increase the payments for the 50-year period to $136,300,000.

In 1928 a group of southern power companies submitted a proposal to the Secretary of War, solicited by the Secretary of War, to purchase all the commercially usable power at Wilson Dam for a period of 5 years, subject to recall either in part or in whole for such purposes as the Government might require, in which it was proposed to guarantee a minimum payment of $9,740,000. That offer, if it had been accepted, would have continued through the calendar year 1933 unless sooner canceled by the Government. According to a letter from the Chief of Engineers to Hon. Will R. Wood, Chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, dated January 16, 1931—

The guaranteed revenue which would have been derived had this contract been consummated would have been about $1,625,000 more to the end of 1930 than the revenue received under the actual agreements, and during the years 1931, 1932, and 1933 would be sufficient to pay for operating and maintenance expenses, depreciation, and approximately 4-percent interest on the investment in the hydroelectric property. However, this contract was not accepted, as its terms would have prevented the prompt disposition of the Muscle Shoals property, which it was then expected would be made by Congress at an early date.

The following is from recent testimony before the Military Affairs Committee of the House with reference to the proposed 5-year contract in 1928:

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. Mr. Barry, you could better afford, then, to pay a higher rate to the Government for this power if you had a contract that was not terminable in 30 days?

Mr. BARRY. Absolutely.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. Your opinion is that the Government would be better off if they should give you a contract terminable within a year?

Mr. BARRY. Absolutely; and we agreed to do substantially that 5 years ago. We suggested a 5-year contract with 18 months' notice of cancellation.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. How much could you afford to pay?

Mr. BARRY. At that time we agreed to pay the Government $2,220,000 a year.

The following is a brief memoranda review of the various proposals showing money payments offered for taking over the Muscle Shoals project into private industry as taken from public records:

NOTE.—Many other offers have been made for Muscle Shoals, but only these contemplated actual cash payments to Government. Others, notably Hooker-Atterbury-White and Farmers Federated Fertilizer Corporation (Slomp) offers, provided practically for operation by lessees as agents of Government and sharing of profits with Government (without guaranteed return) in lieu of cash payments.

Each of the foregoing proposals was made subject to recapture of the plants on stipulated terms, either in whole or in part, in event it became necessary for the Government to take over the plants for purposes of national defense. Likewise each of the proposals stipulated that operation of the dam and power plants would be under rules and regulations prescribed by the War Department for the protection of navigation and operation of navigation facilities.

There is ample evidence before the Congress and its committees that private power distributors within transmission distance of the plants are in position, with an extensive network of transmission lines and distribution systems covering practically the entire area, including most of the towns and cities and small communities within a radius of 200 miles, to absorb the surplus or excess power at Muscle Shoals not required for use by the Government and to pay reasonable prices. According to a letter dated August 20, 1931, from the president of the Alabama Power Co. to Senator AUSTIN, reproduced in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of May 2, 1933, that company has been willing to contract for greater volumes of power than it has purchased in the past under temporary agreements and to pay an increased price if it could be assured of reasonable notice of cancelation; that the company would be willing to lease the power-generating plants or to buy at a fair price and on reasonable terms all power generated, or buy such surplus power as may not be used for other purposes, and would cooperate in making a success of any program adopted by the Congress for operating the plants for the benefit of agriculture and industrial development in the Tennessee Valley.

Different officers representing power companies operating in the area of Muscle Shoals, in response to direct questions from members of the Military Affairs Committee, before which the question of legislation containing the language of sections 12 and 18 of the Senate bill, and before its enactment into law, was pending, testified, April 1933, as follows:

Mr. MAY. Reviewing that situation as you now understand it, what would you say would be the attitude of your power interests, for whom you appear, toward the proposition of buying from the Government at the switchboard the production of any electrical energy that may be produced at these plants?

Mr. YATES. Well, Mr. MAY, we have, on a number of occasions, tried to cooperate with the Government in any way, shape, or form in taking that energy and absorbing it in our system and distributing it.

In fact, in 1928, we spent a great deal of time and worked out a contract with the Secretary of War by which we would pay something in excess of $2,200,000 a year for the power at Muscle Shoals.

Mr. MAY. In consideration of your previous statement that your companies have now an available surplus capacity of production of about a billion kilowatt-hours per year, would it be an advantage to your companies to contract with the Government, or would that be a burden to them, even under those circumstances, with this surplus capacity available?

Mr. YATES. If we felt sure that there would never be a call for additional energy and our load would not grow, of course, we have now enough capacity.

But we feel that, having up to 1929 had a growth of 8 or 9 percent a year, compounded, we will have a market for this power, and just as rapidly as the market appears, whenever it is, we will absorb it.

Mr. ARKWRIGHT. By going out and building it up. If we have too much capacity, anything we pay for that power right now increases our cost; that is true. But you have to get some money for that power. We would like to take it, as we can build up a market and absorb it, and we recognize at once that if you sell it you have to get some money from it now, even if it does increase our cost.

So we would be prepared to negotiate with you for the purpose of purchasing power and take some of it now and take the rest of it as fast as we can build a market to absorb it and spread it over the whole area.

If in the utilization of this you use it for nitrate production at the site of the dam, and you use it to induce the location of industries at the site of the dam, such as electrical and chemical industries or heating industries that require large quantities of power at low rates, and from that improve the load factor of the system, and the rest of it you distribute over the area, over the widespread transmission systems owned by us in the area and on rates regulated by you, or by the board, I do not know what else you could do to serve the people to better advantage, and if you do it you want to do it as economically as possible.

Mr. THOMASON. Assuming this plan of development there on the Tennessee River should go through, do not you think when that is completed that then the Government can produce power much cheaper and be able to sell it to your companies at the switchboard much cheaper than you can produce it?

Mr. ARKWRIGHT. That might be, at the switchboard; but then we have to bring it to the market.

Mr. THOMASON. All right. Assuming, then, that is done and the Government, through the Tennessee authority, or whatever other agency it may select, would enter into a contract with you for the sale of that power at the switchboard and that contract also carried a provision that there shall be a maximum rate which meets the approval of the general public acting through its Federal and State commissions, providing that you shall have a reasonable profit on what you pay at the switchboard, then how could you have any objection?

Mr. ARKWRIGHT. I would not have any.

Mr. LONGLEY. . . . and I am sure the Tennessee Electric Power Co. on its behalf, or from its standpoint, is entirely willing to work and to cooperate with the Tennessee Valley Association in any way, shape, or form, so that we can take the power, under some terms and conditions fixed, if you will, by this board, and pass that on to our customers at rates, if you will, fixed by them also.

Mr. WILLKIE. . . . We dedicate our transmission and distribution lines to the utmost accomplishment of the purposes which you gentlemen are seeking to bring about under this bill. All we ask is that you not destroy our property by invading our markets or by creating a board with the power to do that and thus destroy our ability to finance.

Mr. WILLKIE. . . . Mr. McSwain asked Mr. Yates whether or not we would sell them power at Cove Creek for their uses. I say to you now—and if you wish to make it in the form of a contract, we will make it with you now—that we will sell you all the power you need for your purposes for the building of the Cove Creek Dam.

Mr. WILLKIE. . . . A common carrier must be ready to serve all who seek its service at any time that they may present themselves for such service; and, of course, you cannot do that with a transmission line. But if it is the desire for us to contract to carry this power for Cove Creek for this Government, we will carry it for you.

Mr. JAMES. . . . But we cannot sell the power at the switchboard, because you gentlemen would not buy it when you have too much power now.

Mr. WILLKIE. I have said to you, Mr. James, that we will enter into a contract, and if it wants to be accepted here, it can be taken as an offer and as acceptance if you have the legal authority to do it. I will say this now, that we will enter into a contract with you to take that power and we will pass on any saving that is made on the generation of that power to the ultimate consumer.

Furthermore, the Tennessee Electric Power Co. advised the Senator from that State, according to a telegram which appears in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of May 3, 1933, page 2791, that—

With reference to Government's proposed building of Cove Creek-Muscle Shoals transmission line at estimated cost of $6,000,000, please advise Senate that at hearing before Military Affairs Committee of House, April 14, Mr. Willkie, speaking for this company, stated that if the Government will furnish us the power at Muscle Shoals, we will deliver an equal amount at Cove Creek at reasonable cost to be fixed by the Government, or this company will sell Government all its requirements of power at Cove Creek for construction work. Based upon Government's estimates of power requirements, in our judgment, the total cost of power for entire construction of Cove Creek Dam furnished under either proposal will be less than 1 year's interest on cost of construction of proposed transmission line, and that building of transmission line in any event wholly useless and wasteful, as entire territory more than adequately served with existing transmission lines.

Therefore, with respect to the necessity for building distribution lines of any character in order to put the Government upon a fair basis, according to the foregoing testimony private companies with ample transmission lines for whatever distribution the Government may need have stated a willingness to transmit surplus power owned by the Government to consumers throughout their distribution systems and to and from Cove Creek at prices fixed by a Government agency as fair, just, and reasonable to include a reasonable return or profit on the cost of transmission and distribution plus the purchase price of the power.

Criticism upon the part of some Members of Congress that, pending final action by the Congress for making some disposition of the Muscle Shoals plants, the War Department, since the completion of Wilson Dam in 1925, has failed to secure a reasonable value for the power, is not justified by the facts. These payments, aggregating $4,955,229.18 to January 1, 1933, have been under contracts terminable at the will of the Government in order that Congress might be free at any time to take action for disposing of the project, a condition which in effect placed the power in the category of a commodity subject to delivery at the will of the seller, thus materially affecting both the ability of the purchaser to use large quantities of the commercially valuable power, or to pay a fair price for such power as could be used. In a report from the Secretary of War to the Senate (S.Doc. 222, 71st Cong., 3d sess.) it was stated that:

Under the terms of the existing agreement with the Alabama Power Co., the Executive maintains complete freedom to carry out, at any time, any provision for the disposal of this power that may be decided upon by Congress. No industry or activity of any character will be jeopardized by the prompt termination of the existing agreement, when a definite policy for the utilization of this power shall have been decided upon by Congress. The situation would be otherwise if the Department should sell the power directly to consumers. The shutting off of power to a consumer who has not the installed machinery to replace it would leave him without an immediate source of supply, would subject him to danger of serious financial loss, and certainly would embarrass the War Department and the Congress. The existing agreement affords the best obtainable return to the United States consistent with complete freedom of action.

The policy of the War Department has uniformly been opposed to entering into any arrangement that may embarrass Congress in directing the disposition of the public resources at Muscle Shoals, and this policy will be continued.

In part 2 of the same document the Secretary of War explained:

Considering the present equipment of the properties at Muscle Shoals and the fact that all contracts must be revocable without notice in order to leave this property free for whatever action Congress may decide to take, the contracts with the Alabama Power Co. give the Government by far the highest obtainable financial return.

The Secretary of War has no choice but to follow the mandate of Congress expressed in the law. No other company, individual, or municipality has offered to buy the power from the Government at a price that will equal that now being received. This is no doubt due in part to the fact that the War Department has taken the position that it will not entangle the title to the property by long-time contracts that would restrict the freedom of Congress in dealing with the subject.

It has been deemed the wiser policy to make all contracts subject to immediate cancellation or revocation, so that there would be no claims outstanding, no entanglements or clouds upon the title when Congress finally fixes the status of this project.

The foregoing statement of the Secretary of War shows that the purchaser of the power was forced to recognize that there might be a termination of the existing agreement at any time, and therefore that the purchaser must have machinery installed to replace it. In other words, the purchaser must have an immediate source of supply available at all times to replace the power as a prerequisite to purchasing on the limited basis offered by the Government. [Applause.]

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH].

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I consider this a good bill, but I cannot quite understand why the House conferees yielded on section 13. I am willing to help the Southland and my friends who have advocated this legislation for years and with whom I have gone along many times. I am going to ask whether it is not possible to eliminate the Senate amendment to section 13.

We in Illinois have been paying and paying and paying until we are just about down and out; yet, whenever we come down here for a little appropriation, we are pushed aside, we are ignored, we cannot get anything.

Mr. ALLGOOD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. No; I do not yield. I have only 2 minutes. I wish I could yield.

Mr. ALLGOOD. Did not the gentleman's State receive a contribution from the Government in regard to the World's Fair?

Mr. SABATH. That is a national fair, and it so happens that it is to be held in the greatest city in the world in the interest of the United States.

Mr. CLARKE of New York. Greatest next to New York.

Mr. SABATH. I do not know of any reason why we should give the States of Alabama and Tennessee 5 percent of the gross receipts and, moreover, 2½ percent of any additional power merely on the ground that some property may be exempted from taxation. Under the provisions of this bill the taxes that the States will lose on taxable property that will be taken away from them are very small, indeed, in comparison with the amounts that the States will receive.

I think it is manifestly unfair, unjust, and unreasonable to tax people in my State in the interest of people in other sections of the country.

I do not know whether or not I shall succeed, but I shall endeavor to eliminate the Senate amendment to section 13, which provides for unnecessarily large contributions by the entire Nation to two States. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 10 minutes. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, let me begin by saying that it seems that the Muscle Shoals proposition is the most controversial piece of legislation ever to come before the American Congress.

When I first began its study over 10 years ago as a member of the committee, I thought I could solve it, and I set about it as diligently as possible. I soon found out, however, that I could not have my own way, and in a spirit of conciliation I decided to try to settle it somehow, and the other fellow's way, if possible. But we have 435 Members of Congress, and it is impossible to settle it 435 ways. We have got to settle it somehow between the House, the Senate, and the President, and this report is the way your conferees have found it possible to do that.

Mr. PEYSER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. McSWAIN. Yes; I yield for a question.

Mr. PEYSER. May I ask whether in discussing section 13 the conferees who would not accept the elimination of a tax would not accept a tax based on the net proceeds? Good business tells me that a tax based on the percentage of the gross proceeds should not be in the bill.

Mr. McSWAIN. Let me explain that the provision in section 13 was not carried in the House bill as it passed the House. It was carried in the bills, it is true, which were introduced by the gentlemen from Alabama, Mr. ALMON and Mr. HILL, and myself—three identical bills; but this section was eliminated in the consideration of these bills by the Committee on Military Affairs. However, for years and years this has been in every bill that passed Congress and was in both bills that were vetoed, respectively, by President Coolidge and President Hoover.

As the bill passed the Senate, by a vote in the ratio of 8 to 1, the provision was included that 5 percent of the gross proceeds from the sale of power from both hydroelectric and steam plants should be paid to these States.

The conferees on the part of the House were able to persuade the conferees on the part of the Senate to agree to eliminate the 5 percent on the gross proceeds from the sale of steam power. Let me say that the foundation upon which this 5 percent is predicated is not alone the mere substitute for taxes which the State may levy; but here is the philosophy upon which it is grounded: The Supreme Court of the United States has held that the title to the bed of every navigable stream in this Nation rests in the State, not in the Federal Government. All the Federal Government has is the right to use, for purposes of interstate commerce, the water that rests upon the stream bed that belongs to the State. Presumably, therefore, the water itself belongs to the State, and undoubtedly either one of these States could, if it had wished to do so, while preserving the right of interstate commerce to the several States under the Federal Constitution, have gone in there and appropriated to itself every unit of horsepower that lay in the waters of this great stream for a distance, including navigable tributaries, of nearly 1,000 miles. All it would have to do would be to provide locks around power dams, or the State might authorize any of its private corporations to do the same thing, subject to the provisions of the Federal Water Power Act.

We eliminated the 5-percent tax on steam-generated power and the Senate had already adopted an amendment providing that the board might every 5 years, if it sees fit, change the percentage. The board, after it has been on the ground, can study this question thoroughly, and if it decides that 5 percent is too much, can give notice to the States of Alabama and Tennessee, and can reduce it, can change it, but it cannot be changed more often than once is every 5 years.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McSWAIN. I yield.

Mr. SNELL. Is there any legislative precedent of which the gentleman knows where the Federal Government has gone into a State and made an investment and then paid the State 5 percent of the gross proceeds?

Mr. McSWAIN. No; I do not know of any exact precedent, but I do not know of any state of facts entirely analogous to this.

Mr. SNELL. Is not Boulder Dam practically the same kind of situation?

Mr. McSWAIN. Perhaps it is more analogous than a Federal post-office building or anything like that.

Mr. SNELL. I do not want to enter into any extended discussion of the matter, but so far as I am personally concerned, and I am absolutely honest about it, I cannot see any reason in God's world why we should pay these two States 5 percent of the gross proceeds, and I doubt if anybody can present a logical reason for doing this. We are going in there and spending our money at the request of the States. These people want us to come there and make this development; is not that correct?

Mr. McSWAIN. Oh, certainly.

Mr. SNELL. The States themselves would not do it, and after they asked us to come in and make the development, then to seek to make us pay for it, I think is an outrage.

Mr. McSWAIN. The gentleman knows, however, that previous Congresses have actually passed bills and have agreed to conference reports containing this provision in a more aggravated form. They have heretofore given 5 percent of both hydroelectric power and steam power and they have fixed it absolutely for all time, except as the Congress itself might modify it, whereas the present bill provides that it may be modified, as I have said, by the board.

Mr. MONTET. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McSWAIN. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. MONTET. I wish to direct the gentleman's attention to subsection (1) of section 4 of the bill, where authority is granted to acquire real estate for construction of dams and reservoirs, transmission lines, power houses, and other structures, and in the same section states that the board may exercise the right of eminent domain to condemn all property that it deems necessary for carrying out the purposes of this act. Does this authorize the board to acquire privately owned power houses, reservoirs, and transmission lines, either by purchase or condemnation, wherever and whenever the board desires the same for carrying out the purposes of this act?

Mr. McSWAIN. I would say in answer to the gentleman's question, and I think I understand what the gentleman is driving at, that the board would have such power, because it is given the right not only to condemn necessary real estate but also to condemn necessary property. Therefore if the board judges that a particular transmission line now privately owned is necessary and desirable for its purposes, then under the broad language of that section I think it would have the right to say so, and to condemn, and the power to condemn would certainly bring any privately owned power company to reasonable terms as to selling price.

Mr. MONTET. Necessarily, I do not wish to engage in any controversy with the chairman of my committee. However, after a careful reading of the language, I am thoroughly unable to agree with the gentleman.

May I ask the gentleman one more question?

Mr. McSWAIN. Certainly.

Mr. MONTET. Subsection (j) states that the corporation—

Shall have power to construct dams, reservoirs, power houses, power structures, transmission lines, navigation projects, and incidental works in the Tennessee River and its tributaries, and to unite the various power installations into one or more systems by transmission lines.

Is this intended to give the board broad, discretionary authority to construct transmission lines independent of the provisions of section 12?

Mr. McSWAIN. Certainly. This undertakes to give the board the right to construct transmission lines in any direction the board decides to be necessary to interconnect the various power stations into one superpower system, or into two or more subsidiary superpower systems.

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

Mr. MONTET. Then the gentleman holds that this power is independent of the power given the board under section 12?

Mr. McSWAIN. I do. I do not think it is in conflict, but is corroborative of it.

Mr. MONTET. May I call the gentleman's attention to the bond provision of the House bill, which provides that the bonds of the corporation shall constitute a first lien on the net income, and so forth, of the corporation after paying cost of maintenance, and so forth? It is also provided that the bonds shall be issued on the credit of the United States. The bond provision of the Senate bill, section 15, provides that in the construction of any future dam, steam plant, or other facility to be used in whole or in part for the generation of hydroelectric power, the board is authorized to issue bonds for payment in part or in full of that part of the development that is allocated to the production of hydroelectric power, and pledges the net proceeds from the sale of power to States, counties, and municipalities, while the conference report authorizes the pledging of the credit of the United States for bonds issued for future dams and other facilities used in whole or in part for generation or transmission of power.

It omits any provision that they should be constructed by the credit of the Government or net proceeds derived from its operation. Does this mean that appropriations from the Treasury shall be limited to navigation, flood control, national defense, or other constitutional functions, and that funds necessary for power development should be obtained from the sale of bonds?

Mr. McSWAIN. As I understand the conference report, the credit of the Government is pledged to support these bonds, but the net revenues from the sale of power are not pledged, because in other parts of the bill the board is given the right to use the proceeds from the sale of power in order to carry on its works of construction, either additional transmission lines or additional dams, and it was realized there was a conflict between these provisions; and while it is understood that the board will pay the interest on the bonds, as, of course, they are to be the primary obligation of the board, and yet the Government, virtually, under the provisions of this bill, guarantees them, in a way analogous to the Panama Canal bonds.

Mr. MONTET. I do not know whether the gentleman missed my question or I missed the gentleman's answer.

This means that the appropriation made by the Treasury shall be limited to navigation, flood control, and like purposes, or does it mean that the power development shall be that obtained from the sale of bonds?

Mr. McSWAIN. That was the scheme in the Senate provision, but under the language here it is possible to issue bonds for any work contemplated. In other provisions of the bill the allocation is to flood control, navigation, national defense, and power, to be observed for the purpose of book-keeping, to ascertain whether or not the power provisions are earning a proper income on that part of the investment.

Mr. MONTET. Then the gentleman holds that the board is authorized to use the money appropriated to construct power and transmission lines?

Mr. McSWAIN. Undoubtedly; and there is no doubt that before the session is over the Congress will appropriate money to build Cove Creek Dam. Under the general provisions of the bill it will appropriate the money for that purpose.

Mr. MONTET. As to the funds derived from the sale of bonds and the appropriations made by Congress, in the gentleman's opinion, would the board have a right to use such funds for flood control, navigation, and power?

Mr. McSWAIN. Exactly.

Mr. MONTET. On page 18 of the conference report, next to the last paragraph, you say:

The provision for the construction of Cove Creek Dam and the transmission line connecting it with Wilson Dam was substantially the same in both the House bill and the Senate amendment, and the construction of these necessary projects will begin just as soon as funds are made available for that purpose at this session of Congress.

Is it intended that the appropriation shall be made from the Treasury of the United States for the power plant at Cove Creek Dam and transmission lines, or to use the power for the sale of bonds, as provided on page 15 of the conference report?

Mr. McSWAIN. Yes; money will be appropriated to build Cove Creek Dam. I now yield to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. McGugin].

Mr. McGUGIN. The statement of the conferees says:

The provision for the construction of Cove Creek Dam and the transmission line connecting it with Wilson Dam was substantially the same in both the House bill and the Senate amendment, and the construction of these necessary projects will begin just as soon as funds are made available for that purpose at this session of Congress.

Does that mean that the construction of the transmission line is mandatory?

Mr. McSWAIN. It is optional. The board is not compelled to complete Cove Creek Dam, it is not compelled to build a single transmission line. It has the power to do it, but it is not required to do it. It is not mandatory.

Mr. FREAR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McSWAIN. I yield.

Mr. FREAR. The provision was called to the attention of the committee of 5 percent to be collected from the gross proceeds and turned over to the States. Is it not a fact that the Alabama statutes provide that the Alabama Power Co. may today, and has been for 20 years, empowered to condemn land for the benefit of that power company, and also, if I remember correctly, for 10 years to have an exemption from taxes on the land until they get their organization in shape?

Mr. McSWAIN. I am sorry, but I am not able to answer the gentleman as to the statutes of Alabama. I cannot answer the gentleman, but I will try and get the information.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McSWAIN. Yes.

Mr. DONDERO. Under section 13 the State of Alabama and the State of Tennessee are assured of a certain income from that 5 percent. Has any effort been made upon the part of the Government to assign the rights of the United States Government in that river to the two States, except such rights as it may need in time of emergency, such as war?

Mr. McSWAIN. As I have explained, the United States has no right in the river. It has the right to travel up and down on the surface of the water in order to carry on interstate commerce, but the Supreme Court has held that the title to the bed of the river, and, therefore, the title to the water resting on the bed of the river, is in the State through which it flows.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McSWAIN. For a question.

Mr. GREEN. I am wondering if the conference report protects the part of the bill providing for the manufacture of fertilizer.

Mr. McSWAIN. The board is authorized to manufacture fixed nitrogen and fertilizer and fertilizer ingredients and sell them. It is authorized to do so, but it is not compelled to do so any more than, as I said a moment ago, it is compelled to build a single transmission line or Cove Creek Dam. It has the power, but it is not mandatory.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Under section 13, 5 percent of the gross proceeds is to be given to the States of Alabama and Tennessee. I understand the reason that is in the bill is that it is in lieu of taxes.

Mr. McSWAIN. It is in there because they voted it in there.

Mr. FREAR. And the Alabama Power Co. does not pay taxes for 10 years after it condemns the land.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, that provision was in the law, but it was repealed about 10 years ago.

Mr. FREAR. Then I understand from the gentleman that that provision was in the law, but has now been repealed. Having been in the law, it was for the purpose of enabling the Alabama Power Co. to condemn land and to go on and prosecute its work for 10 years without paying taxes. Why should the Federal Government be required at this time immediately to pay 5 percent out of its gross proceeds?

Mr. McSWAIN. That is the question that I asked while in conference, but we have to agree on something; we have to get together if we are ever going to have any legislation on this matter at all.

Mr. FREAR. Why not make it 10 percent?

Mr. McSWAIN. It used to be 10 percent in former bills in Congress, and we cut it down to 5.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McSWAIN. For a question.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. Does the gentleman know of any similar project where the net proceeds are more than 5 percent of the gross?

Mr. McSWAIN. No; I do not. I think that is very liberal, myself.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. If that is true, then we are binding ourselves to turn all the net proceeds over to these two States, while the United States Government is furnishing all the money and taking all the risk.

Mr. McSWAIN. Oh, no; we are not turning all the net proceeds over, or any part of the net proceeds. We are turning 5 percent of the gross proceeds over.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McSWAIN. Yes; I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. I want to congratulate my friend from South Carolina [Mr. McSwain] and his Committee on Military Affairs for effecting an agreement with the Senate on this bill. Such action assures its passage, and it will be signed and become a law in a short time. The President is to be commended for being able to iron out many important disagreements and for helping the conferees to get together.

But there is one very objectionable feature of this bill which ought to be corrected before we pass it into law. And it can be easily corrected, and yet not delay the measure beyond a few hours. I refer to the provision which obligates the payment of 5 percent of the gross proceeds to each of the States of Alabama and Tennessee. It should read 5 percent of the net profits, and not 5 percent of the gross proceeds. What we ought to do is to vote down the conference report and then move immediately to concur in the agreed amendments with the amendment that "gross proceeds" shall be changed to "net profits." That would not delay the measure more than an hour, for I feel confident that the Senate would approve such action promptly, and the bill could go to the White House this afternoon for the signature of the President.

I feel sure that neither Senator NORRIS nor any other Senator outside of Alabama and Tennessee would raise any objection whatever to such change. Naturally, the 2 Senators from Alabama and the 2 Senators from Tennessee would object to such action, as they want their respective States to receive this 5 percent of the gross proceeds. But other Senators would not object to changing it to "5 percent of the net profits", because that percentage is all that would be equitable and just.

This project will be a great bonanza for both Alabama and Tennessee. All property holdings in that immediate vicinity will double, treble, and quadruple in value. Factories will spring up all along these bodies of water backed up by Government dams in this river and its tributaries. Alabama and Tennessee will both be greatly enriched.

I have been fighting power trusts and monopolies all my life. I am speaking against them, and for the people, when I ask that this provision be changed, so that "gross proceeds" will read "net profits." I am for this bill. I am backing the President in his program. I am for developing Muscle Shoals. I was one of the four who stood on this floor with LaGuardia and Hill, of Maryland, right after the World War, and made a fight to preserve Muscle Shoals for the people of the United States. It was our fight then made that eventuated in preserving Muscle Shoals. We did preserve it. We kept the monopolies from gobbling it up. With "gross proceeds" changed to "net profits" I am just as strongly in favor of this bill as Chairman McSWAIN, or Senator NORRIS, or our good colleague, Mr. ALMON, of Alabama, the father of Muscle Shoals. But the only way to change "gross proceeds" to "net profits" is to vote down the conference report, and then pass this simple amendment, which will take but a few minutes. I want to ask the chairman of the committee if it is not a fact that the only way to change "gross proceeds" to "net profits" is the one way I have mentioned, and that is to vote down the conference report, and then pass the amendment?

Mr. McSWAIN. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. Then why can we not do that? It should be done.

Mr. McSWAIN. I will tell the gentleman why. It is because the Senate of the United States has voted 8 to 1 against such a proposition. There were 12 votes on the floor of the Senate in favor of the House bill as it stood, and that is all. It is futile to go back.

Mr. BLANTON. Most of the Senators would not care. I have seen them vote over there 96 to 0, and still change when some good reason required it.

Mr. McSWAIN. Yes; but maybe they did not have the White House with them at that time, as they now have.

Mr. BLANTON. I think the White House would prefer the change.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McSWAIN. Yes.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. Is the fact that the Senate is 8-to-1 wrong on this proposition any reason why you should be wrong also?

Mr. McSWAIN. But the Senate said that we were wrong. There is no absolute measure of truth in such a case. It is a matter of opinion, and parliamentary government can function only by compromising differences of opinion.

Mr. BLANTON. While I am for Muscle Shoals, and for this bill, I feel that it is my duty to do all within my power to get this provision changed, so that instead of paying to Alabama and Tennessee 5 percent each of the gross proceeds, we would pay them only 5 percent of the net profits; hence I shall vote to disapprove the conference report, so that we can then amend it and change "gross proceeds" to "net profits." With this change I am just as strongly for the bill as is any other Member of this House.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McSWAIN. For a short question.

Mr. McFADDEN. I do not want to ask a question, but I want to make a statement.

Mr. McSWAIN. Very well; please let it be brief.

Mr. McFADDEN. I think congratulations should be extended to the States of Tennessee and Alabama at this time and to the Du Pont interests and Henry Ford and the Canadian-British power interests for what they are getting in this bill from Uncle Sam. Also I want to extend my sympathy to Uncle Sam and the people of the United States—they have lost out—and my congratulations to Senator NORRIS for delivering these bouquets to these States and these great corporate interests. [Applause.]

Mr. McSWAIN. And I want to say that I do not think the gentleman is at all justified in coupling the States of Alabama and Tennessee in the same congratulatory message with the names of the Du Pont interests and the Power Trust.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McSWAIN. Yes.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, a great deal has been said here about what Alabama and Tennessee are to receive. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. McSwain] has already stated to the House some of the privileges that the States of Alabama and Tennessee are voluntarily surrendering to the United States Government—the river bed and all those things. In addition to that I call attention to the fact that the building of Cove Creek Dam is going to flood 75,000 acres of good land in east Tennessee, which will be taken out of taxation and which cannot be hereafter assessed either by the State or the county, and in addition to that the building of these other dams will flood lands which will deprive the States of Tennessee and Alabama of taxes that would otherwise be collected, and that are now being collected for the benefit of these States.

In addition to this, neither of these States will have power to tax any transmission lines or other improvements made by the Federal Government, and these rights are being surrendered for all time. Then, too, the bill authorizes the board to review this allowance for these States every 5 years. Certainly it was only fair to reimburse these States in part for their loss of public revenue, and the Federal Government is amply protected.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from South Carolina has expired.

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Hill].

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I want every Member of the House to know that under section 13 the Government will pay not one cent in lieu of taxes to either the State of Alabama or the State of Tennessee for any part of the properties on the Tennessee River that are used for governmental purposes. The payment in lieu of taxation will only be made where the Government goes beyond governmental purposes, into what we might term an incidental purpose.

Mr. PARSONS. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Yes; I yield briefly.

Mr. PARSONS. How much is the estimated revenue of 5 percent supposed to go to those States?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. That would depend on how much is derived from the sale of power and how much power is sold.

Let me tell how the figure of 5 percent was arrived at. Perhaps the best operated and most successful municipal power plant in the entire United States is that of the city of Tacoma, Wash. Power rates there are very cheap, so cheap, in fact, that the farmers within a radius of 50 miles of Tacoma buy their power at fabulously low prices. In the city of Tacoma the municipal plant pays to the city, not 5 percent but 7½ percent of the gross proceeds derived from the sale of power.

The record shows that in many cases private power companies pay as high as 10, 11, and 12 percent of their gross proceeds in taxes. Some municipal plants pay even higher than that in lieu of taxes. If these Tennessee Valley properties were constructed by private companies there would be no doubt about the payment of taxes. The private power companies, certainly, under the laws of Alabama, would have to pay ad-valorem taxes and a kilowatt or severance tax. This would mean an ad-valorem tax to the State, an ad-valorem tax to the county, an ad-valorem tax to the municipality if the property happened to be located in a municipality, and an ad-valorem tax to the school district in addition to the kilowatt tax.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. I yield.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. In this bill there is no provision for any tax to be paid anybody except the State.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Yes; that is correct.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. How about the counties and municipalities?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. So far as counties, municipalities, and school districts are concerned, that will be a matter that the State will have to adjust and determine when the money is paid over to the State.

Mr. PEYSER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. I yield.

Mr. PEYSER. Is it not possible that under this provision you may be paying taxes out of capital?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. No, no.

Mr. PEYSER. Why not?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. If you do not take in any proceeds, you would not pay any taxes, whereas a private power company must pay taxes whether it takes in a dollar.

Mr. PEYSER. But if money is coming in there is first the primary expense of operation. They get the proceeds of the income without taking into account the expense of operation; is that not true?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Does the gentleman mean a private power company?

Mr. PEYSER. Yes.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. But a private power company pays its taxes whether it takes in a single dollar or whether it does not. Now, I cannot yield further. My time is very brief.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Well, yes; briefly.

Mr. RICH. Does the gentleman not believe it would be the best thing for the Federal Government and the taxpayers of this country if we delivered this property over to the States of Alabama and Tennessee, without paying taxes for the balance of our lives?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. No; I do not agree with that thought at all.

Mr. RICH. Well, I should like to say to the gentleman we should like to give it to them, as far as I am concerned, so that we will never have anything more to do with it.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. I decline to yield further. Of course, if the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] had his way, he would doubtless turn it all over to a private power company. Under the bill the gentleman introduced, that would be the result.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Yes; I yield briefly.

Mr. RANKIN. Under the provisions of this bill the Government may build transmission lines, not only to towns and cities but even into the rural communities.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Certainly. The conference report adopted the House language, emphasizing rural electrification.

Mr. RANKIN. Every one of those lines must be built either through the State of Alabama or the State of Tennessee?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. That is correct.

Mr. RANKIN. And therefore the Government will be relieved of paying taxes on those lines, which would be unloaded onto the ultimate consumer, if these lines were privately owned, or if taxes were paid by the Government instead of this 2½-percent allowance to each of the States of Alabama and Tennessee.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Of course, there will be no tax on those lines.

Mr. GOSS. Will the gentleman yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. No; I cannot yield for that purpose.

The distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL] asked whether or not there was any precedent for payment in lieu of taxes as far as the Federal Government was concerned. I would call the gentleman's attention to the fact that where the Federal Government goes into a State and sets up a forestry reserve, when the Government sells trees from that reserve, the State in which the reserve is located gets between 30 and 35 percent of what the Government derives from the sale of the trees.

Mr. KELLER. The net.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. No, no; from the sale.

Mr. KELLER. The net sale. I have a letter showing it.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. The Senate passed on this proposition, as the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. McSWAIN] has said, and in very decisive fashion declined to strike the section out of the bill. It is part and parcel of President Roosevelt's program for the development of the Tennessee River. He recognizes that when the Government goes beyond governmental functions, it should make some payments to the States in lieu of taxes.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. I yield.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Does not the gentleman believe that the States of Alabama and Tennessee as a result of the construction of this great project will get increased taxing values?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. There will be an increase, but the private power companies would have brought about the development and paid taxes too. They wanted to do it. We had great difficulty in particular in keeping them from coming to Cove Creek and getting that great development.

Mr. TAYLOR of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. I yield.

Mr. TAYLOR of South Carolina. Can the gentleman tell us whether or not the original bill providing for Muscle Shoals contained a provision whereby the States were to receive a percentage of the gross earnings in lieu of taxes?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. The original provision was section 124 of the National Defence Act, just one section in that bill. It was very short and concise, and made no reference to taxation whatever.

Mr. TAYLOR of South Carolina. Will the gentleman yield for a further question?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. I yield.

Mr. TAYLOR of South Carolina. If the Congress were now considering the initial bill setting up this undertaking and the river were a different one, for instance the Ohio River, or the Savannah River, does the gentleman think the State of Tennessee would ask for 5 percent of the gross earnings?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. I think they would do it; I certainly do.

Mr. FORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. I yield.

Mr. FORD. Will not the people of Tennessee get a large increment in the form of lowered power rates by reason of this improvement?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. We hope they will; and, if it is the success we want it to be, they certainly will, and we will then have a yardstick for the benefit of all the people of the country.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. I yield.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Will not that benefit the people of one section, with the rest of the people of the United States having to pay the bill?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. No. It will benefit all sections of the country; not one particular section. It will benefit North, East, South, and West—all of them.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. But is there not a 400-mile limit?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. That limitation is no longer in the bill.

Mr. TAYLOR of South Carolina. As a matter of fact, this 5 percent to the States will not reimburse them for what the States will actually lose in the way of taxes.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Not only that, but with the construction of Cove Creek Dam one entire county will be wiped out and a substantial part of two other counties will be wiped out by this one dam alone. The Cove Creek Dam will create a lake of 3,500,000 acre-feet. All of this land, of course, will be taken out of taxation.

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Brown] 2 minutes.

Mr. BROWN of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, we are doing this morning just exactly what the power interests of this country have depended on us to do every time this bill comes up.

I have no defense to make of the provision of the bill granting 5 percent of the gross returns to the States. We in our State would be glad to have the development without that cost to the Federal Government; but also may I say that if you really want this development to take place you ought not to let this thing stand in your way.

On page 55 of the bill you will find that the board in charge of this development can at any time revise this rate in any manner it sees fit.

No law is stronger than the agency administering it. If you have a good board, it will not take them more than 1 day to make a change and put into effect the rate that will fit the occasion. If you have a bad board, you have got a bad bill.

Now, another thing: Here on the floor this morning we are doing just what the Power Trust wants us to do; we are going to fight among ourselves, we are going to disagree, we are going to tie this legislation up, and they will win their point here while you and I who want this type of legislation are frittering away our chances and losing the opportunity.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. And there is not a single man on the other side of the aisle who would vote for the bill even if section 13 were eliminated entirely.

Mr. BROWN of Kentucky. The gentleman is correct. We could strike this section out of it, and yet they would not vote for it. We could strike out of the bill any section to which they said they objected, and still they would not vote for it. We could not present this bill in a form in which they would vote for it.

If the Members of the House have confidence in the President's board, give him the opportunity to do this work.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, when this question first arose, I objected to the provision with reference to this percentage allowed the States of Tennessee and Alabama; and if it were an original proposition, I do not know that I would agree to it now; but this is simply a peg on which the opposition attempts to hang their excuse for opposing the administration's entire Muscle Shoals program. As a matter of fact, as the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Hill] said, the Republicans, or at least a majority of them, voted against the bill the other time; they have voted against it for 12 years. I saw them kill it in 1921, before this proposition was ever mentioned.

This is the bill the President of the United States wants. [Applause.] It is the best Muscle Shoals bill that has ever been brought before the American Congress. It marks the beginning of a policy of power development and distribution that will rescue the American people from the clutches of the Power Trust that is now plundering them from one end of this country to the other. [Applause.]

I sincerely trust that every Member of this House, and especially every Democrat, will support this measure. He that is not with us is against us. A vote for this conference report is a vote for the American people as against the Power Trust. A vote against it is a vote against the American people and in the interest of the Power Trust. [Applause.]

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

MUSCLE SHOALS

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. Green].

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, I was most interested in the statement of Chairman McSWAIN recently that the Muscle Shoals Authority would be empowered to manufacture fertilizer.

Of course, we are all interested in the power provision, but as a farm-relief measure I believe the manufacturing of fertilizer at Muscle Shoals will mean more to bring relief to the agriculturists of our Nation than any other bill the Congress can pass.

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN. I yield.

Mr. MAY. Does the gentleman understand that this bill does not provide for the manufacture of fertilizer?

Mr. GREEN. It provides that the Muscle Shoals Authority can manufacture fertilizer, and it is expected to actually do it.

Mr. MAY. There is nothing in the bill to compel it. I wish this provision was mandatory.

Mr. GREEN. And I hope the Democrats on this side of the aisle will not be misled by Republican propaganda to vote against this conference report, because I remember that two Republican Presidents have vetoed our efforts to utilize Muscle Shoals for the interest of the people of our country by the production of power and the manufacture of fertilizer. The soil of the farms in many sections of the country is depleted and leached. It requires liberal application of fertilizer. This is particularly true of the farms in the States of the Southeast. My State consumes a very large amount of commercial fertilizer. We have been paying tribute to the Chilean Nitrates Corporation; this must cease. Muscle Shoals can and should produce this fertilizer at half the cost now paid by our farmers. The bill should be promptly enacted and these reliefs and benefits realized by our farmers who are now so sorely in need. [Applause.]

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute.

I want to say to the membership of the House that a bill like this, with 30 different sections, cannot be condemned and ought not to be condemned, because of some one item in it that some individual Member of the House does not like.

I have never voted for any major matter during my service here that there has not been something in it that I could pick out and find objection to. But I may say to all those who have followed these efforts through all these years to bring about effective legislation to settle this matter and put it behind us, that to vote for this conference report is the only hope that the American people have for a solution of this problem.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to agree to the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the adoption of the conference report.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, on the adoption of the report I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 258, nays 112, answered "present" 1, not voting 60, as follows:

MUSCLE SHOALS—EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have 5 legislative days in which to extend their own remarks on the conference report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. FREAR. Mr. Speaker, under permission given by the House, I am stating certain facts that may not be generally known regarding the Muscle Shoals bill passed by the House. Older Members may recollect that in 1914 the river and harbor bill provided for an appropriation of $18,750,000, as I now remember the amounts, for the Muscle Shoals canal and river improvement then proposed. Believing it to be an unwarranted appropriation, and although unanimously reported by the committee, that item was opposed and eventually stricken from the bill.

It later appeared in the military bill in the form of a proposal recommended by the Army engineers in a report for production of nitrates to be embodied in the military bill then before the House. Although unanimously reported by that committee, the proposition, with the consent of the chairman of the committee, and the amount named in the engineers' report, if I now remember it correctly, of $20,000,000 was stricken from the military bill. Alabama and Tennessee have naturally been anxious for this development by the Federal Government.

During the war the Muscle Shoals proposal for the manufacture of nitrates and national defense was undertaken by the President, with the support of Congress, and the various dams and water-power machinery then constructed for the alleged purpose of manufacturing nitrates and power for general use of industries. The long series of negotiations, bills introduced and sometimes passed, are familiar to those who were actively engaged in seeking to make some profitable use of the improvements placed by the Government upon the Tennessee River at Muscle Shoals. This is all past history but is of interest leading up to the bill in which the conference report has been agreed to today.

I have been in favor of utilizing the water power and have sought to vote for the proposals embodied in what is known as the Norris bill. It has been stated to me by a leading member of the Military Affairs Committee that under the terms of the present bill the original purpose of manufacturing fertilizer for agricultural use and nitrates for national defense has been practically abandoned, especially due to doubtful value of the water power for manufacturing nitrates. It is claimed for the bill that it will authorize the use of the plant now at Muscle Shoals for manufacture of electric power and through that means will be of value for the development of the valley of the Tennessee.

The proposed expenditures by the Federal Government have been estimated at anywhere from $100,000,000 to several times that amount, to be borne by general taxation of the 48 States, and the success of the venture is more or less problematical, according to those who have carefully studied and been associated with its legislation. I am in favor of the Government's utilizing the proposal, even though it takes from the picture the fertilizer proposition heretofore originally offered in its favor and also the manufacture of nitrates so strenuously demanded for national defense. In other words, it has been an elephant on the Government's hands for which the people of Alabama have been insistent and should be disposed of for the best interests of the people of the whole country as well as for the States where located.

Bearing in mind it has been urged for the development of the Tennessee Valley and that large expenditures will be made by the Government, including moneys for the condemnation of lands usually costing the Government the highest price paid, far beyond any market sales, according to experience, to my mind there should be no further contribution or expenditures made or expected from the Government.

The proposal that the Government should make continued contributions to the States of Alabama and Tennessee under section 13 of the act is abhorrent to every fair-minded taxpayer, because it means that, in addition to the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars for dams, power houses, machinery, and so forth, the Government is to pay for the privilege of developing power for use of residents of Tennessee and Alabama. That this construction was placed upon section 13 of the bill is certain from the fact that the House conferees struck from the Senate bill that provision on the theory that 46 of the 48 States would be taxed unfairly for these developments in addition to the money expended on the plant and other activities. The House conferees have stated on the floor that section 13 was insisted upon by the Senate conferees and that, in addition to large amounts certain to be expended upon this enormous plant for the generation of power, and apparently for that alone, a further amount of—

Five percent of the gross proceeds received by the board for the sale of power generated at Dam No. 2, or from the steam plant located in that vicinity, or from any other steam plant hereafter constructed in the State of Alabama, shall be paid to the State of Alabama; and 5 percent of the gross proceeds from the sale of power generated at Cove Creek Dam, hereinafter provided for, or any other dam or steam plant located in the State of Tennessee, shall be paid to the State of Tennessee. Upon completion of said Cove Creek Dam the board shall ascertain how much excess power is thereby generated at Dam No. 2 and any other dam hereafter constructed by the Government of the United States on the Tennessee River, in the State of Alabama, or in the State of Tennessee, and from the gross proceeds of the sale of such excess power 2½ percent shall be paid to the State of Alabama and 2½ percent to the State of Tennessee. These provisions shall apply to any other dam that may hereafter be constructed and controlled and operated by the board on the Tennessee River or any of its tributaries, the main purpose of which is to control flood waters and where the development of electric power is only incidental in the operation of such flood-control dam.

This provision, rejected by the House committee but insisted upon by the Senate committee, if correctly understood, is grossly unjust to the Federal Government and cannot be defended.

In debate it was admitted, while the conferees' report was being discussed, that the Alabama Power Co., a private corporation, under the statutes of the State of Alabama, was originally given power to condemn private property for its own use in addition, as I stated from recollection, the property condemned was for a period of 10 years, to be used by the Alabama Power Co. without payment of any taxes to the States in which located. This was a legislative act of the Alabama State Legislature. It was admitted in discussion that the law read substantially as I stated, but it had been repealed, presumably because the Alabama Power Co. had secured all its needed land and the period of 10 years since condemnation had long since expired.

The proposal to require the Federal Government as an initial proposition to provide a tremendous power plant free of expense to the people of Alabama and Tennessee and in addition require a 5 percent gross-earnings tax to be paid to these States beginning from the time the power is sold whether for flood purposes or any other improvements beneficial to the locality, is beyond understanding and cannot be defended excepting by might of the tremendous voting power which the majority have exercised in the agreement to the conferees' report.

I repeat I would have favored the passage of the bill without section 13, which has been set forth because it seems to be the only method of utilizing the property now owned by the Federal Government; but I cannot bring myself to vote for that provision of 5 percent gross earnings given to the States that ought to have been eliminated. It was suggested that the bill be sent back to conference with a change in section 13 to provide that only 5 percent of the net earnings be given to the two States, supposedly in lieu of taxes. This was far more than was ever asked for from the private Alabama Power Co.; but as the law now reads, no matter what losses are suffered by the Federal Government from the operation of this plant, the Government will, as a part of such loss, contribute 5 percent of its gross earnings toward the upkeep of the States of Tennessee and Alabama. Nowhere, I submit, in all legislative history in any State nor with the Federal Government can be found a provision equal to this.

It has been said in defense that the board of three members would see that the matter was fairly conducted, whatever that may be; and it is for that reason the statement appearing on page 19 of the conference report is of especial interest, because it provides as follows:

With such a responsibility upon the President in choosing the right men, and with such a responsibility resting upon the consciences of the men thus chosen, we cannot believe that there will be failure. When the race advances, it must do so along the road of faith in ourselves and our fellows. The members of the board are given the term of 9 years so there may be consistency and continuity in the policies of the Authority.

It is hard to understand how any legislators writing in the words "responsibility resting upon the consciences of the men thus chosen" could have also written that their term of office should last 9 years, so that it would exceed by any possible mishap the allotted 8-year term in which a President, if reelected, would serve. In other words, it has been contended that such board would be practically permanent for many years; and acting under this provision of the law, the remaining 46 States interested in the conduct of the Muscle Shoals proposition will be helpless to interfere or modify conditions here placed in the bill.

I voted to send the bill to the Senate, but the provision has been written in giving 5 percent of the gross earnings to the two States and is abhorrent to every business sense. It should have been stricken from the conferees' report before its passage by the House.

Mr. CARPENTER of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker and Members, when the Power Trust rears its ugly head party lines are forgotten. Even the wishes of the President are cast aside while greed stalks through these halls. There is every evidence here today that power-company venom has been spread until its poison has affected far too great a number of men here who should be thinking more of the masses of people and less of the welfare of utility corporations.

In my opinion, the greatest name written in the RECORD today is that of Senator GEORGE W. NORRIS, of Nebraska, the man who drafted the major portion of this bill. His long fight against special privilege, and for the people, has brought down upon his graying head the wrath and maledictions of the Power Trust. Although he has been vindicated hundreds of times, there still are some who will make remarks of rankest disparagement against him. Some of those remarks have been made here today. But where the most of us have given this proposal only a cursory glance, Senator NORRIS has devoted years of study to it.

Perhaps the people of Nebraska will get no direct benefit from Muscle Shoals and its development. It may be granted even that Nebraska people will be charged a trifling sum to help develop Muscle Shoals. But do not for one moment believe that there are more than a handful of citizens of that State who begrudge the cost of Muscle Shoals. For many, many years we have sent GEORGE W. NORRIS to the House and to the Senate because he has been right a thousand times against being wrong one time. When Senator NORRIS says this proposition is good, the people of Nebraska know it is good. The opposition to this bill comes directly from the Power Trust which Senator NORRIS has fought so many years. Those who vote against this bill today are tools of the Power Trust, though unwittingly in some cases.

The part I played in this legislation was small. On this floor I objected to the McSwain-Hill bill because I wanted the Norris bill. I finally went to the White House to learn which of the measures the President favored. I was informed there that Mr. Roosevelt preferred the Norris bill. My objection did no more than delay consideration of the measure for a few days, but in that time the President asked for action. The President called the House committee and Mr. NORRIS to the White House, and, as you know, instructed the conferees to bring out the Norris bill. My people sent me to Congress to assist Senator NORRIS when he needed help. I did it and am proud that I did.

Indirectly the passage of the Muscle Shoals bill will materially aid Nebraska and every State in the Union. In our State we have power sites on rivers, and we want to develop those sites. The defeat of the power trust at Muscle Shoals will give us renewed courage to go forward with our own proposals in Nebraska. Our people are in a hand-to-hand struggle with the power-trust octopus. The hold it has upon us must be broken. The House of Representatives today should courageously put to rout the battalion of lobbyists and power-company representatives who have infested the Capitol for weeks while this legislation has been considered. If this Congress keeps its good name, it must decisively defeat the power interests by voting 100 percent for the Norris Muscle Shoals bill.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, there is one reason, and one only, why I cannot vote for the adoption of this conference report on the Muscle Shoals bill in its present form. I shall never vote to perpetrate a wrong, if I know it, and in my judgment this conference agreement unjustifiably and indefensibly wrongs the taxpayers of the United States when it obligates, as a gift to the States of Alabama and Tennessee, 5 percent of the gross proceeds from the sale of power developed within their State borders.

What possible excuse is there for this favoritism? We are told that Tennessee and Alabama will be made to blossom as the rose with the money that will be poured from Uncle Sam's cornucopia into this great development enterprise. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. TAYLOR] recently drew upon his prophetic vision and told the House of Representatives that it will establish another "Garden of Eden" in Tennessee. Equally roseate prophecies have been made as to what it will do for Alabama.

As the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] has so well said today, this project will be a great bonanza for both Tennessee and Alabama. It requires no gift of vaticination to foresee that both Commonwealths will be enormously enriched. Property holdings for hundreds of miles around will soar in value, and factories will spring up, population will thicken, dwellings will be erected, and the stimulus given to property values will tremendously increase the tax duplicates and will swell the revenues that will pour into the treasuries of Tennessee and Alabama by reason of increased taxation.

Why, in the name of heaven, on top of all of these benefits should we give to the States of Tennessee and Alabama 5 percent of the gross proceeds from the sale of power? If this gift were changed from "gross proceeds" to "net profits" it would be bad enough, but a Santa Claus offering to those States of 5 percent of the gross proceeds is unthinkable. In my opinion it cannot be defended on any basis of reason or justice and I cannot understand how such an unjust provision ever got into the bill.

We must remember that the money of all of the taxpayers of the United States is invested in this "white elephant" we call Muscle Shoals, and any favoritism shown to Tennessee and Alabama is at the expense of the taxpayers of Indiana, whom I in part represent, and the taxpayers of 45 other States, and I am not willing that the taxpayers of my State and the taxpayers of the Nation shall be penalized by this grant of special privilege, which is so foreign to the philosophy and teachings of the great patron saint, Thomas Jefferson, to whom we on this side of the Chamber profess allegiance.

In less than 2 hours this bill could be recommitted and the wrong could be taken out of it. If, and when, that is done I shall vote for the conference agreement. If the Senate understands that the House is in grim earnest in its opposition to bestowing this favoritism on two fair-haired States it will yield and there will be no danger that the bill will fail. I voted for the Muscle Shoals bill on its passage through the House, because it is a part of the program of our great President, whose genius is bringing about better times in this country, but the wrong that has since been injected into it must be eliminated before I will vote for the adoption of the conference report and I believe that if the bill reaches the President in its present form he should veto it and send it back here to be corrected in accordance with principles of justice.

Mr. GRAY. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, this bill is not a perfect bill. No bill can be expected to be perfect and complete. All legislation is a compromise. But it is the best bill that can be secured at this time and I so will give my support.

It establishes the principle and policy of the conservation of natural resources for the use and service of the people. I will vote for the bill because I believe that the earth was created for all the people and not for a certain special few; that every child born into the earth inherits a part of it which it takes by a higher and superior title, with the right of habitation, with the right to live upon the earth, the right to labor to live, and the right to take and enjoy the fruits of that labor; the right of every man to enjoy the earth and the fullness thereof for his own support and those who by nature are dependent upon him.

I believe that the water power, the power of the elements, and the natural energies of the earth are a part of the great natural inheritance which men take with this right of habitation upon the earth and it is the duty of governments, public agencies, and the exercise of the sovereign power of the people to conserve that natural inheritance to the use and benefit of all the people.

This bill establishes the principle and declares the policy that will make every rippling rivulet, every murmuring stream, every onward-flowing current of water, every mountain torrent, and every swelling tide of the sea a force, power, and factor to work and serve the wants, comforts, conveniences, welfare, and happiness of men, while enduring their sojourn here, and going to make the earth a Canaan of plenty and great abundance and a paradise of dazzling splendor and glory as an abiding place for men.

RULES COMMITTEE

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Rules Committee may have until midnight to file certain reports.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. Reserving the right to object, can the gentleman give any idea as to the subject matter of those reports?

Mr. O'CONNOR. It is expected that the committee may report on the so-called "Celler resolution", against which a point of order was successfully made yesterday.

Mr. BLANTON. I made the point of order that stopped it yesterday. I think the House should have plenty of time to thoroughly inform itself about that resolution before the Rules Committee forces us to debate it under a special rule. I am against it on its merits and want plenty of time to consider that matter, and I object.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Would the gentleman object to the committee's reporting before midnight on another resolution from the Committee on Foreign Affairs?

Mr. BLANTON. There is no junket in that, is there?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I am not so sure about that. [Laughter.]

Mr. BLANTON. Is that the resolution which our good friend SOL BLOOM wants passed, that proposes to spend the substantial sum of $48,500 for an agricultural conference in Rome, Italy?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I think that is the exact amount.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I warned the House about this $48,500 junket to Rome, Italy, when I spoke against it on April 12, 1933 (p. 1597), and I discussed it again last Friday (p. 3355), when we defeated the $250,000 Sirovich resolution. The farmers of the United States do not want any agricultural institute held in Rome, Italy, especially when it is to cost them $48,500. Therefore I object.

PROTECTION OF GOVERNMENT RECORDS

Mr. McKEOWN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 4220) for the protection of Government records, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection; and the Speaker appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. McKEOWN, Mr. CELLER, and Mr. KURTZ.

TAXES FOR PUBLIC WORKS

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and include therein an editorial from the Washington Post.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Speaker, I ask permission to have published in the RECORD an editorial of today's Washington Post, recommending that the money for the proposed program of public works be raised from taxes, such as a sales tax, rather than by an additional issue of Government bonds. I approve this suggestion and urge that the President and his advisers consider it very carefully. It is as follows:

Congress is face to face with the issue of raising taxes to make feasible a gigantic bond issue for public works. Apparently the administration is determined to go forward with this program in the hope that it may create a demand for commodities and furnish work for part of the army of unemployed. The result will be an increase in the debts of the Government and the States and municipalities that borrow money from Uncle Sam to spend on improvements.

This prospective increase in the Federal debt cannot be regarded without apprehension. If this program of spending is carried out, the national debt will again approach the high figure it reached shortly after the war. Nearly all of the $10,000,000,000 which the American people spent for debt amortization from 1919 to 1929 will be wiped out in an effort to substitute governmental activity for private enterprise. Congress ought to consider with the utmost care the disadvantages of another great increase of the debts of taxpayers while contemplating the benefits that may result from the expenditure of so much money.

Since the Government is determined to carry out a public-works program, why should it not use the taxing power to raise the necessary revenue, instead of creating another heavy burden of debt? A sales tax of 2 or 3 percent would raise money for all the public works that the Government can afford to undertake in the present circumstances. Such a plan would avoid extravagant spending and would not put a strain upon the Government's credit. Business could then be given the assurance that as soon as conditions are improved the sales levy would be repealed. Under the bonding scheme, whatever special tax might be adopted would weigh upon business for 20 years.

There is ground for the belief that conditions are improving, and that business is finding a balance on which it can go forward. Extreme caution is needed to avoid weakening confidence again. Business will not be encouraged by a large bond issue while the Budget remains out of balance. The greatest need is for more business, more industrial activity, and less Government spending.

A moderate public-works program to be financed from a special sales tax would not end the depression, but it would allow the Government to build up the Navy to treaty strength and to push forward other projects of a practical nature. It would avoid further increases in the debt and preserve the Government's credit on a sound basis. The capital which the administration is trying to make available for private industry would not be absorbed for governmental use. Congress might well consider this plan as an alternative to that of increasing the debt which would make extra taxation necessary to take care of interest.

M. Flandin, a former French Minister of Commerce, recently said regarding state loans for public works:

How are the loans to be raised; at what rate of interest; and what would be the repercussions? The budget would have to be balanced, or people would not invest. The rate of interest would be raised by the large demand and the government would be unable to borrow cheaply. The banks would advance only for short periods, and if money were borrowed for long periods the public would want higher rates of interest. High rates of interest on public loans would burden the budget for many years to come. If the works proposed were nonproductive there would be a heavy burden on finance, and if they were productive prices would fall. The world will not get out of the present crisis by creating fictitious means of payment for the disposal of the realities of indebtedness. We must cease to believe in monetary miracles.

He was afraid of large schemes of indefinite extent, and preferred to keep nearer to the earth and to economic realities.

He spoke of Mr. Keynes' proposal to increase the demand for goods by creating more money. In his opinion it was not a question of the amount of money, but it was the rapidity with which it circulated that would bring prosperity.

REEMPLOYMENT AND PUBLIC CONSTRUCTION (H.DOC. NO. 37)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read by the Clerk, referred to the Ways and Means Committee, and ordered printed:

To the Congress:

Before the special session of the Congress adjourns, I recommend two further steps in our national campaign to put people to work.

I

My first request is that the Congress provide for the machinery necessary for a great cooperative movement throughout all industry in order to obtain wide reemployment, to shorten the working week, to pay a decent wage for the shorter week, and to prevent unfair competition and disastrous overproduction.

Employers cannot do this singly or even in organized groups, because such action increases costs and thus permits cut-throat underselling by selfish competitors unwilling to join in such a public-spirited endeavor.

One of the great restrictions upon such cooperative efforts up to this time has been our antitrust laws. They were properly designed as the means to cure the great evils of monopolistic price fixing. They should certainly be retained as a permanent assurance that the old evils of unfair competition shall never return. But the public interest will be served if, with the authority and under the guidance of Government, private industries are permitted to make agreements and codes insuring fair competition. However, it is necessary, if we thus limit the operation of antitrust laws to their original purpose, to provide a rigorous licensing power in order to meet rare cases of noncooperation and abuse. Such a safeguard is indispensable.

II

The other proposal gives the Executive full power to start a large program of direct employment. A careful survey convinces me that approximately $3,300,000,000 can be invested in useful and necessary public construction and at the same time put the largest possible number of people to work.

Provision should be made to permit States, counties, and municipalities to undertake useful public works, subject, however, to the most effective possible means of eliminating favoritism and wasteful expenditures on unwarranted and uneconomic projects.

We must, by prompt and vigorous action, override unnecessary obstructions which in the past have delayed the starting of public-works programs. This can be accomplished by simple and direct procedure.

In carrying out this program it is imperative that the credit of the United States Government be protected and preserved. This means that at the same time we are making these vast emergency expenditures there must be provided sufficient revenue to pay interest and amortization on the cost and that the revenue so provided must be adequate and certain rather than inadequate and speculative.

Careful estimates indicate that at least $220,000,000 of additional revenue will be required to service the contemplated borrowings of the Government. This will of necessity involve some form or forms of new taxation. A number of suggestions have been made as to the nature of these taxes. I do not make a specific recommendation at this time, but I hope that the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives will make a careful study of revenue plans and be prepared by the beginning of the coming week to propose the taxes which they judge to be best adapted to meet the present need and which will at the same time be least burdensome to our people. At the end of that time if no decision has been reached or if the means proposed do not seem to be sufficiently adequate or certain, it is my intention to transmit to the Congress my own recommendations in the matter.

The taxes to be imposed are for the purpose of providing reemployment for our citizens. Provisions should be made for their reduction or elimination—

First. As fast as increasing revenues from improving business become available to replace them;

Second. Whenever the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, now pending before the States, shall have been ratified and the repeal of the Volstead Act effected. The prohibition revenue laws would then automatically go into effect and yield enough wholly to eliminate these temporary reemployment taxes.

Finally, I stress the fact that all of these proposals are based on the gravity of the emergency, and that, therefore, it is urgently necessary immediately to initiate a reemployment campaign if we are to avoid further hardships, to sustain business improvement, and to pass on to better things.

For this reason I urge prompt action on this legislation.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, May 17, 1933.

[Applause.]

APPOINTMENTS UNDER THE CIVIL SERVICE

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Speaker, the independent offices appropriation bill in section 8, paragraph (b), as reported to the House by the full House Committee on Appropriations and as passed by the House, is as follows:

In making reductions of personnel due regard shall be given to the apportionment of appointees as provided in the Civil Service Act.

On May 10 I called attention to this provision in some remarks in the House and at that time quoted from the third paragraph of section 2 of the act of January 16, 1883, as follows:

Third. Appointments to the public service aforesaid in the departments at Washington shall be apportioned among the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia upon the basis of population as ascertained at the last preceding census.

I also inserted in the RECORD in connection with my remarks a table showing that of the approximate 33,000 Federal employees in the District of Columbia the District of Columbia, Virginia, Maryland, Iowa, and Vermont had 16,033, or 14,026 in excess of their quota, and inserted the lists showing the number to which each State is entitled and the percentage filled by each State.

The Subcommittee on Appropriations in the preparation of paragraph (b), above referred to, called in consultation the Civil Service Commission, and the Commission sent as its representative before the committee E. C. Babcock, Secretary of the Civil Service Commission. He was supposed to be fair and disinterested and to give the committee unprejudiced and impartial information. He assisted in phrasing paragraph (b) and was questioned about it before the subcommittee in executive session. He assisted in phrasing a substitute which every newspaper in the city of Washington joyfully accepted, commenting in effect that it would amount to nothing and that the substitute had no "teeth" in it and would not result in giving the States any greater proportionate representation if and when reductions are made.

The Civil Service Act of January 16, 1883, directed that appointments be made in the Federal service upon the basis of population as ascertained by the last census.

Imagine my surprise this morning when I received the following circular signed by this same E. C. Babcock, who is secretary of both the Civil Service Commission and American Federation of Government Employees, which reads as follows:

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES, (AFFILIATED TO THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR),
E. CLAUDE BABCOCK, SECRETARY, 3301 MILITARY ROAD NW.,
Washington, D.C., May 16, 1933.

To Presidents and Secretaries of all Washington, D.C., Lodges, for immediate circularization to all members of their lodges:

IMPORTANT

Copies to presidents of field lodges for information. In spite of tone of my general memorandum of Saturday, there is grave need to "step in" on the apportionment matter.

The situation is far from being as favorable as I had hoped. Read the Washington Star editorial of today. Write a note to the Star thanking for editorial and for help, and for the general attitude of Mr. Fox, who is responsible.

Congressman HASTINGS, of Oklahoma, took floor today and stormily favored apportionment provision as "teeth."

Chairman BUCHANAN, of Appropriations Committee, and Congressman WOODRUM are for a fair deal on this particular question, although Mr. BUCHANAN advocates deep reductions in personnel.

Government employees have already felt the "teeth", and it is about time that the Congressmen did a little clear thinking. I advise every Federal employee to write to his Senator in a very friendly way that we desire that all separations depend on the value of the employee to the Government and not on the accident of the place of birth of the employee.

We are more interested in the maintenance of an honest and efficient service than those who desire to pay for political debts by jobs.

The apportionment matter is fundamental, since we must stick always to the doctrine that we will never take a step except for honest service rendered.

Fraternally,

This is an amazing letter. This man Babcock should be removed from the position as Secretary of the Civil Service Commission at once, because instead of giving the committee his unprejudiced and impartial views, this letter discloses that he is a partisan in an effort to thwart the will of the committee and of Congress.

This letter states:

Congressman HASTINGS, of Oklahoma, took floor today and stormily favored apportionment provision as "teeth."

This same letter mentions two other members of the committee.

I want to call your attention to the following paragraph of the letter, and, mind you, it was written on May 10, the day I made some remarks on the floor in support of paragraph (b), and it shows how alert E. C. Babcock, secretary of the American Federation of Government Employees, was, in which he called attention to—

Government employees have already felt the "teeth", and it is about time that the Congressmen did a little clear thinking.

This same man is secretary of the American Federation of Government Employees and Secretary of the Civil Service Commission.

Then he advises—

every Federal employee to write to his Senator in a very friendly way that we desire that all separations depend on the value of the employee to the Government, and not on the accident of the place of birth of the employee.

No wonder there has been so much propaganda against the retention of paragraph (b). As the result of ingenuous criticisms, we read in the press that the Senate committee has amended the language so that it is satisfactory to the Federal employees and, of course, to Mr. Babcock, and no doubt upon the recommendation of Mr. Babcock.

Every Federal employee is warned of the impending danger of the passage of paragraph (b). This paragraph has teeth in it. It will result, if enacted, in retaining employees from those States which do not have to have their quota reduced.

Since I have been in Congress it has never been brought to my attention where any Government employee, when asked to appear before the committee to give the committee the benefit of his judgment, immediately attempts to thwart the will of the full committee and the House.

Babcock has no place in the Government service and should be dismissed before sundown. He was supposed to be an impartial witness before the committee. This circular indicates that he is the most biased and partisan witness that ever appeared before a committee of which I am a member.

For the benefit of the committee and with the permission of the House I am reinserting the table which I placed in the RECORD on May 10 and am introducing a resolution authorizing the Civil Service Committee to investigate the administration of the act of January 16, 1883, and to report the result of the findings of the committee to the House.

I call your attention to the fact that Virginia is entitled to 659 and has 2,273, or an excess of 1,614 appointments. Maryland is entitled to 444 and has received 2,112, or an excess of 1,668.

Examining the other States, I invite attention to the fact that Texas is entitled to 1,584, has received 433, and is in arrears 1,151, or has received only 27 per cent of her quota. My State of Oklahoma is entitled to 651, has received 196, and is in arrears 455, or has only 30 per cent of her quota.

Members of the House may examine the list and ascertain for themselves the discrimination against their respective States.

The resolution is as follows:

Resolution

Resolved, That for the purpose of obtaining information necessary as a basis for legislation the Committee on Civil Service, as a whole or by subcommittee, is authorized to investigate the Civil Service Commission, the heads of all of the departments, commissions, and independent offices, to determine whether the third paragraph of section 2 of the act of January 16, 1883, being an act to regulate and improve the Civil Service of the United States, as follows: "Third. Appointments to the public service aforesaid in the departments at Washington shall be apportioned among the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia upon the basis of population as ascertained at the last preceding census" has been enforced and whether each State has its quota of Federal employees in the District of Columbia in the several departments, commissions or independent offices as required by said act.

The committee shall report to the House the results of its investigation, including such recommendation for legislation as it deems advisable.

The committee, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized to hold such hearings, to require the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, and to take such testimony and report its recommendations to the House.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HASTINGS. Yes; I yield.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Is not that ground for removal of that official?

Mr. HASTINGS. In my judgment this man ought to be removed before the sun goes down. [Applause.]

Mr. LOZIER. Is the gentleman or any Member of this House surprised at this action, when for 20 years the Civil Service Commission has trampled under foot the reapportionment provision and has refused to give it force and virility?

Mr. HASTINGS. That is not only true but it has been done for 50 years, because the original act was passed January 16, 1883.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert this letter as a part of my remarks, and, second, to insert a list of the quotas by States, and the percentage that each State has. Also I have introduced a resolution asking the Civil Service Committee of the House to make a thorough investigation. It does not require the expenditure of any money; and if the resolution is passed, I am sure that we will get all the facts and get definite results. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object merely for the purpose of giving me an opportunity of asking my friend from Oklahoma whether or not he noticed in the Washington Herald this morning the editorial headed "The Senate to the Rescue", in which this paper asserts, in effect, that the people of the District of Columbia can always have confidence in the United States Senate doing what they want done. The most amusing part of this editorial was the statement that the Senate has "superior enlightenment", and that it stands between the Washington people and the "narrow-minded, vindictive House of Representatives." And respecting the salutary provision which the House placed in the bill to protect the other 46 States in their being denied their respective quotas of Civil Service employees, in order that the States of Virginia and Maryland and the city of Washington could gobble up practically all such appointments, the Herald said the subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee "eliminated this unwise provision." I hope the gentleman will insert this editorial in his speech.

Mr. HASTINGS. They seem to be very happy about the report of the Senate amendment, and if the gentleman will give me the press report, with the permission of the House, I shall be glad to include it as a part of my remarks.

Mr. BLANTON. I shall be glad to have him do that, so that the Members of the House will know in advance what is being done to them somewhere else.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object in order to advise my friend, the Chairman of the Committee on Civil Service, when he is making the investigation, to also investigate the reasons why the Civil Service Commission has created a dead line and refused to accept applications of men and women above 48 years of age simply because of the retirement legislation, which I think is absolutely wrong.

I had a hearing before the Civil Service Commission and tried to convince them to revoke that rule, that dead line, which is so disastrous and which everybody who is reasonable and sane condemns, and if there is any investigation, that should also be investigated by the Civil Service Committee of the House. I hope my distinguished friend will have that in mind.

Mr. JEFFERS. The committee will be glad to hear the distinguished gentleman at that time.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RICH. Reserving the right to object, I want to make inquiry of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] as to the statements published in newspaper reports, whether that is what he is asking to have in the RECORD. If it is newspaper reports that he wants included in the RECORD, then I object.

Mr. BLANTON. It was an editorial in the Herald this morning, asserting in a gloating way that the House action had been eliminated by the Senate.

Mr. RICH. I object to that feature of it.

Mr. BLANTON. My remarks show what it is anyway, so after all, that is probably enough of it to go into the RECORD.

Mr. PARKS. Mr. Speaker, regular order.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. HASTINGS] to extend his remarks in the manner indicated?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BUSBY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mr. SNELL. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask what the program will be for the balance of the afternoon, and if there is any other business to come before the House?

Mr. BYRNS. No. There is no other business that I know of.

Mr. SNELL. Then we may leave, with that understanding.

Mr. BYRNS. I should not want the gentleman to leave.

[Laughter.]

Mr. BUSBY. The gentleman will miss something if he goes now.

Mr. SNELL. I intend to remain, but others may not care to stay.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. BUSBY]?

There was no objection.

EXPLANATION OF VOTE

Mr. WOOD of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I am called home on very important business, leaving tomorrow, and will be absent probably a week. I want the RECORD to show how I would vote on a measure that may come up during my absence; that is, the immediate payment of the veterans' adjusted-service certificates. If I were present and that measure comes before the House for a vote, I would vote "aye" on the measure.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. BUSBY] is recognized for 15 minutes.

HAVE WE LAID ANY FOUNDATION FOR FINANCIAL RECOVERY?

Mr. BUSBY. Mr. Speaker, I am quite certain the question that is uppermost in the minds of a great many Members of the Congress is whether or not the things we have done up to now have gotten us anywhere or have placed this country on a very much sounder financial basis.

THE PEOPLE'S MONEY PAY PRIVATE DEBTS

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is the agency through which the Congress has been operating to issue the bonds of the Government, which are first mortgages on the future income of the people and their property, as they may be taken through the taxing power so as to raise money, and with that money pay off private obligations to private persons and to put into operation the type of work which carries benefits to individuals. For all of these the Government requires the taxpayer to furnish the funds.

We understand that all bonds issued by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation are payable by the people through taxation that is to be levied in the future.

WE BELIEVED WE WERE TO ECONOMIZE

We started out at the beginning of this session to economize. The very first piece of legislation followed an appeal to this Congress by the President and leaders to enact statutes that would insure economy. We overwhelmingly voted for that, in good faith, and passed the economy bill on the assurance of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. McDUFFIE] that economy was the objective to be obtained, and not a move to drop the wounded and disabled ex-service men from the benefits they were receiving. That bill reduced the salaries of Congressmen and Senators $1,500 per annum. It cut the salaries of all Government employees, and as it has been administered it has turned hundreds of thousands of persons out of employment and into the streets. A great many friends of the veterans, disliking as much as they did to support that proposition and give such great power into the hands of our President and those under him, but believing that economies would be effected, in the name of economy supported it. It was not long after that until we were called upon to provide a gift to the States of $500,000,000, through the Wagner-Lewis bill, that dissipated all of the savings we had made by cutting off the veterans. But that was not all.

NATIONAL DEBT WILL BE INCREASED $10,000,000,000

We will soon have increased the national debt of this country $10,000,000,000 from its low point reached in 1930. At an average price of 4-percent interest on that $10,000,000,000 of increased national debt, a part of which will go to support the program that was laid down in the President's message to Congress today, the interest on that increase in the national debt will amount to $400,000,000 per annum that the taxpayers must bear. If you will stop to think, that exactly balances the savings that were made by cutting off the veterans. The interest on these new bonds must be paid the bankers every year just as the payment we were making to the veterans.

SAVINGS MADE BY CUTTING OUT DISABLED VETERANS ARE BEING GIVEN TO THE BANKERS IN ADDED INTEREST

The amounts taken from disabled veterans in reducing and cutting out disabled and wounded service-connected cases and in dropping disabled non-service-connected ones will exactly balance the increase in interest that it will be necessary to pay on the added $10,000,000,000 new Government bonded debt, which debt will be tax exempt in the hands of the big bankers of the country. The amounts cut off of the compensation of the veterans of all wars will be about $400,000,000, and that is the amount that must be each year collected from the taxpayers and added to the fund to pay bond interest.

On March 15 last I delivered a speech in this House, in which I said:

Mr. Speaker, a great deal has been said recently about the expense of the Veterans' Administration, and especially the amount that has been paid to the disabled veterans, whether service connected or not. It is claimed that they have cost the Government some $5,000,000,000. I want to call your attention to another bonus that has been paid and that is being paid, and the amount is continually growing.

$11,614,000,000 BONUS PAID TO BOND BUYERS

It is a bonus paid to the plutocratic class of this country. During the past 16 years, from 1917 to 1932, inclusive, there has been paid to the holders of tax-exempt securities in this country $11,614,000,000 interest, considerably more than twice the cost of the Veterans' Administration. This, Mr. Speaker, is a bonus that is being paid to the "big boys", about which you have not heard a word of complaint. [Applause.]

BONUS TO THE MONEY LORDS SHOULD BE CUT

Something ought to be done by this Congress and by this administration, not only to relieve the taxpayer somewhat of the inequities that have crept into the administration of the Veterans' Bureau but they ought to be relieved of this inordinate cost that comes by way of the bond-interest charge which must be collected from the taxpayers of this country. That is not all. Those bonds are tax exempt, and the holders of them do not propose to take any part in bearing the expenses of this Government.

INTEREST ON SHORT-TERM NOTES INCREASED 4,000 PERCENT

I do not think the public generally understands why the interest rate was advanced from one tenth of 1 percent as it was on the last short-term notes sold by the Treasury, to 4 percent and 4¼ percent on the issue sold today, March 15. The Treasury did not even offer these short-term securities sold today for any other amount of interest than around 4 percent, and that is an increase of 4,000 percent over the interest paid on a recent sale which was oversubscribed 20 times. I do not understand it. I do not think it has ever been explained.

Here is what they call "sound money": It is money which is issued on bonds owned by the bankers on which the Government pays 4 or some other percent of interest, but if the Government proposes to make money without paying the 4 percent for its circulating medium, the newspapers say it is "flat money" and not sound. [Applause.]

THE ECONOMY BILL

We had faith in the President; we still have faith in the President. But we know it is humanly impossible for him personally to do everything. We know that he is not personally administering the Economy Act. We know that it is being administered by agents who have little concern about the welfare of battle-scarred veterans of the Spanish-American War or the veterans of the World War. These are being dealt with according to a policy planned and directed by the National Economy League, a cold and heartless organization, the offspring of the United States Chamber of Commerce, whose membership is for the most part from the rich and wealthy class. And so the Director of the Budget cuts and slashes without an understanding in the particular cases, and without concern about fate of the disabled defender of his country. It matters not to the National Economy League and the Director of the Budget that because of the wounds of battle and the loss of health in the service of war these men cannot now earn food and clothing for themselves and dependents. Such things make no appeal to them.

I suppose it matters little whether any one of us serve out the present term or remain longer in Congress. There has always been and there will continue to be in all governments an eternal fight to prevent the powerful and wealthy from preying on the masses of the people. So it is now. Some of the greatest admirers the President has ever had have felt that Congress has been slow in giving the disabled veterans a square deal. The same interests in this country that are demanding of the President that he ruthlessly deny relief to the disabled veteran fought them to the finish when Congress was passing relief legislation over the veto of a former President.

The boys who were herded together and sent to the war from my community were my boyhood friends. We grew up together; they believed in me and I knew them to be true as steel. They have stood by me all along the way politically, personally, and in every kind of trial. They had faith in me that I would fight to see that they had a square deal.

EX-SERVICE MEN NOT GETTING SQUARE DEAL

The ex-service men of the Spanish-American War and the World War are not getting a square deal under the Economy Act as it is being administered by the Director of the Budget. I voted for the bill creating that law believing in the President and relying on the assurance of the leaders in the House that the ex-service men would be given a square deal. I did it in the name of economy, and because it seemed the only thing to do for the good of the country. My regret comes not because of the loss of political support, if such loss there be, but because some of my friends who had faith in me are now uncertain as to whether I have kept that faith. This, and this only, is my regret.

The President says in today's message that we have to raise $220,000,000 to finance this proposition. That calls for $3,300,000,000 outlay. We are not putting this money into self-liquidating projects.

We are putting it into propositions where once it is spent it is gone and becomes nothing more nor less from then on but a charge against the taxpayers to bondholders that must be paid continually by the people.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUSBY. I yield.

Mr. BLOOM. Two hundred and twenty million dollars, I understand, is for interest and amortization as well; not $220,000,000 interest alone on this $3,300,000,000 project.

Mr. BUSBY. Perhaps the gentleman is right to some extent on that, but if we increase the national debt $10,000,000,000 and pay 4-percent interest on it, and that is just what we are doing, we will have an added interest obligation for the people to pay to the extent of $400,000,000.

I repeat again, as I said in my speech in this House on March 15, during the last 16 years we have paid to the tax-exempt security holders an average of almost $1,000,000,000 a year, or some $3,000,000 a day interest.

How do the banks purchase these bonds? All of the banks in this country have not more than $8,000,000,000 of their own funds, in the form of capital stock, reserves, and surplus. Now, the banks hold considerably more than that amount of Government bonds.

With what do they purchase these bonds? They purchase these bonds with the people's deposits.

In other words, the banks have $8,000,000,000 of their own funds and $40,000,000,000 of the people's funds as bank deposits. They use this $40,000,000,000 to purchase the Government bonds, which are mortgages on all the people.

The banks receive interest for the loans they make to the people who borrow from the banks, which borrowings are left in the bank as bank deposits, checking accounts, and so forth, and the banks then receive interest for the investment they make in Government bonds.

So it works out both ways for them. At present the big bank will not make loans to business people because they say the business people have no good security. So the big banking interests want more Government bonds issued so they can "invest" and get interest.

The question now arises, how many bonds could this Government issue and still sell them at par? There is bound to be a limit at which the Government must cease to issue its securities, if it is to keep them at par and the "Budget balanced."

As stated, the banks have but $8,000,000,000 of their own funds and $40,000,000,000 of deposits that belong to the people; and, by the way, they have it fixed so that if the bank gets into difficulty it can go under the protection of the Comptroller of the Currency and drive the people away from their deposits with civil officers. So how many bonds can we sell and maintain them at par? This is a proposition for you to work out.

Certainly we will never balance the budget by a method of bookkeeping whereby we cut off from the veterans $400,000,000 and call it savings, then through the medium of the Wagner-Lewis bill spend $500,000,000 by giving it away—not a loan, but an out-and-out gift—and pass that over by bookkeeping juggling to the other side of the ledger and say that is a deferred matter and you need not count it in the proposition when you go to "balance the Budget."

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUSBY. I yield.

Mr. MAY. Taking the fixed charges of the Government, the charges it must pay regardless, plus interest charges, with another $3,000,000,000 or $4,000,000,000 and how long will it be until the Government gets to the point where its fixed charges and interest charges exceed its income?

Mr. BUSBY. That is the question we have got to try to settle here.

I have jotted down this note: How long can we continue to issue Government bonds which carry a charge of interest of about 4 percent against the people and pass those Government bonds by sale into the hands of investors by them to be held and the interest collected on which they pay no return to the Government by way of taxes, because the bonds are tax-exempt securities? How long can the Congress continue to do these things and not load the people down with recurring interest charges on all these Government bonds to where they cannot meet it by any kind of taxation? Special interests are now demanding a sales tax—which is a method of robbing the poor—so the Government may collect money into the Treasury with which to pay them interest on tax-exempt bonds bought with other peoples' money.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUSBY. I yield.

Mr. BLOOM. Is it not a fact that if the banks did not buy these Government bonds, they would be compelled to keep in their vaults the cash in reserve?

OUR MONEY AND BANKING SYSTEMS ARE FOUNDED ON DEBTS

Mr. BUSBY. Conceding that that is a fact, there is not enough cash in the country to keep proper reserves in the vaults. All of the money in this country except the intrinsic value of the silver and the gold is issued on debt. All of the national bank currency is issued on debt and nothing but debts.

The entire banking structure is founded on debt. That is the reason the big banking interests are happy to see us issuing so many tax-exempt Government bonds at a time when no other bonds are dependable. Government bonds are not secured by a mortgage on some man's property or on some business, town, or county. They are a first mortgage on the United States. They are seeing to it that our President is providing them with plenty bonds and no currency or new money.

In 1837 there was no national debt and they had no dependable debts to rely on when the crisis came, so the banks, such as they were then, all went broke.

My explanation of the collapse of our banking system is that it is founded on debt, and the debts have so shrunk in value that the banks, like everybody else, are called on to pay high-priced dollars when they received cheap dollars and received security for loans in relation to the cheap dollars.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUSBY. I yield.

Mr. McFADDEN. I am interested in the colloquy that just took place in regard to the banks. The 12 Federal Reserve banks hold now $1,836,000,000 of Government bonds, whereas the deposits from banks in the Federal Reserve System are approximately $2,000,000,000.

Mr. BUSBY. Yes.

Mr. McFADDEN. So all they have on which to operate now is the difference between these two and their capital and surplus. Is not this correct?

Mr. BUSBY. That is absolutely correct.

Mr. McFADDEN. But is it not a fact that we would not have had the break-down of March 4 if the Federal Reserve banks had not been so frozen?

WE MUST HAVE NEW MONEY—INFLATION

Mr. BUSBY. That is true as to them and it is true as to the entire banking system. Banks have "frozen assets" when the loans are bad and cannot be collected—a merchant would call them bad debts.

Now, I want to make this suggestion. When our administration began we had at that time great hopes that new money was going to be put into circulation and that the medium-of-exchange machine, which had broken down by reason of the fact that bank credit was gone and money was hoarded, was going to be somewhat repaired and restored. Two billion dollars had been printed. Business raised its head and began to have hope. How much of that ever got beyond the banks? Not more than $15,000,000 or $20,000,000 ever passed the banks, although they took out of the Treasury some $650,000,000 and held it for a few days to meet bank runs. Then Congress passed a law against bank depositors.

Then through the process of managing the Federal Reserve, it and the banks took out of circulation not only the $650,000,000 of new currency, but they took out altogether within 20 days, $1,400,000,000 of currency and reduced business back to the static condition which had given it so much trouble, and hope began to wane.

In the recent farm bill which we passed, the Thomas amendment was added, whereby the President is authorized to purchase bonds and pay for them in money to the amount of $3,000,000,000, and yet this situation presenting itself, we are called upon today to create $3,300,000,000 more interest-bearing debt to tax the people with instead of using this currency to restore the circulating medium of the country and at the same time put into effect the "prosperity work program."

Mr. Speaker, we will never get out of debt by making bigger and more extensive loans and further taxing the people for bond interest. The only way we can ever get out of debt, the only way we can ever do business, the only way we can ever raise commodity price levels, is to restore the medium of exchange, and this simply means to reflate the currency back to where it will do the business of the country at a reasonable price level. [Applause.] The advisers of our administration who do not see this are certainly very short-sighted. I am inclined to believe, Mr. Speaker, that the advisers are not very much changed from what they have been for the last 3 or 4 years, because we get the same results from the same sources, and it is not possible for us to know a tree except by the fruit that grows upon it. We will continue to meet disappointment just so long as we try to lend ourselves out of debt. We will further overwhelm the people with charges and interest and tie the hands of the people and of business by piling up on them added accounts which they can never settle this side of the day of judgment. [Applause.]

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, since the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Hastings] spoke my attention has been called to certain facts in regard to Civil Service employees to be employed by the emergency agricultural adjustment administration.

When the emergency agricultural bill was before the House it contained a provision that the employees should come from the Civil Service and under the Classification Act. This provision was eliminated from the bill, and the men who are to administer this law know—or if they are competent to administer the affairs of their office should know—that it was the intention of the Congress that these offices should not be filled by Civil Service employees.

I have in my hand the draft of a notice that has gone out to the newspapers, released by the United States Department of Agriculture, under the heading, "Will draft the agricultural personnel from the farm force in Washington", all placed there by a Republican administration. This is issued by the Secretary of Agriculture, and what else could we expect from a Republican Secretary of Agriculture? Not only this, but he says that George N. Peek, who is another Republican, and Charles J. Brand, another Republican, who are going to administer these agricultural-relief measures, are not going to recognize the wishes and the demands of the Congress, but are going to take their personnel from the offices here in Washington under the Civil Service, and they are going to administer them irrespective of what the Democratic side of this House or the Congress wants to be done; and if we overlook these matters and if we allow them to go ahead in this way they will enforce the same rules and regulations, against the proceedings or the wishes of this House, with respect to the Wagner-Lewis emergency relief measure. It is also rumored that these same Republican appointees, who employ more than any other department in their farm-relief program, are to let governors and supreme courts select the State and county directors. Representatives who are daily put on the "spot" and faithfully work and vote to carry out administration measures, many of which they would prefer changed, are not to be considered. These Republican dictators are to handle the patronage and administer as they see fit these Democratic measures.

I want to tell you that these men did not help to get the nomination for President Roosevelt before the convention. I want to tell you that the people of this country have about made up their minds that when they win they lose as far as office is concerned, and that they believe in the Democratic principle, adhered to by the Republicans as well, that to the victor belongs the spoils. Republican postmasters are given to understand that they will not be disturbed until their terms of office expire, yet in my district, when Harding went into office, the Democrats were instructed by telegraph to turn over their offices to the Republican successors. It is true we should feel grateful to the Republican postmasters because they nominated Mr. Hoover. The men who gave us the great Democratic victory last November were not Republican officeholders nor Republicans seeking office, but it was the united democracy and the men and women of this Nation who wanted a change; they not only wanted a change then, but they want the change now, and will never get it if the policy of the Agricultural Department is permitted to prevail. [Applause.]

If we just pass these matters over, there will be no changes. There has not been a change in the Department of Agriculture, and there is not going to be any if we just stand quietly by and let these Republicans do as they please. The Republicans are not getting any glory out of it themselves, because these men do not even claim to be Republicans now—they have quit you. They belong to no party—just big, patriotic Americans that even President Roosevelt could not do without. [Applause.] The farmers had one such experience when Alexander Legge was appointed as president of the Farm Board. He represented the Harvester Trust, the greatest parasite ever known to the farmer. Peek has been in the same business. We wonder if he will follow in the same Republican tracks.

So, Mr. Speaker, we might just as well let this bunch know that we are going to have something to say about running this Government; that we are going to say how they are going to run their departments. It is an insult to every man on the Democratic side of this House for these hide-bound Republicans, after we have gone out and won the victory, to pay absolutely no attention to us, and say that they will not administer these matters as we want them administered, but will take Civil Service employees and administer the laws with them.

I am for the Civil Service employees. They are the best kind of people in the world. They are one class of people who have never felt the panic.

These men employed here are drawing good salaries. The unemployed all over the country thought we were going to have a new deal. We are not getting it and not going to get it without we exert ourselves. Members of Congress are given a few post-office appointments. Yes; and each and every one of them is a liability instead of an asset. [Laughter and applause.]

These men at the head of these departments are going to select these men irrespective of Members of Congress, irrespective of Democrats already out of a job. These arrogant Republicans at the head of these departments are giving out circulars to the press saying they are going to pay no attention to your demands—they are going to stick to the Civil Service employees of the Government who were selected in another administration. They claim these employees are efficient, as much as to say the unemployed able Democrats of the country are incompetent—the same argument every Democrat in the North is forced to meet as a Republican argument.

Mr. ALLGOOD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. ALLGOOD. I understand the Efficiency Board now is rating those under the Civil Service at the head of which are Republicans.

Mr. FULLER. That is true. The people of the country feel that the Democrats ought to have some consideration, and we are not getting it. It is the sentiment of 99 percent of the Democratic membership of this House.

It may not be policy for me to stand here and say that I am not satisfied, but I am not satisfied to take just what is given to me. I am not satisfied and neither are the rest of you satisfied, and it is high time the Democrats in this country let their wishes be known. [Applause.]

Oh, yes, when there is a little dissension they call us together and give us a few sweet platitudes and say that our demands will be considered later. "Be patient", "Give us time", "All will be well", are now the passwords, and when we adjourn a few Eastern States and the Western Republicans will land the positions. Personally, I do not expect to get anything but liabilities instead of assets, and that is in post-office appointments.

Mr. TRUAX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. TRUAX. The same condition exists in the State of Ohio under Gov. George White. I want to ask the gentleman the question whether we are not keeping the same men who advised the cotton farmer to plow up every third row of cotton?

Mr. FULLER. Yes; the same ones—they are experts. Yet I doubt if they would know wheat from oats or a Jersey from a Hereford.

I conclude with the document issued by the great Department of Agriculture, to which I referred, which reads as follows:

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
OFFICE OF INFORMATION,
Washington, D.C., May 15, 1933.

WILL DRAFT AGRICULTURE PERSONNEL FOR FARM ACT FORCE IN WASHINGTON

STATE ADMINISTRATORS TO SELECT FOR MOST FIELD APPOINTMENTS WITH-OUT CIVIL SERVICE REQUIREMENTS WHICH WILL GOVERN IN WASH-INGTON OFFICE

Present employees of the United States Department of Agriculture will be used wherever possible in the emergency agricultural adjustment administration, George N. Peek and Charles J. Brand, administrators of the new farm act, announce. All personnel for service in the Washington office will come under the Civil Service rules and regulations, except special experts and certain key positions requiring technical training and experience.

Selections for employment for service in the field under the new act will be made by State administrators who will be announced at an early date. Appointments in the field will not be subject to Civil Service rules (except the positions of special county assistants, for which an examination will be announced at an early date). Inquiries regarding these positions should be addressed to the State administrators.

Emphasis is laid on the fact that the majority of the work under the new bill will be in the field and that the Washington organization will be held to a minimum. (The force needed in Washington will be smaller than most applicants have anticipated.)

Washington office positions will be filled wherever possible by transfer of department employees, and when these are not available positions will be filled from the Civil Service rolls. (In line with the President's policy on economy, the force engaged in this activity will be kept to the minimum necessary for the efficient administration of the act.)

THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE CHARLES H. BRAND

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, it is with profound regret that I have to announce to the House the death at his home in Athens, Ga., this morning, of my colleague, Hon. CHARLES H. BRAND. For 16 years he served with distinction as a Member of this body, and as a member of the powerful Committee on Banking and Currency his name is identified with much of the important legislation passed by the House in recent years. Judge BRAND was a profound lawyer, an earnest student of legislation, and a lovable friend. His hold upon the loyalty and devotion of his constituency was unrivaled and his place in the affections of the older Members of this body is secure.

I offer the following resolution, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 147

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. CHARLES H. BRAND, a Representative from the State of Georgia.

Resolved, That a committee of two Members of the House, with such Members of the Senate as may be joined, be appointed to attend the funeral.

Resolved, That the Sergeant at Arms of the House be authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary for carrying out the provisions of these resolutions and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

The Chair appointed the following Members of the funeral committee: Mr. PARKER of Georgia and Mr. WOOD of Georgia.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the remainder of the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect this House do now adjourn.

EXAMINATION OF DOROTHEA A. LIND

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, we want to call Miss Lind.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Call the witness.

Miss Dorothea A. Lind, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Please state your full name and your place of residence.—A. Miss Dorothea A. Lind, Oakland, Calif.

Q. What place did you hold with the Prudential Holding Co. in August of 1931?—A. I was secretary, treasurer, director, and member of the executive committee.

Q. Do you recall the appearance of Mr. Gilbert and Mr. Dinkelspiel in that office on the 15th day of August 1931?—A. I do.

Q. About what time of day did they arrive?—A. At approximately 1 o'clock.

Q. Who was in the office at that time?—A. I, myself, was in the office.

Q. Anyone else?—A. No, sir.

Q. What time that day was Mr. Stephens there?—A. About 1 o'clock.

Q. But he was not present when they came in?—A. I do not believe he was.

Q. How soon afterward did he come in?—A. Within a very few minutes.

Q. When Mr. Gilbert and Mr. Dinkelspiel appeared, to whom did they address themselves—to you or Mr. Stephens?—A. Mr. Stephens.

Q. State just what occurred between them and Mr. Stephens and you at that time.—A. I had prepared to leave the office early that day in order to get back in time to complete a telephone call to Mr. Hawkins. I was waiting for a call in answer to my call to him, which I had put in in the morning. He was out of the city. As I was preparing to leave I met Mr. Stephens half-way across the room, who stopped me on the way and said, "Miss Lind, we have to leave the safes all open."

Q. Did he have anything with him at that time?—A. He was holding a paper that had been presented to him over the counter.

Q. What did he say about it?—A. He said, "What is this all about?" He said, "Can you tell me what this is all about?" I said, "No; you have it. It was given to you. You read it and then tell me. I will be back in a few moments."

Q. Did you return in a few moments?—A. I returned within 10 or 15 minutes.

Q. What did you find out about it when you returned?—A. I found out that it was a court order appointing Mr. G. H. Gilbert as receiver of the Prudential Holding Co. of Los Angeles.

Q. What request was made of you at that time, if any?—A. The first request was to leave all safes open.

Q. To whom was this request made?—A. It was made to me.

Q. What was your reply to that?—A. My reply was that the safes that belonged to the Prudential Holding Co. were locked. The other safes belonged to other corporations located on the premises.

Q. Were those other corporations located in the same room with the Prudential Holding Co. office?—A. They were.

Q. How many of them?—A. There were five safes, including the Prudential safe.

Q. How many other companies than the Prudential had their offices in the same room?—A. There were three.

Q. Then what further request was made of you by Mr. Gilbert, if any?—A. He told me that he had full charge now; that I had nothing more to say about the place; and after he and Mr. Dinkelspiel had talked together about the matter, they decided the safes could be closed, but they would padlock the door.

Q. Was the door padlocked?—A. The door was padlocked; yes, sir.

Q. By whom?—A. By Mr. Gilbert.

Q. State whether or not you completed your telephone call to Mr. Hawkins as you mentioned a while ago—I mean from the office.—A. He would not let me wait in the office to finish the telephone call. He told me I had to find other means of placing or finishing my call. He told me that I could go to the telephone office and complete the call.

Q. When you left the office did this leave any employee of the company in charge?—A. No, sir.

Q. Or anyone there to assist Mr. Gilbert in directing matters?—A. No, sir.

Q. When did you next see Mr. Stephens after the padlock was put on the door?—A. He called at my house that evening and wanted to know what I knew that was new. I said I did not know anything new; that I was then preparing to go out and locate a telephone where I might get in touch with the president; that that afternoon I had notified all the directors; that I was wanting to place a long-distance call to him that evening after the 8 o'clock rate. He suggested that I go to his house to place the call, which I consented to do and did.

Q. Did you call the president of the company from his home?—A. From his home.

Q. What notice did you give him at that time?—A. I told him as nearly as I could what had happened.

Q. Then after you talked to him did Mr. Stephens talk to him in your presence? Were you present with Mr. Stephens when he talked to the president over the telephone?—A. I was.

Q. In that conversation did Mr. Stephens let the president or you, either one, know whether he was present or knew anything about the receivership when it was granted?

Mr. HANLEY. Just a moment. We are objecting now to any conversation had between Mr. Stephens and the president of this company or anyone else or this witness which has nothing to do with the issues here framed. It is hearsay of the worst kind and not binding upon the respondent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. What is the purpose of the testimony?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. The respondent took the deposition of this man Stephens in California the first of this month when we were present there as managers. He was the one who it is claimed accompanied the attorney from Los Angeles to the judge's court, and the inference is made that he represented himself as representing the defendant company at that time. We propose to show by this testimony that he deceived everybody who was in authority in connection with the company, and had no authority to be there, no authority to bind the company, and that he was deceiving the president of it and the secretary of it at this time and in this conversation. His testimony is to be offered by the respondent and we want to show his relationship to the matter and the part he played in it.

Mr. HANLEY. The president of the company is not here. The president of the company is not offered. This witness is now relating not only hearsay, but hearsay upon hearsay as to what the president told Stephens or she told Stephens to tell the president. It is not a question of whether or not the conversations were had afterward. It is a question of whether or not Stephens recommended to the judge certain conditions that he relied upon and believed, and not anything that took place afterward between these parties.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. We have not proposed to show by the question what the president of the company said to Mr. Stephens. We are proposing to show that Mr. Stephens deceived the secretary of the company and the president of the company, the same day that the receivership went into court, about the part he played in it. The respondent may offer him as a witness.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Would it not be better to have this witness in rebuttal to the Stephens' deposition when it is introduced by the respondent? It occurs to the Chair that that would be the proper time to bring out the testimony of this witness.

Mr. HANLEY. No foundation was laid in the deposition that would justify them in calling this witness at this time. The facts ought to be presented after the testimony or deposition of the witness Stephens.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The deposition will develop the fact whether or not there is any ground for testimony of the character suggested at this time. May the Chair suggest that the offer of the witness be made at a time after the deposition is read?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. We concede that is eminently correct, but there is this feature about it. The allegations have been made by respondent in his pleadings that this man Stephens was present and that he participated in the receivership, and we do think that on that ground the testimony would be admissible in chief; but we will reserve the witness for rebuttal. We ask Miss Lind to stand aside for the present unless counsel for the respondent wish to cross-examine upon what we have already asked.

Mr. HANLEY. No; I would not wish to cross-examine until you have completed your examination of the witness.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the witness standing aside?

Mr. HANLEY. None at all.

(The witness retired from the stand.)

Mr. HANLEY. Mr. President, I intended at the opening of the court to request that we be allowed to subpoena Walter G. Maling, clerk of the United States district court. Certain testimony has developed in this hearing which has caused him to become a material and important witness.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there is no objection, the subpoena will be issued for the witness.

EXAMINATION OF ERWIN E. RICHTER

Mr. Manager BROWNING. We will call Mr. Richter as the next witness.

Erwin E. Richter, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Please state your name, place of residence, and profession.—A. Erwin E. Richter, San Francisco, attorney at law.

Q. With what firm are you connected?—A. A member of the firm of Cushing & Cushing.

Q. Do you know anything about the receivership that was instituted against the Golden State Asparagus Co.?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What part did you have in connection with the instituting of that receivership?—A. I represented the defendant company, the Golden State Asparagus Co.

Q. When was this receivership determined on?—A. In September of 1930.

Q. Who filed the petition?—A. The American Can Co., acting through its attorneys, Chickering & Gregory.

Q. How long had your firm been representing the Golden State Asparagus Co.?—A. For about 5½ years prior to that time.

Q. What condition precipitated the receivership?—A. The company had assets valued at something over $1,000,000 and liabilities amounting to something over $700,000. Various of the assets were in nonliquid form and the company was without working capital to pay its current obligations. There was also a danger that one of the creditors, a bank that held the inventory products of the company in pledge, and also a second mortgage on its main assets, would foreclose the properties and sacrifice the equities.

Q. Do you recall the date the petition was filed for receivership?—A. It was filed on September 5, 1930, with the bill.

Q. At that time was the bank in process of foreclosing its mortgage?—A. The bank had been threatening foreclosure for a considerable time prior to that date.

Q. What date was it they had advertised the property for sale?—A. They had not proceeded with any advertisement. They were proceeding by private sale.

Q. When did they propose to make the private sale?—A. On the day the bill in equity was filed and the receiver was appointed.

Q. Were you present when the petition was presented to Judge Louderback for appointment of a receiver?—A. I was.

Q. State what occurred there in his presence on that occasion with regard to the appointment of a receiver. Before doing that, state who else was present.—A. Mr. Fox, a member of the firm of Chickering & Gregory, attorneys for the American Can Co., plaintiff in the bill, and myself representing the defendant, presented the pleading to the respondent in his chambers in the presence of ourselves, and also Mr. George N. Edwards, who the American Can Co. desired to have appointed receiver.

Q. What interest had the American Can Co. in it—the petitioner?—A. Yes; it was one of the largest creditors of the defendant.

Q. Had the defendant company acquiesced in the selection of Mr. Edwards if they could persuade the court to appoint him?—A. The defendant company had no prior acquaintanceship or knowledge of the proposed receiver, and, consequently, it was unwilling to approve of his appointment unless there were appointed as his attorneys the firm of Chickering & Gregory, in whom the defendant company had every confidence.

Q. Is that a reputable firm of lawyers?—A. Very reputable.

Q. When you had the conference with Judge Louderback, please state what occurred between you and him with regard to the selection of the receiver and the attorney.—A. Mr. Fox suggested that Mr. Edwards be selected as receiver, and I suggested that the counsel for the receiver be the firm of Chickering & Gregory. The respondent replied that he would not permit the parties to designate both the receiver and his counsel, but that the parties might nominate either the receiver or his counsel, and that the court would appoint the other party.

Q. Then who was agreed on as between the two? Which choice did the parties who were present take?—A. Mr. Fox and myself retired to consider the suggestion of the respondent, and in the course of discussion I withdrew my objection to the appointment of Mr. Edwards as receiver upon the assurance that Mr. Fox would stand back of him and see that the matter was properly and honestly administered.

Q. And the respondent then did select Mr. Edwards as the receiver, and appoint him?—A. Yes.

Q. What was said, if anything, about the selection of attorneys for Mr. Edwards by Judge Louderback?—A. He stated to us at that time that he would submit to Mr. Edwards several names of attorneys that he might choose from, and that if any of those names or if all of those names were unsatisfactory to him he would submit a further list.

Q. Do you know, in fact, whose names he did submit to him?

Mr. HANLEY. Just a moment. That is objected to unless it is of his own knowledge.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I said, "Do you know, in fact?"

The WITNESS. No; I do not know.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Do you know who was selected and appointed as his counsel?—A. Messrs. Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel.

Q. What, if anything, was said to you—that is, in the presence of the court—about the necessity of economic administration of this estate?—A. At that time?

Q. At any time.—A. I do not recall anything being said on that occasion, and I do not believe I ever had any discussion with the respondent after that occasion about the matter.

Q. How much had been the fees which your firm had been receiving in representation of this company before this receivership?

Mr. HANLEY. Just a moment. That is objected to upon the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial; has nothing to do with the issues in this case, would not be binding as to the true value of the services, and surely could in no way reflect upon Judge Louderback as to whether they charged large or small fees.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, I withdraw the question for the time being.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. As soon as a receiver was appointed, what was the emergency in the case at that time?—A. As I indicated, the threatened foreclosure by the bank that held the properties of the company in pledge for its debt. Upon the appointment of the receiver, Mr. Fox and myself repaired at once by taxicab to the offices of the bank and announced to the bank the appointment of the receiver, and were successful, through our opposition, in causing the sale to be postponed.

Q. Did you have any instructions from Judge Louderback to take that course?—A. Yes. We were authorized by the respondent to act as counsel for the receiver temporarily for that purpose.

Q. How much of the work, if any, did your firm do in connection with the receivership after the appointment of Mr. Edwards and the appointment of counsel, Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel?—A. Both the firms that were counsel for the plaintiff and the defendant did considerable work after the appointment of the receiver in conjunction with the receiver's counsel in a common united purpose of preventing this threatened foreclosure sale.

Q. How did the amount of legal services rendered under the receivership compare with the amount which had been required of the firm representing them as their regular counsel before the receivership?

Mr. HANLEY. Just a moment. That is objected to on the ground that no foundation is laid, upon the further ground that it calls at this time for his opinion upon a matter of which he had no knowledge except by hearsay, and that it is not the ground of an expert opinion until all the facts are presented.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, I have shown that this man and his firm represented this company over a long period of years, and that he was perfectly familiar with the work that was done before and after the receivership.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any allegation in the articles of impeachment as to a conspiracy between the respondent and Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. There is an allegation that he was favoring the firm of Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel with these receiverships, and allowing excessive fees for the amount of work that was done.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The witness may answer the question.

The WITNESS. May I have the question read?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question will be read.

The Official Reporter read the question, as follows:

How did the amount of legal services rendered under the receivership compare with the amount which had been required of the firm representing them as their regular counsel before the receivership?

The WITNESS. The services subsequent to the receivership were not materially dissimilar from the services prior thereto. Unquestionably there was some additional work involved by reason of the matter being conducted in the form of a court proceeding. It became necessary to procure orders of the court approving the various leases and contracts that were entered into in the course of the company's business.

The principal services rendered after the appointment of the receiver related at the beginning to the threatened bank foreclosure. Those services continued for approximately 20 days after the receiver's appointment and were then terminated by the entering into of a satisfactory arrangement with the bank by which the receiver was allowed to continue to dispose of the properties of the company in orderly course of business; and that procedure resulted in the payment to the bank of its indebtedness in full, and the preserving of the equity in those goods for the account of the creditors and stockholders of the company.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Was that service rendered by the attorney for the receiver, or by the attorneys for the petitioner and the defendant company?—A. It was the united and joint action of the three firms. I would not say that any one firm did any more work than either of the other two.

Q. Was there any further litigation than this bank matter which came up in the case—I mean, court litigation?—A. During the first year after the receiver's appointment I do not recall any adversary litigation of any kind.

Q. How much had been the charges of your firm for the legal services to this company, to do all of its legal business, before the receivership, per year?

Mr. HANLEY. Just a moment, Mr. President. Again we object upon the ground that that is not the proper way to fix fees, as to what they charged.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, we have made a comparison of the amount and quality of work which was performed by the attorneys before the receivership and by the attorneys for the receiver. We propose to show what the receiver received as fees from Judge Louderback. We want to show what the attorneys had been paid for that kind of service up to that time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair thought the witness had already answered the question. The Chair does not know the object of it. You may ask the question.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. What was the amount of fees which your firm had received before the receivership?—A. They averaged, for the 5 years preceding the year in which the receiver was appointed, the sum of exactly $679 per year. During the year in which the receiver was appointed the charges were in excess of that amount.

That came about in this way: For a period of approximately 4 months prior to the appointment of a receiver the affairs of the company were under the administration of a committee of its creditors, acting under the supervision of the San Francisco Board of Trade; and all of the activities of the company were very much more onerous by reason of that fact. Elaborate, extended meetings were held under the supervision of the board of trade, and every step in the administration of the company's affairs was first submitted to the members of this committee, and it was the subject of argument and discussion.

Q. What was the charge for that year?—A. The charges for that period of 4 months were $2,250.

Q. What fee was applied for by Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel as attorneys—what amount?—A. The sum of $15,000 for the first 12 months following the appointment of the receiver.

Q. On account or as total fee in the case?—A. As a total fee in the case for that period of time.

Q. What amount was allowed by Judge Louderback?—A. I was here in Washington at the time the proceedings in the court to allow the amount were held. I do not know of my own knowledge, except as I have been informed from the records of the court.

Q. You do know what the records of the court show?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. HANLEY. Let us get the records of the court, if the court please, because the records speak for themselves.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Has the manager on the part of the House the records of the court?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Yes, sir. We will introduce the records.

I believe you may take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. HANLEY:

Q. Mr. Richter, how much was agreed by all parties as to the services to be rendered by the receiver, Mr. Edwards?—A. At the time of his appointment?

Q. Yes; as compensation per month.—A. There were various discussions among the creditors' committee with respect to his compensation; and it was understood rather generally that his compensation would be the sum of $750 per month.

Q. Was not $1,000 a month agreed to by all parties as the compensation that Mr. Edwards, the receiver, should receive?—A. No; my recollection is not.

Q. I understood you to say that you were not present at the time the fees were fixed?—A. That is correct.

Q. You know an attorney named Delger Trowbridge, do you not?—A. Yes, sir; he is a partner.

Q. A partner of yours, one of the members of the firm of Cushing & Cushing?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have confidence in his judgment as to the value of fees, have you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if he in open court, upon the hearing of this matter, advised the court that a reasonable fee for the services rendered by Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel was the sum of $15,000 for the 18 months' time, would you say that that was a reasonable amount?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, we object to that question for the obvious reason that this man should not be called upon to say whether or not someone else's judgment was correct.

Mr. HANLEY. Why, he is talking for the firm. He said the firm fixed the fees. Now we have another member of the firm.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. No; he never said the firm fixed the fees, Mr. President. It is not in this record.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair does not understand just what the object of the question is; but if it is for the purpose of showing that it was a reasonable fee, and the witness has knowledge as to that, the Chair thinks it is a legitimate question.

The WITNESS. I discussed that matter with Mr. Trowbridge, and the discussion was to this effect—that it would be impossible, in view of the well-known attitude of the respondent in granting excessive fees, to procure any lesser fee than that amount.

By Mr. HANLEY:

Q. That is your answer to that; is it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know that upon that hearing, when Mr. Trowbridge was asked his opinion as to the amount of the fees, he advised Judge Louderback—I quote his language—by stating that the $15,000 should cover 18 months' period instead of 12, and he said, "Yes, sir"? Did you know that he gave that answer to that statement in open court?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know further that Mr. Trowbridge, when asked this question in the preliminary hearing in this matter, had in San Francisco between the 6th and the 12th days of September—

So that you agreed that the fees were to run for a full period of 18 months, that $15,000 was a reasonable fee?

Answered—

I felt that probably was the best we could hope to cut down the amount of the fees. That was offered as a compromise suggestion.

Did you know that?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that your partner, Mr. Delger Trowbridge, upon a hearing as to the value of the services, testified in the hearing and agreed to the amount of $15,000 to Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel. That is true, is it not?—A. I would not answer that he agreed to it.

Q. After I have read to you the testimony of your own partner, given in the hearing in this matter preliminarily in San Francisco, calling his attention to the fact that he did so testify and suggested at the hearing had at the time of fixing the fees that a reasonable amount was $15,000, do you wish now to change that amount?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, we suggest that counsel's interpretation of the testimony on that occasion is not a correct interpretation or a correct statement of the testimony.

Mr. HANLEY. I will read the testimony of Trowbridge upon this subject to refresh this witness's memory. I remember that. I read from page 292 of your own record:

Q. Did William J. Hayes, our former referee in bankruptcy, and one of our attorneys for the board of trade, fix any amount that he thought was a reasonable amount?—A. I cannot remember whether he did or not. I know he objected to the amount asked for, but I don't know if he fixed the definite amount he would allow.

Q. Did you, representing Cushing & Cushing, fix a reasonable amount to the judge and advise him?—A. (interrupting). By stating that the $15,000 should cover 18 months' period instead of 12 months; yes, I did.

By Mr. HANLEY:

Q. That is the testimony of Trowbridge, and he was your partner. Do you disagree with his amount in fixing fees for the services rendered in this particular receivership?—A. No; I think we are in perfect agreement. It is the view of both of us that the fees allowed were far in excess of any reasonable amount.

Q. You heard me read Mr. Trowbridge's testimony given at a preliminary hearing. Do you disagree with your partner's set-up of those values?—A. Not at all. The testimony, as I understand it, was that he agreed to the amount if it were provided for a period of 18 months, instead of 12 months, solely for the reason that no better relief could be obtained under the circumstances before the respondent.

Q. Do you not know, at the time that you stand here now, that the fees were allowed upon account?—A. Yes; I understand that the fees were allowed on account of the services for 12 months after the petition was filed.

Q. Did you prepare the order fixing the fees?—A. I did not.

Q. Or agreeing to the amount?—A. Sir?

Q. You were not here, were you?—A. I was not.

Q. So who testified in open court as to the value of the fees you do not know?—A. No.

Q. All you know is from hearsay as to what was done? Is not that true?—A. During the proceedings on that occasion.

Q. There was a threatened closing out in this estate of some very valuable canned goods, asparagus, and so forth, which had been pledged to the Pacific National Bank. That is true, is it not?—A. Correct.

Q. And the amount that it was pledged for was how much, in round figures, at the time of the receivership?—A. Just to my recollection, it was approximately $250,000.

Q. Do you not know that, by a system of negotiation had with Mr. Dinkelspiel, then with the others in the affair, they stopped the bank from foreclosing their securities, and paid the bank and got a very handsome equity out of that matter?—A. Yes. I am intimately familiar with those negotiations, because my firm actively participated in them from beginning to end.

Q. Do you not know that over a series of months the firm of Chickering & Gregory, and the firm of Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel, and yourself, representing Cushing & Cushing, drew not one but probably nine agreements in connection with the same matter with Bert Sooy, then the attorney for the Pacific National Bank?—A. No. Those entire negotiations required only 20 days after the appointment of the receiver to complete.

Q. How long were the agreements deferred?—A. I do not understand the question.

Q. How long a period of time was the payment of the money deferred so that you could wipe out the indebtedness?—A. There was no definite time fixed for deferment. The understanding was that the receiver would proceed to dispose of the inventoried products in the usual course of business.

Q. Was it not true that it was Gaither—what was the name?—A. Gaither, president of the Pacific National Bank.

Q. And that finally, after these tentative agreements had been proposed and each one of them for some reason or another was objected to by one party or the other, you had what was known as a "gentleman's agreement", and he said that he would not foreclose on his securities but would allow it to liquidate in orderly manner?—A. Yes, sir; that was the outcome that was reached on, I think, the 25th day of September.

Q. Is not that due to the fact that certain matters were pointed out to that particular bank president; that he had better not go too hard upon this particular matter because of certain charges of interest that were considered at least, if not regular, a little bit irregular?—A. Yes, sir; that is correct.

Q. Was it not a fact that Mr. Dinkelspiel, then Mr. Martin of the firm, negotiated delay of payment on this matter?—A. Yes; it was myself who suggested to him a possible infirmity with respect to interest.

Q. If the securities had been closed out as contemplated by the president of the bank, was there any equity at all for the firm at that time, due to the market for asparagus?—A. It depended on what they were sold for at forced sale. If the securities were sold at private sale—a forced sale—without notice, the bank was in a position to bid them in for any sum it desired.

Q. Have you any idea, as you stand here, of the amount of money that was realized upon the equity of these goods after the bank was paid?—A. I could not testify as to the exact amount, but my understanding is that out of the proceeds the bank was paid in full and that there was something additional remaining.

Q. Was it $100,000?—A. Oh, no; I would say nowhere near that amount. Possibly in the neighborhood of $20,000.

Q. You are sure of that, are you?—A. That is my best recollection.

Q. At that time the business was running as a going concern; is not that true?—A. To what time do you refer?

Q. At the time of the receivership?—A. At the time the receiver was appointed the operations of the company were very active. From the time of his appointment they became less active, until at the present time there are very little operations of any kind.

Q. Immediately following the receivership, and for a period of a year or more, was not the business actively operating and going?—A. No; during the first 12 months considerable of the properties of the company were leased out to others upon crop-share rentals and other bases of rental.

Q. Is it not true that under the receivership a profit of some fifty-odd thousand dollars in the first year was realized?—A. No. I understand, on the contrary, that after taking depreciation and the fees that were allowed by the respondent for that period of time the so-called "profit" was in fact an actual loss.

Q. I am asking you now, without the fixing of the fees in the estate, did the business show a profit as run under the receivership from the sale of the merchandise and, if so, how much?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President—

The WITNESS. My answer is that the operation did not show a profit.

By Mr. HANLEY:

Q. Have you any detail upon that at all?—A. Sir?

Q. Have you any detail upon that matter at all?—A. I have examined the records to refresh my memory, and the records show that the receiver's accounts for the first 12 months showed an estimated profit, as I recall, of approximately seventy-odd thousand dollars, based upon the anticipated sale of certain of the canned goods at the then prevailing market prices. Such goods, however, were subsequently sold at prices considerably less, so that the anticipated profit in that respect was not realized. Further, that the so-called "profit" was arrived at without any account of depreciation, and that the depreciation amounted to approximately $25,000 a year. And further, that the profit did not take into account the fees, amounting to $28,000, which were allowed by the respondent for that period of time.

Q. No objection was made at any time to the $14,000 allowed the receiver, was there?—A. Yes; there was very substantial objection and criticism among the creditors and stockholders of the company. The administration, the executive administration of the company, theretofore had cost the company approximately $3,000 a year, and the expenses increased the minute the receiver was appointed to $14,000 a year.

Q. Do you not know that it was consented by all parties concerned that there was to be allowed the receiver, according to your statement, $750 a month alone for salary?—A. That is perfectly correct. The creditors were ready to allow that amount without objection to the receiver, although it was three times what it was then costing the company for the services.

Q. Is it not true, Mr. Richter, that a sale of land of some value was made to the Southern Pacific which netted the company some thousands of dollars, by the sale of acreage, that was negotiated through the receivership?—A. A sale of land was made to the railroad, approximately 15 acres, for some $9,800, the sale having been practically consummated by the president of the company and myself through a long period of negotiations preceding the receiver's appointment. The actual consummation of the proceeding occurred subsequently in the course of the receivership.

Q. After you had negotiated up to a certain point, the attorney for the receiver and the receiver negotiated and closed the deal, did they?—A. Correct.

Q. Have you any detail as to the exact amount that was received?—A. Approximately ninety-eight hundred dollars.

Q. Ninety-eight hundred or ninety-eight thousand?—A. Ninety-eight hundred. It was 15 acres, sold at about $600 an acre.

Q. Is it not true that there were a great number of what were known as profit-sharing leases made with others upon land owned by the Golden State Asparagus Co.?—A. I went through the records to see what the proceedings were during the first 12 months, and I counted about 16 or 18 proceedings in court, and I would judge that about 5 or 6 or 7 of those were leases.

Q. In other words, the company owned asparagus land, and instead of marketing it at a loss, they had leased it to others. Is not that true?—A. The asparagus lands the company were interested in were primarily on leased land. They had made an investment of approximately $100,000 some few years before the occurrences in question, and the asparagus so planted came into bearing; the year following the appointment of the receiver, and a considerable amount of the proceeds that the receiver accounted for in his first year grew out of the recapture of the principal amount so invested in the asparagus beds.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair appoints the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. HEBERT] as the Presiding Officer for the day.

(Mr. HEBERT took the chair.)

By Mr. HANLEY:

Q. Did you know that at the time the receiver was appointed the company agreed that they would also compensate Mr. Edwards, the proposed receiver, $250 in addition to the $750 that was agreed upon by the parties?—A. That arose in this way: Associated with the company was another company known as "the Neilsen Packing Co.", 100 percent of the stock of which was owned by the same interest that owned 60 percent of the stock of the Golden State Asparagus Co., the defendant in this case. It was contemplated that the affairs of both companies would be managed by Mr. Edwards under the supervision of the creditors of the two companies and the San Francisco Board of Trade, and that the salary for the joint operation of the two companies would be the sum you mentioned, $1,000 per month, but he was never selected or retained to administer the affairs of the other company and never performed any services in that connection.

Q. And when the matter came up in open court, do you know, from your own knowledge, whether or not Mr. Delger Trowbridge, then representing your firm and representing the defendant in the action, did not consent to the allowance of $14,000 for that period for Mr. Edwards, the receiver?—A. I would answer that my information from what he told me was that he consented against his own best judgment, and very reluctantly.

Q. In other words, he said "yes", but had a mental reservation "no". Is that what you mean?—A. No; I mean that he submitted to the order of the court that the sum of $14,000 should be allowed on account, because he was satisfied that that was the best that could be accomplished.

Q. And from the allowance of the attorneys' fees and from the allowance of the receiver's fees no appeal was ever taken?—A. No.

Q. That is all.

Redirect examination by Mr. BROWNING:

Q. Do you know whether the company have had enough money to pay those fees that have been allowed?—A. My understanding is that the company has not with respect to the attorneys; that the sum of $4,000 was paid on account of the $14,000, and I do not know, it may be that subsequent payments were made, but the company did not have sufficient funds with which to make that payment or it would otherwise have been made.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all.

Recross examination by Mr. HANLEY:

Q. Just one question. In other words, you mean that the liquidation had not gone sufficiently far to bring in cash and they have waited? Is that the idea?—A. Well, I mean this, that the company did not have adequate cash on hand with which to make the payments arising from its operations.

Q. Without sacrificing the property of the company by selling out to get those amounts. Is not that true?—A. Well, the operations of the company since the receivership have resulted in an impairment of capital stock of approximately 50 percent, having been intact at the time of the receiver's appointment, and how the continued disposition of the assets could produce funds does not appear to me.

Q. Do you not know that conditions in the Asparagus Co.'s line, as well as in every fruit, canning, and packing company practically during the last number of years, since the so-called "depression", have been such that they have operated at a loss, and it was not due to the receivership?—A. Absolutely. I do not wish to imply that the operations of the receiver were incompetent and negligent, because, on the contrary, everybody felt that the receiver was an excellent man and performed excellent service.

Mr. HANLEY. I think that is all.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all.

APPOINTMENT OF ATTORNEYS AND ALLOWANCE OF FEES

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, at this point we wish to offer the petition in this case for the appointment of attorneys, and the order filed April 1, 1932, allowing the fee of $14,000 to the attorneys Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel.

Mr. LINFORTH. As part of your offer, will you state or concede that the allowance was on account?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I think the order shows how it was.

Mr. LINFORTH. The order shows it was on account.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Yes; I think undoubtedly there will be further fees allowed there. It is only on account.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The documents will be received.

(See U.S.S. Exhibits 40 and 41.)

EXAMINATION OF DELGER TROWBRIDGE

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Call Mr. Delger Trowbridge. Delger Trowbridge, having been duly sworn, was examined, and testified as follows.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Please state your name, place of residence, and occupation.—A. My name is Delger Trowbridge; my residence is Oakland, Calif.; and my occupation is attorney at law.

Q. Where is your office?—A. In San Francisco.

Q. What firm are you connected with?—A. I am a member of the firm of Cushing & Cushing.

Q. Were you connected with them when the receivership in the Golden State Asparagus case arose?—A. I think I was temporarily absent, serving on the Industrial Accident Commission of the State of California, when the receivership arose.

Q. And you were not present when the receiver was appointed?—A. I was not.

Q. What was the first connection you had with the case?—A. My first connection with the case was shortly before the matter of the application of the receiver and his attorney for compensation for the first year's work came up.

Q. Please state what that was.—A. Mr. Erwin Richter, of our firm, was leaving on business for Washington, and the matter of the application of the receiver and his attorney for compensation was pending. Mr. Richter informed me fully of the whole situation and made certain suggestions as to what should be done at the time of the hearing of this application.

Q. Were you present at the hearing?—A. I was present at the hearing.

Q. Please state what occurred at that hearing.—A. The hearing was on Saturday morning, March 26, 1932. The court had a long criminal calendar, and the matter was not called up until about 20 minutes of 12. Upon the calling of the matter a short statement was made as to the nature of the application by the receiver and his attorney, and then various attorneys representing creditors stated their objection to the court's allowance of fees asked for by the receiver and his attorneys.

Q. Who were they who made those statements?—A. As I remember it, the leading attorney for the creditors was William J. Hayes, attorney for the San Francisco Board of Trade. There was a lawyer by the name of O'Donnell; there was a lawyer by the name of Arthur Johnson, representing about $15,000 in wage claims, who appeared on behalf of the State commissioner of labor; and Mr. Fox, of the firm of Chickering & Gregory, representing the plaintiff American Can Co., with myself, representing the defendant, the Golden State Asparagus Co.

Q. Were all of these people in opposition to the fees that had been applied for?—A. They were.

Q. How much had been asked for?—A. $15,000 was asked for in behalf of the receiver for the first 12 months' work and $15,000 for the attorneys for the receiver for the first 12 months' work.

Q. Was there any objection to the application of the receiver?—A. No; there was not.

Q. What was the objection to?—A. The objection was to the allowance of the fees to the attorneys.

Q. What amounts were presented at that time by those objecting to the fees as adequate for the services that had been rendered?—A. As I remember it, Mr. O'Donnell stated to the court that he thought the fees should be not in excess of $6,000 for the attorney. When he stated his objection, the court was evidently hostile to the objection by creditors.

Mr. HANLEY. We ask that that be stricken out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That may be stricken out. The witness will proceed.

The WITNESS. When he stated his objection, the court ordered him to take the witness stand and testify, as an expert witness, as to the reasonableness of the fees asked by Messrs. Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel. Mr. O'Donnell thereupon took the witness stand and stated that, in his opinion, the fees allowed should be not in excess of $6,000.

Q. Were the ones that he ordered to take the witness stand the lawyers who were making the objection?—A. They were.

Q. Who else testified, if anyone?—A. I cannot remember the names at this time. I know that I did not take the witness stand, because I told the court that Mr. Richter had handled the matter from the beginning, that I was not familiar with the details, and I thought he could pass on the reasonableness of the attorneys' fees from his knowledge as a judge. So I did not take the stand.

Q. Did he invite you to take the stand?—A. I think he would have done so, but I forestalled him by making that statement.

Q. Did he invite the other attorneys there, except the one you have mentioned, to take the witness stand?—A. I do not remember whether Mr. Fox was invited to take the witness stand in that connection, but Mr. Fox, I know, took the witness stand in connection with the application of his firm for $1,500 attorneys' fees and very kindly put in a word also in behalf of our firm in support of our application for $1,500 for representing the defendant during the first year of the receivership.

Q. Were those fees allowed?—A. The $15,000 fees were not allowed. As a matter of fact, the time for adjournment was impending; and in order that the thing could be disposed of quickly, Mr. Fox, of the firm of Chickering & Gregory, made the suggestion that any allowance made to the attorneys and the receiver be made on account. When that suggestion was made, Mr. Dinkelspiel rose and said that if such an order were to be made he would be agreeable to a lower amount being allowed, if it was understood that it was simply on account. Then testimony was taken, as I said before, about the fees of the attorney for the plaintiff and the attorney for the defendant, and then the matter was submitted and the court adjourned.

Q. When did you learn of the action of the court as to the allowance of those fees?—A. To state just what happened, Mr. Dinkelspiel telephoned me that an order had been made allowing $14,000 on account for the receiver and for his attorneys. I said to him, "What order was made regarding the fees for the attorneys for the plaintiff and for the defendant." He said apparently no order was made; but he said, "I am preparing an order to present to the judge and I am putting those fees in, inasmuch as there was no objection by anyone to the allowance of those fees." Then the next thing I knew Mr. Dinkelspiel sent me through the mail a copy of the order as signed by the judge, and the last two paragraphs allowing $1,500 to Chickering & Gregory and $1,500 to Cushing & Cushing were stricken out in ink, and there was no order made one way or the other regarding their application.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. HANLEY:

Q. Mr. Trowbridge, you understand that the matter of your fees is still a subject of future application, do you not?—A. Technically, I would say that it is still under submission.

Q. With reference to the matter of the fixing of the fees, can you tell us who was sworn with reference to the reasonableness of the fee on that day?—A. The only witness who I can possibly identify as having taken the witness stand that morning was Mr. O'Donnell.

Q. Mr. Vincent O'Donnell, it developed upon the examination by Mr. Martin Dinkelspiel, had never been in a receiver case; is not that true?—A. I do not remember the details of his testimony.

Q. He was a young attorney, was he not?—A. I would say so.

Q. Was not this his first appearance even in the Federal court in a matter of that kind?—A. I have no information on that subject.

Q. Do you recall that when Mr. Martin Dinkelspiel examined him and detailed the amount and the value of the services that he finally said, "Yes; I believe $15,000 is a reasonable amount to be allowed"?—A. He said that in answer to a hypothetical question of Mr. Martin Dinkelspiel, including a lot of services that Mr. Dinkelspiel did not perform.

Q. That was your opinion as to whether or not he had performed those services, was it not?—A. That was my information.

Q. You were there with Mr. Hughes, of the board of trade, were you not?—A. I was.

Q. William J. Hughes, since dead?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He had been the attorney for a number of years of the board of trade?—A. That is correct.

Q. Do you recall the suggestion he made as to the value of the services?—A. He made a suggestion in accordance with an agreement between the attorneys for the creditors that the amount of $15,000 asked for for the first year's services be allowed for the first 18 months.

Q. Thirteen months or eighteen months?—A. Eighteen months.

Q. Do you remember whether or not he said that in his opinion it was $12,000 at the outside? Do you recall what he said?—A. Some such statement may have been made. It is not very clear in my mind now.

Q. As a matter of fact, however, when he was asked by the court and you were asked by the court if you had any question of the value of the services, did not the court say, "Do not make a statement, gentlemen, about it, but let us have sworn testimony." Do you recall that?—A. Not in that form; no.

Q. Did he ask you men who were objecting to the fees, "If you wish to testify to the value of the services, please do not do it by an opening statement, but let us make a record so I can have before me sworn testimony about the matter?"—A. He peremptorily demanded that we take the stand and testify to the value of the services that we were making statements about.

Q. In other words, you were all contending that certain fees were not proper and he said, "You are all lawyers, and if you wish to testify to the value of the services, please take the stand upon the matter", did he not?—A. He ordered us to take the stand.

Q. You did not take it, did you?—A. No; because I was not qualified as a witness, and so told the judge.

Q. But you did qualify as a witness or in the statement that you made there, did you not? You did qualify as a member of the firm of Cushing & Cushing?—A. I was simply stating our opinion as attorneys on information furnished to me.

Q. You testified at the hearing out in San Francisco, did you not?—A. I did.

Q. If I can refresh your memory, Mr. Trowbridge, I would like to do so by a few questions. Does this refresh your memory as to what took place:

Cross-examination by Mr. HANLEY:

Q. Now, on cross-examination you did hear Eugene O'Donnell say, knowing what was asked him on cross-examination, that the fee would be reasonably worth $15,000?—A. I don't remember that.

Q. Did William J. Hayes, our former referee in bankruptcy, and one of our attorneys for the board of trade, fix any amount that he thought was a reasonable amount?—A. I cannot remember whether he did or not. I know he objected to the amount asked for, but I don't know if he fixed the definite amount he would allow.

Q. Did you, representing Cushing & Cushing, fix a reasonable amount to the judge and advise him?—A. (Interrupting.) By stating that the $15,000 should cover 18 months' period instead of 12 months; yes, I did.

Q. So that you agreed that if the fees were to run on for the full period of 18 months, that $15,000 was a reasonable fee?—A. I felt that probably that was the least that we could hope to cut down the amount of the fees. That was offered as a compromise suggestion.

Q. You were compromising, as attorney for the company that was in the hands of the receiver. You were not advising any unreasonable amount, were you—you don't want this committee to so understand you, do you?—A. I was giving the best advice to bring about the lowest figure we could hope to get.

Q. Kindly answer my question. You were not advising the court at that time to have the court allow an unreasonable fee, were you?—A. I would rather stand on that last answer, because—

Mr. SUMNERS (interrupting). I think that is sufficient. He has answered.

Mr. HANLEY. In any event, you did suggest that, for 18 months, $15,000 was a fee that should be allowed?

The WITNESS. That is correct.

Did you give those answers as I have read them from the record of the subcommittee when they were in San Francisco between the 6th and the 12th of September 1932?—A. That testimony is correct with one exception. The word "least" should be "most."

Q. What?—A. The testimony that you read is correct except that the reporter has made a mistake and used the word "least" instead of "most."

Q. All right.—A. That is in the early part of the excerpt.

Q. Do you recall Judge Louderback asking Mr. Fox, of Chickering & Gregory, whether or not, after he testified about his own services, he had any suggestions to make, and Fox said that he did not like to make any suggestions at all? Do you recall that?—A. I remember that he did make a suggestion that any fees that were allowed be allowed simply on account.

Q. And a credit in the amount that what you have stated, in your opinion, was reasonable on account?—A. That is my recollection.

Q. And the $14,000 instead of $15,000, as you suggested, was allowed on account? That is true, is it not?—A. That is correct.

Mr. HANLEY. That is all.

Redirect examination by Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. On the examination which has been referred to the question was asked you:

So that you agreed that if the fees were to run on for the full period of 18 months that $15,000 was a reasonable fee?

And you stated your answer was:

I felt that probably that was the most that we could hope to cut down the amount of the fees. That was offered as a compromise suggestion.

May I ask you to explain why that was the most you hoped to cut it down?

Mr. HANLEY. We object to that. The Senate as the jury will take the testimony and his explanation now of what he intended to say has no part in the record.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Counsel brought that out, and I think the witness should have the right to explain.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present occupant of the chair thinks that should be left to the determination of the court.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I have a question I desire to have propounded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the interrogatory proposed by the Senator from Alabama.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. What, in your judgment, would have been a reasonable fee for the services performed by the attorneys for the receiver?

The WITNESS. To answer that question fairly and honestly I should say that my opinion would be based on an examination of the files of work done by the attorneys and by conversations with various attorneys interested in the case, as I have already testified on direct examination that I had no connection with the case in the early part of it. However, I would say that a reasonable fee in this case should not have exceeded $7,500.

By Mr. HANLEY:

Q. And still, notwithstanding the question you have just answered, as propounded by the Senator from Alabama, you told the committee that a fee of $15,000 for 18 months was reasonable?—A. I told them that because I knew that was the best deal we could get for the creditors and the company.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all.

(The witness retired from the stand.)

INTRODUCTION OF HOTEL FAIRMONT RECORDS

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, on yesterday we requested to insert certain records of the Hotel Fairmont in the city of San Francisco, which were brought here by the auditor of that hotel, who is now in the hospital on account of an operation and would not be in attendance. I have submitted these to counsel for the respondent. As to some of them a ready agreement was given, and as to others judgment was withheld. I would request to know now if I may be permitted to insert those under agreement at this time as if the auditor were here himself to identify them.

Mr. HANLEY. We have no objection to their being inserted at this time in the record, with no comments, of course, upon them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The documents may be offered and received.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I offer the registration card of the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco, dated September 21, 1929: "Name, Sam Leake; street, Guest; city and State, San Francisco." I ask that it may be made a part of the record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That may be done.

(See U.S.S. Exhibit 42.)

Mr. Manager BROWNING. This has reference to room 26, which was occupied by Judge Louderback as heretofore shown in the proof. I also offer the records of said hotel covering room 26 from September 1929 to and including April 1933.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Do you wish to have these printed in full in the RECORD?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That may be done.
(See U.S.S. Exhibit 43.)

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I also offer the record of room 679, Fairmont Hotel, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Leake, and by Mr. W. S. Leake, from January 1928 to and including April 1933, and ask that they be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That may be done.
(See U.S.S. Exhibit 44.)

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I further offer the original telephone sheets of the daily calls of the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco on the dates of March 11, 1930, and March 13, 1930, for the special purpose of identifying two calls, one on each date, from room 679. The name of the call was from "Leake" to "471 Woodside" on each date.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They may be received.
(See U.S.S. Exhibit 45.)

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I understand that counsel for the respondent are willing to stipulate that in 1930 the telephone directory of San Francisco showed that "471 Woodside" was the residence telephone number of John W. Short.

Mr. HANLEY. That is admitted.

(At this point Mr. Manager BROWNING handed Mr. Hanley a paper and Mr. Hanley said:)

The last offer made is only a summary made in lead-pencil writing of the sick auditor. I think the original records show these amounts, so I think his lead-pencil memorandum, without any chance to check it, ought not to be offered at this time. There is no objection to the record itself, but there is to the lead-pencil offering.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. This pencil memorandum shows how the monthly payments were made, whether by Judge Louderback's check or whether by cash by Mr. Leake for room 26 in the Fairmont Hotel from October 1929 to April 1933. I offer this to show or indicate how the payments were made for the bill for this room.

Mr. HANLEY. I think the record would be the best evidence and not the summary of the record made by the absent witness. We will have later the canceled checks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Why not save time by allowing it to go into the RECORD subject to any correction that respondent may find it necessary to make?

Mr. HANLEY. That is all right.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That may be done.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be received with that understanding.

(See U.S.S. Exhibit 46.)

EXAMINATION OF SIDNEY M. EHLMANN

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Call Mr. Ehrmann.

Sidney M. Ehrmann, having been duly sworn, was examined, and testified as follows:

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Please state your name, your place of residence, and your profession.—A. My name is Sidney M. Ehrmann; I reside in San Francisco, and I am an attorney at law.

Q. Are you a member of the firm of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When the controversy over the appointment of Mr. Strong arose, where were you?—A. I was in London at the time.

Q. I will read you this statement from the testimony of Judge Louderback, given before the committee on the 16th day of January last:

Let me put it very plain to you. The firm of Heller & Ehrmann is a strong political firm in San Francisco. Mr. Ehrmann is quite a power; also I had a sentimental reason because of the friendship of Mr. Ehrmann and my brother. I was sorry to see the whole thing, and I was determined that there would be no criticism of that estate in the event I had to remove Strong.

And further the statement is made that you were a regent of the University of California. I will ask you if, in fact, you were a regent at that time.—A. I was not.

Q. Are you one now?—A. I am a regent now.

Q. When did you become a regent?—A. I was appointed a regent in October 1930.

Q. Were you present at the hearing on the fees that were allowed in this case?—A. Yes, sir; I was present.

Q. It is the Russell-Colvin case that I have reference to.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what capacity?—A. I went there at the instance of the San Francisco Stock Exchange to be merely an observer and report to them what had happened.

Q. Did you have any standing in the court at that time as an attorney in the case?—A. I had no standing whatsoever as an attorney in the case, because we represented no one in court.

Q. What was the interest of the stock exchange in the matter?—A. The interest of the stock exchange was this—that they had desired from the outset, in accordance with their usual custom, to have as inexpensive and speedy a liquidation of the affairs of the bankrupt brokerage concern as was possible; and they had received complaints, I understand, from creditors in regard to the fees that were applied for—a total of $128,000—and they wanted to know from me what could be done about it. I said, "I do not see that anything can be done about it. You have no standing in court."

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a minute. Mr. President, under the rule established, it is incumbent upon us to object to an answer, if not responsive or improper, before it is concluded. For that reason we interrupt the witness and object to the answer and move to strike it out upon the ground, first, that it is not responsive to the question and, second, that it is incompetent and hearsay so far as the respondent is concerned.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks there is some merit in the contention of the respondent. He will not order the answer stricken out; but the witness is directed to answer the question as far as the question requires an answer, and then stop.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Had the stock exchange in fact received complaints from creditors with regard to the cost of administration?

Mr. LINFORTH. One moment, Mr. President. We object to that question unless the witness answers of his own knowledge, and not through hearsay.

The WITNESS. I can only answer that in this way, that I am counsel for the stock exchange—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Just a minute, Mr. Witness. You are to answer if you know of your own knowledge.

The WITNESS. Well, Mr. President, I only know of my own knowledge, as counsel for the exchange, of communications that have come to the secretary, and which he informs me of. No creditor came to me personally in the exchange; but a creditor, or two creditors, did speak to me in the court room.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Then you do know of those two complaints?—A. I know of those two complaints. They came up and spoke to me in the court room.

Q. And the others came to you through the due course of your relationship as attorney for the stock exchange?

Mr. LINFORTH. One moment. We object to that as being hearsay and incompetent and not binding on the respondent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present occupant of the chair feels that the evidence of the men who made the complaints would be the best evidence here. This witness may relate what he knows as to complaints that he himself received from those who made them.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, will the President permit a suggestion from the managers?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Certainly.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. We quite appreciate the correctness of the ruling of the present occupant of the chair, and we do not want to encumber the RECORD; but we hope the present occupant of the chair will appreciate the fact that it is 3,000 miles from here to the place where many of these witnesses reside. We want to proceed substantially within the rules but to get before the Senate as clearly as we can the picture that the witnesses may be able to give.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair appreciates the difficulties under which counsel may be laboring.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. We do not insist, because this is the responsibility of the Senate, and we are just doing the best we can under the circumstances.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks that if the rules are followed the hearing will be expedited and the facts will be elicited quite as readily.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. So you were there because of objections made by the creditors of the concern?—A. I was in court during that entire hearing.

Q. How long have you or your firm represented the stock exchange of San Francisco?—A. Ever since I became a member of the firm originally known as "Heller, Powers & Ehrmann", in 1905. Before that time I was employed by that firm; and the senior member of the firm, Mr. Heller, had been attorney for the stock exchange from the early nineties.

Q. Have you known, throughout that length of time, of the liquidation of other members of the stock exchange?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you now recall any of them?—A. I can recall several cases which were liquidated in the stock exchange itself. The president and a committee from the board of governors acted in the capacity of receivers, and relied upon my firm for such legal advice as was necessary in the liquidation.

Q. What are the names of those particular cases?—A. There is one in particular—there are one or two I would not care to mention, because members of those firms are again in business—but I recall two that I think there is no objection to mentioning. One was the Schwartz matter, Harry Schwartz, and the other was Mr. Gregg.

Q. What was the policy of the exchange with regard to these liquidations?

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair does not see the materiality of that.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, if I may be indulged just a moment, it has been clearly indicated that one manner of defense of the conduct of the respondent in this case is the activity of the stock exchange with regard to the liquidation. We do feel that this man, who has been attorney for that concern for 28 years, should be permitted, if he knows—and he does say that he knows—to describe the attitude that the stock exchange always takes toward the liquidation of its members who get into financial difficulty, and to tell the method by which that liquidation is made. We do feel that that is material.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, may I add that, of course, we are not here trying the attitude of the stock exchange in other cases. If we were, it would not be material unless they brought home knowledge to the respondent, at and prior to the time that he made the order in question, that he knew of the attitude of the stock exchange in these other matters.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. One word, Mr. President; and that is that this will establish the unjustified suspicion, if there was such a thing, on the part of the respondent at that time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present occupant of the chair does not see the materiality of the inquiry and will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. At the hearing on the fees, when the matter was closed, did you receive any communication from Judge Louderback?—A. I received no direct communication from Judge Louderback; but on the evening of the second day of the hearing—

Mr. LINFORTH. May I interrupt under the rule, Mr. President? The witness has answered the question. I submit that that kind of an answer calls for no explanation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness can answer "yes" or "no" and then explain.

The WITNESS. I would say "yes." On the evening of the second day, and after the hearing was adjourned, about half-past 5 to 6 o'clock, the crier of the court told me that Judge Louderback would like to talk to me in chambers, and I told him I declined to go.

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment, may it please the President. We move to strike out that answer as being hearsay and incompetent and not binding on the respondent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will overrule the objection, because he assumes counsel for the proponents will follow up the question with others and that it is laying the foundation for other questions. On that ground the Chair will admit it.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, of course we show that for what it is worth, of its own value.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is admitted.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Will the Chair indulge the managers for just a moment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Certainly.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. As bearing upon the admissibility of the testimony sought to be elicited from this witness with regard to the interest and the custom of the stock exchange with reference to their members who get into financial difficulty, we desire to call the attention of the Chair to a very brief quotation from the opening address of the attorney for the respondent, which appears near the bottom of page 97, the closing words in the paragraph which ends with the word "exchange." Counsel for the respondent made this statement:

We will show you why the stock exchange was so anxious to control the appointment not only of the receiver but to have appointed the attorney for the San Francisco Stock Exchange.

The respondent, of course, has not yet put on his testimony. We do not want to take the time of the court unnecessarily; but this witness for practically 30 years has represented the stock exchange as its counsel, and therefore, as every lawyer knows, is familiar with the customs and with the motives and with the interest of his client. This record shows that his client was interested in the inception of this matter in having its auditor and having its counsel assist in winding up the affairs of this particular concern.

We want to show that there was no deviation from this general policy with regard to this particular concern, but that, for the protection of the reputation of its own members, and for the protection of the interests of the creditors of a member, in all instances it was the custom of the exchange to undertake to procure these liquidations through those agencies which it controlled, and by this witness we want to show that he was carrying out a long-established custom which we believe it may be reasonably assumed a resident of that community, a judge on the State bench, and later on the Federal bench, at least would accept as knowledge that falls within the category of common knowledge, insofar as his group of persons is concerned. We do not want to insist, but we want to lay clearly before the court the motives which prompt the managers in attempting to elicit this information, and to show the true character and the true relationship of the stock exchange with regard to this particular transaction.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. I assume that the respondent may have known of it, for he is in no way bound by that custom. If the purpose as announced by the attorney for the respondent is carried out, and evidence is adduced here in support of the statement made in the opening address, then this testimony will be quite proper, but until that time the Chair does not think it is proper.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. We quite understand that. I make this statement, not in insisting, but in explanation of the attitude of the managers. There are four members of this firm here, and we are trying to make it possible for them to go if they can.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. Manager, you recall that we are through with two members of that firm.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, we do not concede that counsel for the respondent has a right to dismiss our witnesses until we get ready to dismiss them. Of course, they have been very accommodating.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is not necessary to take up the time of the court with that kind of controversy. Proceed with the examination.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all with this witness for us.

Cross-examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. You not only attended the hearing of the application for fees, but you were also a witness, were you not?—A. I was subpoenaed as a witness.

Q. And you testified as a witness, did you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I want to call your attention to page 30 of the record and ask you if at that time and upon that hearing you testified as follows:

I do not in any way underestimate the value of the services, but I cannot help basing my opinion on the fact that I have given an estimate, or my firm has given an estimate, of what the legal fees would be in case of a receivership, and naturally I may be influenced in that respect.

I want to call your attention particularly to what follows:

I want to say right here that the work done has been excellent, both on the part of the receiver and on the part of the attorneys, so far as I have heard from every source.

Did you so testify before Judge Louderback on that hearing and before he made any order?—A. I did.

Q. And was that your then opinion?—A. Based on the evidence that I heard, that was my opinion, and still is, on all the evidence that I heard given in that case.

Q. And was it your opinion at that time that the work done, both by the receiver and by his attorneys, had been excellent from every source that you had heard from?—A. From any source I had heard from, the administration had been very well carried on, excellently carried on.

Q. Both by the receiver and by his attorneys?—A. As far as I had heard. I heard most of the detail in the courts on the testimony of the receiver and his attorneys.

Mr. LINFORTH. No further questions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Have the managers any further questions?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness will be excused.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Just one moment, if I may ask one question.

Redirect examination by Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. At that time what did you testify that, in your opinion, the services of the attorneys were worth in that case?—A. I testified that, in my opinion, the outside figures would be between $20,000 and $25,000.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all.

Recross-examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Ehrmann, I have a few more questions, then. Did you not upon that hearing testify in substance that prior to any work being done in the receivership matter your firm had given an estimate to the stock exchange of what you thought your firm would charge if you people were the attorneys?—A. Yes, sir; I understand that an estimate was given as to the total fees that would be payable in the event of liquidation through court. That was done because the stock exchange had previously liquidated these partnerships and knew what the costs were.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, in line with the policy established I interrupt the witness and move to strike out the latter part of his answer as not responsive and not in explanation of the answer given.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It seems to the Chair that the answer is responsive, though going perhaps beyond the necessity. I overrule the objection.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. That estimate to which you referred in the testimony which you gave was an estimate which your firm gave to the stock exchange, was it not?—A. Yes, sir; it was an estimate of what the court costs ought to be, both for the receiver and for the attorneys for the receiver.

Q. You did not give that estimate to Mr. Strong, the receiver, but you gave it to the stock exchange. Is that correct?—A. It was reported to the secretary of the stock exchange, who made the inquiry what the costs of such a receivership should be.

Q. Is it not the fact that in giving your testimony on this application before Judge Louderback in words or substance you stated that you could not keep and you could not help from basing your opinion on the fact that your firm had given an estimate as to what the fees to the stock exchange would be in case of receivership?—A. I said that, Mr. Linforth, in starting to give my testimony, and I was halted from all testimony of that kind by the counsel for the respondent—

Mr. LINFORTH. I again interrupt, Mr. President, and submit the answer is not responsive in any sense to the question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness might have answered that "yes" or "no" and explained why he answered "yes" or "no." I overrule the objection.

The WITNESS. I wanted to say further in explanation that that was given in connection with testimony given to me—that was given by me—that, regardless of that fact, and based on the evidence I had heard and examined, the services were worth between 20 and 25 thousand dollars at the outside.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Bearing on the question of the fees and your estimate, did you not give this answer at that time?—

My opinion has practically been formed by the fact that my firm told the stock exchange what would approximate the charge.

Did you give that answer at that time?—A. If it is in the record there, I did, Mr. Linforth.

Q. Would you like to see it?—A. I quite take your word for anything you read from the record, sir.

Q. Thank you. We have known each other a long time.—

A. I have known you so long that I quite appreciate that fact.

Q. When you gave that answer you meant it, of course, did you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. LINFORTH. No further questions.

Redirect examination by Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Mr. Ehrmann, will you explain about the report to the stock exchange on which you have been interrogated, giving an estimate of what your firm would charge? How did that come about?—A. It comes about this way. In these previous liquidations that took place in the stock exchange there was no charge for the receivership, because it was done through the president and a committee of the board of governors, and the charges of the attorneys were very small. In the Schwartz matter, for example, which involved between, I will say, three and four hundred thousand dollars—

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. I think that is not called for.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, with all deference, if I may be permitted a word, counsel for the respondent asked specifically about the report he gave to the stock exchange, or which his firm gave to it, as to the estimate of what they would charge; and it was interwoven with the testimony he gave, which was quoted here from the record by counsel for respondent; and I think that under the rules surely he should be permitted to explain what that was on which this testimony is said to have been based.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Counsel is quite right; the witness may testify and say what report he gave to the stock exchange.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. All right.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, may I add a remark? The question I asked the witness related to an estimate his firm gave to the stock exchange about this very case, not the Schwartz case or some other case, and whatever they did in regard to this particular case we have not the slightest objection to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is my recollection, and it is quite proper for the witness to testify regarding that. Counsel may interrogate him on that.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Will you explain, Mr. Ehrmann, about the report which your firm made to the stock exchange on the fee which it would cost to liquidate this estate?—A. My firm reported to the stock exchange that they were unable to definitely state what the services would entail, but that in any event they would say that the attorneys' fees would not exceed $20,000.

Q. What about the receiver's fees? Did you make any report on that?—A. I understand—I have not heard this except through the secretary of the stock exchange—that the receiver was not to receive in excess of $15,000. I may say those things were told me when I was asked to attend the hearing.

Mr. LINFORTH. Then I move to strike out those answers upon the ground that they are hearsay.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Mr. Witness, were you told under what circumstances these statements were made?—A. No; these statements were made to me.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By whom?

The WITNESS. By the president and secretary, as I recall it. I spoke to both of them before I was instructed to go out as an observer on this application for fees that totaled $128,000.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I have a question which I desire to have asked the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee propounds an interrogatory, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Do you know John Douglas Short, and can you give us some facts about him? Can you advise us as to his ability and his integrity? How long had he been practicing law when he was appointed attorney for the receiver? Was he a lawyer in a firm, or was he simply a lawyer employed by a firm?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Mr. Clerk, let me suggest that you read the first interrogatory, and let us get an answer to that, and then we can proceed with the other branches of the question.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. Do you know John Douglas Short and can you give us some facts about him?

The WITNESS. My first acquaintance with John Douglas Short was at the time of this hearing on the application for fees. I did not know him previously.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Can you advise us as to his ability and his integrity?

The WITNESS. Not from my personal knowledge; only from what I have heard.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

How long had he been practicing law when he was appointed attorney for the receiver?

The WITNESS. I can give that only from what I have heard, not from my knowledge.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Could the witness not give his knowledge on both those questions? Could he not give both answers on his knowledge?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In the opinion of the Chair, if he does not know of his own knowledge, but only from what he heard, it would not be admissible. Of course if he knows what the man's reputation is in the community he can testify to that; if he does not know, his answer would be immaterial.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have not the question before me, but I will amend it so as to include his general reputation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee amends his interrogatory and the clerk will read it as amended.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. Can you advise us as to his ability and his integrity from reputation?

The WITNESS. I do not think Mr. Short had established a reputation at the bar, and I had heard nothing as to his ability, one way or the other. I cannot advise as to that. I generally think I would have heard about his ability had it been of any outstanding character.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. How long had he been practicing law when he was appointed attorney for the receiver?

The WITNESS. I think he had been practicing law for 4 or 5 years.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. Was he a lawyer in a firm or was he simply a lawyer employed by a firm?

The WITNESS. He was a lawyer employed by a firm.

Mr. McKELLAR. I will submit one other question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee offers a further interrogatory, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. How long have you been at the bar in San Francisco, and have you enjoyed an extensive practice, and have you a general knowledge of lawyers there?

The WITNESS. I was admitted to the bar in 1897 but did not commence to practice until 1 year later, in 1898. Consequently I have been at the bar for 35 years. I have quite an extensive practice and am well acquainted with members of the bar. In the last 10 years, I want to say, I have not become acquainted with the younger men in the way that I know men like Mr. Linforth and Mr. Hanley.

Mr. BLACK. I desire to propound an inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama propounds an interrogatory, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. Do you know the general character and reputation of W. S. Leake in San Francisco?

The WITNESS. I think I have heard him discussed a good deal.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. If so, is his general character good or bad?

The WITNESS. If I had to answer that question categorically, I would say that I have not heard him praised.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any further questions desired to be asked by Senators?

Mr. BLACK. In order that I may get an answer to my question, I should like to ask another question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama propounds a further inquiry, which will be read by the clerk. The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. Is Mr. Leake's general reputation for honesty and integrity good or bad?

The WITNESS. I do not know. I cannot answer that question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any further questions?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I have no further questions to ask, Mr. President.

Recross-examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Ehrmann, in the last 20 years have you come in contact with Mr. Leake?—A. No, sir.

Q. In the last 20 years have you come in contact with any of Mr. Leake's friends or associates?—A. I do not think so.

Q. In the last 20 years have you come in contact with anyone who, to your knowledge, has come in contact with Mr. Leake?—A. I have heard people talk about Mr. Leake on various occasions. I do not know what their contacts with him were.

Mr. LINFORTH. I think that is all.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness is excused.

RE-EXAMINATION OF DELGER TROWBRIDGE

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Call Mr. Delger Trowbridge again.

Delger Trowbridge, having been previously duly sworn, was recalled and testified as follows:

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Mr. Trowbridge, do you remember the origin of the claim against the Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association in the name of Helen Lay that resulted in a receivership in that case?—A. I remember that, Mr. Browning.

Q. Do you remember the date when it arose, approximately?—A. Approximately, July 24, 1930.

Q. What was the first information you had about it—before asking that question I will ask in what official capacity you were acting at that time?—A. I had been for some 2 years a member of the Industrial Accident Commission of the State of California.

Q. And was it in that capacity that you learned of this claim?—A. My connection with that matter was entirely as a member of the Industrial Accident Commission.

Q. Please relate how the claim came to your attention.—A. Do you want me to give the history of the beginning of it?

Q. Yes; briefly.—A. About—

Mr. HANLEY. Mr. President, just a moment. I submit that we have listened to histories until it is getting tiresome. I think we ought to have questions put so we will be in a position to make legal objection to testimony, and I object now to the witness making a statement that will be largely hearsay testimony until we have a chance to object to it in legal form.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The managers on the part of the House in the conduct of their examination must be allowed some latitude, and the Chair overrules the objection.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, may I make an apology?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The manager may proceed.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I am advised by my associates that a rule was announced under which only one manager would be permitted to address the Chair or the Senate sitting as a court with reference to matters, and, not understanding that rule, I offered some observations a moment ago with regard to the admission of testimony. I was not aware of the rule, and I make that apology to the Chair and to the Senate sitting as a court.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will say that there was no objection to the remarks of the manager, and the Members of the Senate well understood that what he said was quite in order.

The WITNESS (continuing). About July 23, 1930, I received a call from Mr. Roy Bronson, a prominent practitioner before the Industrial Accident Commission. He told me that he was attorney in California for the Lumbermans Reciprocal Association, an insurance company of Texas, which wrote a lot of compensation-insurance business in California. He told me that the company in Texas was having financial difficulties and was drawing large sums of money out of the account in California; that he was afraid that there was going to be a smash, and that the actions of the Texas officials would prejudice the California creditors. I said to Mr. Bronson, "What has that got to do with me?" He said, "Well, we would like to arrange it so that we can get a better receiver appointed to protect the funds in California." He explained that the insurance commission in the State of California had no power to act in the matter until a receiver was appointed in Texas, and that there was no information that a receiver in Texas was about to be appointed—that is, within the next few hours. He also stated that in order to get into the Federal court they had to get a claim for $3,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will suggest that all that evidence is purely hearsay and the time of the Senate sitting as a court should not be taken in rehearsing these things. The witness may say as a result of the conversations with these people what he did; that is quite proper; but as for restating the conversations that he had with various people in the course of these transactions, that, to the mind of the present occupant of the chair, is wholly immaterial, and is needlessly taking up the time of the Senate.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. As a result of these conversations and following them, was a claim presented to you for your action?—A. There was a claim presented for our action by a Helen Lay, who was the widow of a workman who was killed during the course of his employment, and, with the understanding that in case of a receiver being asked for in the Federal court the State insurance commissioner would be recommended by the attorneys who were interested, we consented to make an award for Mrs. Lay in the sum of $5,000 forthwith. In order to do that it was necessary for the attorneys for the defendant insurance company to waive notice of hearing and consent to the commutation of the award to an immediate payment of $5,000.

Q. Was that consent given?—A. What consent?

Q. To waive all of that?—A. Yes; the insurance company representative waived notice of hearing and agreed to the payment of the lump sum of $5,000 forthwith.

Q. Was that an absolute allowance of the claim, or was there any condition attached to it?

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment. We object to that, may it please the Chair, upon the ground that if it was not absolute and was conditional it is surely the subject of a writing, and the writing would be the best evidence.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Do you have certified copies of your action on that claim with you, Mr. Trowbridge?—A. I think I furnished the managers with a copy this morning.

Q. I hand you those documents and ask you to state what they are.—A. I hold here a certified copy of the application for adjustment of claim, findings, and award, filed July 28, 1930; petition for rehearing by the Bos Construction Co. filed August 5, 1930; order granting petition for rehearing of defendant Bos Construction Co. filed August 8, all certified by the assistant secretary of the Industrial Accident Commission under seal of the commission.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. We offer these in evidence.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They may be received.

(See U.S.S. Exhibit 47.)

The WITNESS. I have also here a certified copy of the order denying the petition for writ of review against the order of the commission granting the petition for rehearing, certified by the clerk of the Court of Appeals of the State of California, which would complete the documentary records just stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is it the desire of counsel to have the last document also offered?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Yes; we offer that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It may be received.

(See U.S.S. Exhibit 48.)

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Was the first order made a conditional order?

Mr. LINFORTH. We object to the question as to whether or not it was a conditional order upon the ground that the order speaks for itself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the inquiry directed to the order which has just been introduced?

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Was the first order made a conditional order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Would it not save time to ask the question rather than to have the order read?

Mr. LINFORTH. With that suggestion I withdraw the objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Official Reporter will read the question.

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Was the first order made a conditional order?

The WITNESS. Do you mean conditional as a matter of law or as a matter of fact?

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Was it subject to be revoked? I mean, was there a condition in it so it could be revoked by action of the commission?—A. What you mean is that under the law we had the power to grant the petition for rehearing if the petition were filed and the petition to reopen under the Workmen's Compensation Act. Under the law the order could be reviewed and set aside in those two manners.

Q. Do you have any personal knowledge when the application was made for receivership based on this claim that you had allowed?—A. I have personal knowledge through the papers in the clerk's office in the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, from my own examination of them.

Q. What representation was made to you, before the granting of the order, as to who the receiver would be in this case?

Mr. LINFORTH. We object to that as not in any way, shape, or form binding upon the respondent and because it calls for hearsay.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. If it is not competent for that purpose, of course, the Senate as a court would not consider it; but if I may be permitted to say, our theory of the case is that the State commissioner of insurance, who was finally determined under the law to have exclusive jurisdiction of the administration of this estate, thought he had the assurance, and this commissioner when he granted the claim thought he had the assurance that the commissioner would be appointed receiver in that case. I was merely trying to show that fact.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the insurance commissioner has some knowledge of this case that is material, he is the best evidence. You should not offer hearsay evidence of this character if that is the fact.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. After the granting of this claim or after favorable action on the claim, was the petition filed for a rehearing?—A. The petition for a rehearing was filed.

Q. When?—A. As I remember the record, it was on August 5, 1930. I would like to consult the certified copies of the record again. [After examining the papers.] It was filed August 5, 1930.

Q. Were you present in the hearing on the receivership when it was had before Judge Louderback?—A. I was present at a hearing before Judge Louderback on August 8, 1930, involving the question of whether the receivership could be vacated or not, and also whether the receiver appointed by Judge Louderback should have the right to continue with the receivership, and I believe he asked for an injunction restraining the State officials from exercising any jurisdiction in the matter of that case.

Q. In the meantime the Federal receiver had been appointed by Judge Louderback?—A. Yes; that is correct.

Q. Who was it?—A. Samuel Shortridge, Jr.

Q. Who was appointed as counsel for him?—A. Marshall Woodworth.

Q. In the meantime the State commissioner of insurance had contested the right in the Federal court, if I understand it, for this receiver to act?—A. He had filed a petition to revoke the appointment of Samuel Shortridge, Jr., as receiver of this company.

Q. And it was in the hearing on that petition in which you appeared in court?—A. That is correct.

Q. In what capacity did you appear?—A. I appeared as a member of the Industrial Accident Commission and testified regarding the actions of the commission.

Q. What testimony did you give before Judge Louderback at that time with regard to this petition?

Mr. HANLEY. If it is in writing we ought to have it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That would be the best evidence.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Do you know whether a record was made of your evidence or not?—A. I believe there was. I think it appears in the transcript on the appeal of the Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association case to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, we are going to ask the witness to stand aside temporarily so we may get the record. It is in the Judiciary Committee room. I apologize for not having it present because I did not know that such a point was going to be raised. We have a certified copy of the transcript which we want to present and verify.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Cannot counsel agree as to the general purport of the testimony?

Mr. HANLEY. I think we can, although there are certain parts of the cross-examination that Mr. Bronson made of this witness that we want made a part of the record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Very well. The witness may stand aside temporarily.

(The witness retired from the stand.)

PHYSICAL CONDITION OF WITNESS EDWARDS

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, may I suggest to the honorable managers that Mr. Edwards, a witness subpoenaed, has notified us that he has an infection of the throat and ear and desires to go to the hospital. We have had him in waiting this morning and I understood from Mr. Manager Perkins that he was to be called so he could be excused. I merely call attention to that in case the managers have overlooked it.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Did we subpoena him?

Mr. LINFORTH. No, you did not; but my information was that you gentlemen asked him to be here, that you desired him. If you do not desire him, I would, under these conditions, ask leave to call him out of order as our own witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What is the disposition of the managers?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. We do not care to put him on at this time. So far as counsel's application is concerned, we do not resist it. We are perfectly willing for them to put him on if they desire.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does counsel for the respondent feel that this is absolutely necessary at this time? Is it not possible that the witness can be here in a day or two?

Mr. LINFORTH. The witness advised me that he had picked up this infection in Chicago and that he had been doctoring it ever since he received it and he was afraid he would be ordered into the hospital. I would like for you, Mr. President, to interrogate him to see whether the situation is so serious that he should be called out of order.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. We do not insist upon the Presiding Officer interrogating the witness to ascertain the fact. We are perfectly willing for him to come on.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The House managers have no objection to his appearing at this time?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. None at all.

Mr. LINFORTH. The Sergeant at Arms has just advised me that the witness left without waiting to hear further from us.

EXAMINATION OF THOMAS W. SLAVEN

Mr. Manager BROWNING. We will call Mr. Slaven. Thomas W. Slaven, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. State your name, place of residence, and profession.—A. Thomas W. Slaven, Berkeley, Calif., attorney.

Q. With what firm are you connected?—A. Bronson, Bronson & Slaven.

Q. Were you so connected with them when the Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association matter arose?—A. I was.

Q. What was your first connection with the case?—A. It was about 3 days before the receiver was appointed when Mr. Roy Bronson, who had been handling the matter, told me he was leaving town and asked me to check up at the Industrial Accident Commission and see if an award had been issued out there in the case of Lay against Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association.

Q. Did your firm at that time represent the Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association?—A. We did.

Q. Who represented the petitioner in that case?—A. Mr. Reisner—J. D. Reisner.

Q. Of what firm, if any?—A. I believe it was Reisner & Deming.

Q. At the time the application for receivership was made before Judge Louderback were you in attendance?—A. I was.

Q. In what capacity?—A. Attorney for the defendant company, the Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association.

Q. And Mr. Reisner was representing the plaintiff or the petitioner?—A. He was.

Q. Do you remember on what date the application was made?—A. July 29, 1930.

Q. When you went to the Federal building that day, was that before or after your petition had been filed?—A. I went to the Federal building just before noon. The petition had been filed a few moments before I got there by Mr. Reisner.

Q. What judge's name did you draw in the lottery there?—A. When I arrived I found that Judge St. Sure's name had been drawn but that they found Judge St. Sure was out of town, so on a redraw Judge Louderback's name was drawn.

Q. Then what did you do after the name of Judge Louderback was drawn—you and Mr. Reisner?—A. Our intention was to see the judge at 12 noon when he left the bench. I do not recall the reason why, but either his secretary or one of the clerks told me that we could not see him until 2 o'clock that afternoon and to come back then.

Q. Did you go back at that time?—A. We did.

Q. When the petition was presented, what was suggested, and by whom, if you recall, with regard to who would be the receiver in that case?—A. My first discussion as to who would be the receiver was with Mr. Reisner on that morning when I arrived out at the court.

Q. Did you come to any conclusion on it then?—A. No real conclusion. Mr. Reisner stated—well, he asked me, "Who is to be receiver here?" I said, "I do not know." He said, "Sam Shortridge, Jr., will be appointed." I believe he said it was fixed.

Q. Did you get any information in any other way that Sam Shortridge, Jr., was to be proposed?—A. About 10 or 15 minutes after that conversation with Mr. Reisner, and when we were told to return at 2 o'clock, I was handed a sheet of paper with three names on the paper. The first name was Samuel Shortridge, Jr. The other two names I did not know, and never heard of them, and I do not remember who they were.

Q. Who handed you this paper, as well as you remember?—A. Well, I believe it was the judge's secretary, but I am not entirely sure. It was the judge's secretary or one of the clerks there.

Q. What was the suggestion with regard to the paper? Why were these names given you?—A. That we should propose one of those three names as receiver.

Q. After you got into the judge's chambers to make the application, did anyone propose Mr. Shortridge at that time as receiver?—A. Yes.

Q. Who was that?—A. Mr. Reisner.

Q. Did you have anything to say about it yourself?—A. I said, "That is satisfactory to us."

Q. Then what request was made of you by the judge at that time, if any?—A. He said, "I will want that reduced to writing by both of you."

Q. Was the request reduced to writing?—A. It was.

Q. And signed by both of you?—A. It was.

Q. At that time was anything said about who was to be his counsel in the case?—A. It was not mentioned at all.

Q. Were you asked to recommend any one?—A. We were not.

Q. How long did you stay there, approximately, in the judge's chambers?—A. About 15 minutes.

Q. After you left there, where did you go?—A. I went back to my office.

Q. How long did it take you to get back there?—A. Another 15 minutes.

Q. What was the next thing you heard with regard to this receivership after you got back to your office?—A. We went back to court—at least, I went back to court—again, with the order appointing the receiver prepared, as I recall; and that was signed then by the judge. Then I went back to my office again. In other words, I made two trips there in the afternoon, according to my recollection.

Q. Did you see the judge on the second trip?—A. I believe I did. Yes; I am quite sure I did.

Q. Did anything transpire between you at that time except the signing of the order?—A. Nothing.

Q. What time did you get back to your office after this second visit?—A. Around 3:30.

Q. Then who was the next person you heard from with regard to the receivership?—A. About 10 or 15 minutes after I returned to my office word was sent in to me that a gentleman was outside who said that he was attorney for the receiver of the Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association. I said, "Bring him in."

Q. Who was it?—A. A gentleman was brought in and was introduced to me as Marshall Woodworth.

Q. Had you ever seen him before that you know of?—A. Not that I know of.

Q. What statement did he make to you about it then?—A. He said, "I happened to be out in Judge Louderback's court this afternoon. As I was passing through the court room the bailiff came over to me and said, 'The judge wants to see you at the first recess.' I waited, and at the recess the judge told me that he wanted me to act as attorney for the receiver of the Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association." He said, "I know nothing about the matter at all; so, on hearing that you gentlemen were the attorneys for the company, I thought I had better come around and get acquainted"—words to that effect.

Q. You were not connected with the litigation with regard to the receivership after that time?—A. I was not.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Slaven, do you know who gave you the slip to which you have referred?—A. I do not.

Q. Do you know whether you received it in the clerk's office or from the judge's secretary?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you show the slip to Mr. Reisner?—A. I believe he was right there with me. I have no recollection of showing it to him.

Q. Did you talk with him at all about the slip?—A. I have no recollection of that, either. I think the conversation we had, wherein Mr. Shortridge's name was mentioned, was just before the slip was handed to me.

Q. Yes; but I am trying to confine the examination for the moment to the slip. Do you recall whether you had any talk with Mr. Reisner about the slip?—A. I do not recall.

Q. And do you recall whether Mr. Reisner said anything to you about the slip?—A. I do not.

Q. And you do not recall the other two names that were on the slip?—A. I do not.

Q. What did whoever it was that gave you the slip say when the slip was handed to you?—A. That "one of these three names should be chosen as receiver", or "should be proposed as receiver, and you can see the judge at 2 o'clock this afternoon."

Q. Inasmuch as that person told you that you could see the judge at 2 o'clock that afternoon, does that help to refresh your memory as to whether or not it was the judge's secretary that handed you the slip?—A. It does not.

Q. Do you know whether or not your partner, Mr. Bronson, had any conversation with Mr. Reisner about the receiver before you took charge of the matter?—A. I do not know.

Q. Did you talk with Mr. Reisner as to who should be selected as receiver when you received the slip?—A. I do not know.

Q. Did you talk with him as to who should be the receiver before you got the slip?—A. It is my recollection that our conversation was just before I got the slip.

Q. And it is your recollection that Mr. Reisner suggested the name of Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr.?—A. It is.

Q. And when he suggested Mr. Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr., as receiver, what did you say?—A. Do you mean in the judge's chambers?

Q. I did not know it was in the judge's chambers. I thought it was before you went there.—A. Well, I am simply asking whether you mean in my morning conversation with Mr. Reisner, or in the afternoon when we were in the judge's chambers.

Q. When Mr. Reisner first suggested Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr., as receiver, did you agree to it?—A. I do not remember what I said. I believe I did say he would be all right; he would be satisfactory to me.

Q. That is your best recollection of the conversation when that gentleman was first mentioned? Is that true?—A. I think so. I am not very sure of that, but I think so.

Q. Then subsequently, when you appeared before the judge on the application for the receiver, was there any talk on that subject?—A. Just what do you mean? I do not understand.

Q. Did you or Mr. Reisner or the judge say anything about who should be receiver?—A. Yes.

Q. What was said?—A. The judge said, when we came in, "What is this matter? What is the company? What is it about?" And then, "Have you gentlemen any one to propose as receiver?" Mr. Reisner said, "Mr. Samuel Short-ridge, Jr.", and I said, "Mr. Shortridge will be satisfactory to us."

Q. And that was the extent of the conversation on the subject between you two?—A. There was further conversation with the judge that I recall.

Q. Then what did the judge say, after you announced that Mr. Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr., was agreeable to you?—A. He said, "What is the size of the company? What amount of money is involved? Just what are the problems involved in this receivership?" I told him briefly that it was about $150,000, was an insurance company writing general automobile insurance and workmen's compensation, and then he said, "Well, I see no reason why I should not appoint Mr. Shortridge if both of you gentlemen agree to him."

Q. Did he then suggest that he desired both of you to put your request in writing?—A. He did.

Q. And did both of you, before Judge Louderback signed the order appointing Mr. Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr., receiver, have that signed consent on file?—A. We did.

Q. Did the judge require a bond?—A. The order provided for a bond.

Q. Do you recall the amount?—A. I do not.

Q. Did either one of you make any suggestion about counsel?—A. We did not.

Q. And when you appeared at that time, you advised Judge Louderback that you were representing the defendant as its attorney?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Reisner advised Judge Louderback that he represented the plaintiff?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you advise Judge Louderback that in your opinion a receiver was necessary and advisable?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did not make any request of Judge Louderback to appoint the insurance commissioner of the State of California receiver in that matter, did you?—A. No, sir.

Q. His name was not mentioned by either one of you to Judge Louderback, was it?—A. It was not mentioned.

Mr. LINFORTH. That is all.

Redirect examination by Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Had you known anything about the request that had been made from some sources for the commissioner of insurance to be appointed receiver?—A. I did not.

Q. Had you had anything to do with the case up to the time you appeared there to ask for the receiver to be appointed?—A. I had not. Up to the time Mr. Bronson left town, about 3 days before that, on a Friday, I believe, I had nothing to do with it at all. It was on Monday, the 28th, that at Mr. Bronson's request I phoned out to the Industrial Accident Commission and found that they were ready to issue an award, a judgment of $5,000, on that particular day. It was my understanding from Mr. Bronson that the award was not going through; but he said, "Phone and check up on it Monday, anyway."

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all.

Mr. LINFORTH. We have no further questions.

OFFER OF DOCUMENTS

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, two appeals were taken from Judge Louderback's rulings in this case to the circuit court of appeals. We have a certified copy of the transcript in both cases, which we offer as evidence at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is it the desire of counsel that those shall be made a part of this record?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I think it is essential that they shall be, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They are all available in other ways.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. But we are not permitted to prove by the witnesses what is in these transcripts, and we do not know any other way to get it before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Once they are introduced and marked for identification as exhibits they might be used, although not made part of the permanent record, the Chair thinks. However, if it is the desire of the managers on the part of the House to have them made part of the record, there seems to be no objection to them. The Chair had hoped we might avoid that.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. We request that they be made part of the record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Very well.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, a point of order. That does not mean that that whole book will have to be printed at the Senate's expense, does it?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. We suggest that that matter be withheld until we can determine whether we will ask to have excerpts printed. We do not want to be too voluminous about it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That order will be entered.

(The first documents referred to, consisting of two volumes, was marked "U.S.S. Exhibit 49." The second document was marked "U.S.S. Exhibit 50.")

REEXAMINATION OF DELGER TROWBRIDGE

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Call Mr. Trowbridge back.

Delger Trowbridge, having been heretofore duly sworn, was recalled and testified as follows:

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Mr. Trowbridge, were you present in court when the hearing on the motion to discharge the receiver on the 8th of August was had before Judge Louderback?—A. I was.

Q. I will ask you if you at that time testified on the status of the claim of Helen Lay?—A. I did.

Q. What was the status of it at that time?—A. At that time the claim had been set aside by an order of the commission granting the petition to rehearing upon the defendant, Bos Construction Co.

Q. Was that information given to the court?—A. That information was given to the court on questioning by Mr. Guarena, representing the Insurance Commission of the State of California, and either he or the court asked me for some evidence of that fact, and I produced a certified copy of the order of the commission granting the petition for rehearing made that morning prior to the hearing.

Q. Do you know whether or not the petition for receivership was based on this claim of Helen Lay?—A. It was.

Q. Did you have any further connection with the Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association after that hearing?—A. I had no further direct connection with them.

Q. Did you have any further contact with Judge Louderback touching it?—A. Not after that day.

Q. Who was the attorney for the insurance commissioner in that contest?—A. Mr. Frank Guarena.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I believe you may take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. HANLEY:

Q. Frank L. Guarena was the attorney who ex parte asked for the rehearing on behalf of the insurance carriers, was he not?—A. I cannot tell you without examining the petition for rehearing. It was my offhand recollection that the petition was filed in propria persona, but it may be that Mr. Guarena appeared as attorney for the Bos Construction Co. I have the record here. I will look at it.

Q. Let us have the record and see.—A. It appears to have been filed in propria persona.

Q. While it was put in propria persona, who actually took it up with your Industrial Accident Commission and had the award set aside and a rehearing granted?—A. All I know about it is that the paper was filed in our office in the usual way and we acted upon it. I think I know what you are trying to get me to say, and I will be glad to help you if you will ask the question directly.

Q. Is it not true that Mr. Guarena appeared there and asked you to set aside the award?—A. He did not appear there, but in order to make it clear I will state that I know that he actually prepared the petition that was signed by Mr. Bos.

Q. The petition for the award had been consented to by everyone. That is true, is it not?—A. No; it had not been consented to by the employer, the Bos Construction Co., because they had no notice of the filing of the application or of the hearing itself.

Q. Was any notice given to the Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association at the time the rehearing was granted?—A. Mr. Roy Bronson represented them, and he himself initiated the proceeding by bringing Mrs. Lay out to the commission and consenting to the holding of the hearing on behalf of the Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association.

Q. I mean the setting aside.—A. No. The Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association had notice of the filing of the petition. What did you ask me?

Q. I say, did they have any notice that the matter was coming on for a rehearing?—A. They were served with a copy of the petition for rehearing.

Q. Are you sure of that?—A. I am sure of that.

Q. Have you any papers here that show that?—A. No; I have no papers here that show that, but I know that in the files of the commission, which I examined myself at the time, there was a notation that all parties had been served with notice of the petition for rehearing.

Q. I will call your attention to the record, if the counsel will give me the record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (to the witness). When you say the petition was signed in propria persona, do you mean by the insurance commissioner, or by the attorney you have named?

The WITNESS. I should have used the English language. The petition was signed by the president of the Bos Construction Co. in person, without any attorney representing him. In other words, the defendant Bos Construction Co. signed the petition itself, without any attorney's name appearing on the petition.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is this inquiry material? It seems to me it is all aside from the main question here, and is taking undue time. We ought to shorten it if it is possible. I do not want to rush counsel.

By Mr. HANLEY:

Q. The point I am coming to is that neither the plaintiff, Helen Lay, nor the Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association, the defendant and plaintiff in the receivership case, asked for the rehearing that was granted by the Industrial Accident Commission. That is true, is it not?—A. That is true.

Q. And that the award of the $5,000 which had been made was set aside without their consent or their knowledge?—A. It was set aside without their consent. They knew of the filing of the petition for rehearing, because a copy of the petition was served on them.

Q. And Mr. Guereña, who was then attorney for the State insurance commission, is the party who prepared the papers for the petition for rehearing?—A. That is my information.

Mr. HANLEY. That is all.

Redirect examination by Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. In whose name was this petition filed to rehear this claim?—A. In the name of the Bos Construction Co.

Q. What was the ground on which they objected to the original award?—A. The ground, I think—

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment. I submit that if he is going into a matter of record, the record would speak for itself on that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It seems to me the record is the best evidence. But why go into it? There is no good purpose to be served by it, it seems to me. Perhaps counsel is leading up to some other point which he wishes to make.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. The point is this: Insistence is being made by counsel for the respondent that the rehearing was without notice to other parties, and without excuse, and we wanted to show why this rehearing was granted, and why the claim was disallowed on the second hearing.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This witness has testified clearly that there was notice.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Then we want to show why the petition was denied on the second hearing when it had been allowed on the first.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. You mean by the respondent?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. No; by the commissioner himself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. How would that bind the respondent?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, the proof is that in the respondent's court, on a hearing, this witness testified that the claim on which the petition for receivership had been based originally had been reheard and had been disallowed, and respondent certainly had notice of that fact at the time he continued the receivership on a baseless claim, and we insist that this witness should be permitted to show why, on the reconsideration of the claim, he denied it, on whose application, and on what ground.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, may I add just a word? I do not so understand the testimony of the witness, namely, that the claim had been disallowed. I understood the witness to say a rehearing had been granted.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. We do not want any doubt about that. I desire to ask the witness if at that time the claim had been disallowed or if the petition for rehearing only had been filed?

The WITNESS. Only a petition for rehearing had been filed, and our action on the petition was to grant the petition for rehearing and set aside the award.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. And at that time the award on the claim had been set aside?—A. It had been set aside.

Q. And respondent was notified of that at the trial?—A. Respondent was notified of that at the trial.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all.

Mr. HANLEY. I think that is all, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness is excused.

(The witness retired from the stand.)

RECESS

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, before making a motion for a recess for 40 minutes, I should like to have the attention of the managers on the part of the House and the attorneys for the respondent and ask them if they are prepared that a recess shall be taken for 40 minutes?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the attorneys for the managers on the part of the House and for the respondent give their attention?

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I am about to make a motion for a recess for 40 minutes.

I move that the Senate, sitting as a Court of Impeachment, take a recess for 40 minutes.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 1 o'clock p.m.) the Senate, sitting as a Court of Impeachment, took a recess for 40 minutes. On the expiration of the recess the Senate, sitting as a court, reassembled.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Coolidge	Kean	Reed
Ashurst	Costigan	Kendrick	Robinson, Ark.
Austin	Couzens	Keyes	Robinson, Ind.
Bachman	Cutting	King	Schall
Bailey	Dickinson	La Follette	Sheppard
Bankhead	Dill	Lewis	Shipstead
Barbour	Duffy	Logan	Smith
Barkley	Erickson	Long	Steiwer
Black	Fess	McAdoo	Stephens
Bone	Fletcher	McCarran	Thomas, Okla.
Bratton	Frazier	McGill	Thomas, Utah
Brown	George	McKellar	Townsend
Bulkley	Glass	McNary	Trammell
Bulow	Goldsborough	Metcalf	Tydings
Byrd	Gore	Murphy	Vandenberg
Byrnes	Hale	Neely	Van Nuys
Capper	Harrison	Norris	Wagner
Caraway	Hastings	Nye	Walcott
Carey	Hatfield	Patterson	Walsh
Clark	Hayden	Pittman	Wheeler
Connally	Hebert	Pope	White

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-four Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

The managers on the part of the House will proceed.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. Mr. President, since the session of this morning, one of the witnesses on the part of the House, Mr. Randolph Whiting, has been taken ill and has been obliged to retire to his hotel. One of the witnesses, Mr. Dittmore, has had an operation performed and is in the hospital. One witness, Mr. Guereña, is on his way to Washington and will arrive sometime late this afternoon. If it can be understood and agreed that we may put these witnesses on in chief when we can avail ourselves of them, the managers will now rest the case on the part of the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. May it not be agreed as to what they would testify? I assume counsel for the respondent probably knows what the testimony of the witnesses is to be.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, we will enter into some stipulation to that effect, because when the evidence is closed we may desire to make some motion before we proceed, and we should like to have the evidence closed before we do that. If the honorable managers will state what they expect to prove by these witnesses, we may stipulate. If we could have a conference on the subject, it might expedite matters and be more agreeable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Perhaps it might be advantageous if counsel could confer on that for a moment and see if they could agree.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I move that the Senate take a recess for 15 minutes to permit counsel to confer.

The motion was agreed to; and at (1 o'clock and 50 minutes p.m.) the Senate, sitting as a Court of Impeachment, took a recess. On the expiration of the recess, the Senate, sitting as a court, reassembled.

STIPULATION—TESTIMONY OF FRANK L. GUERENA AND HAROLD A. DITTMORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are the managers on the part of the House ready to proceed?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We are ready to proceed.

Mr. President, we have endeavored to reach a stipulation with the attorneys for the respondent, and I believe we have reached a stipulation, so far as the testimony of Mr. Guereña is concerned, that the testimony given in the hearings on September 12, 1932, and printed in the record of the hearings of the special committee of the House of Representatives, be read in lieu of his testimony being taken here; and that a stipulation be entered into with reference to the testimony of Mr. Dittmore, the witness, who is lying in the hospital.

Mr. LINFORTH. We have consented, Mr. President, that the testimony of Mr. Guereña may be read. We have also agreed to stipulate that if Mr. Dittmore was here he would testify that before and since the year 1925, almost nightly, he would see the respondent in the lobby of the Fairmont Hotel, where the aunt of the respondent was living, in conversation with Mr. W. S. Leake; at the time they were sitting alone and when no others were near them; and that during the years that Mr. Leake has been residing at the Fairmont Hotel, he kept no bank account but used the hotel as the means of his bank account. Is that correct?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. I should like to know whether that stipulation states that the respondent and Mr. Leake were in conversation together.

Mr. LINFORTH. The stipulation was that they were in conversation together when no one else was near them.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. That is correct.

Mr. LINFORTH. I want the stipulation, Mr. President, thoroughly understood. We do not stipulate to those facts and we do not admit those facts, but inasmuch as the witness, Mr. Dittmore, is confined in the hospital and cannot be here, we are willing, upon the assurance and the statement of the learned managers, to stipulate that if he was here he would so testify.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is that satisfactory to the managers on the part of the House?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. That is satisfactory to the managers.

Mr. President, pursuant to the stipulation, the managers on the part of the House will now proceed to read, if it be agreeable to the Senate, the testimony of Mr. Frank L. Guereña.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. May the Chair interrupt to ask, could the manager not have that go into the record without reading or does he wish to read it?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. In view of the motion which we expect that counsel for respondent is about to make, it perhaps ought to be read. I do not know whether it would be possible for this body to decide the motion without having first heard this testimony.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will inquire if it is lengthy?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. It is about a dozen printed pages.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Perhaps counsel had better read it for the information of the Senate.

Mr. Manager Perkins proceeded to read from the testimony of Frank L. Guereña before the special committee of the House of Representatives, and read as follows:

Frank L. Guereña, being duly sworn by the chairman, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. BROWNING:

Q. You are Frank L. Guereña?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a practicing attorney in the city and county of San Francisco?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the equity receivership case in the Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association matter?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what capacity were you connected with that?—A. I represented E. F. Mitchell, insurance commissioner of California, who was ordered by the United States District Court to show cause in the equity proceeding.

Q. I will ask you to give the history of that case, then, from that point.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. Shall I read the colloquy between counsel that follows or merely the testimony?

Mr. HANLEY. If it explains the testimony, it may be read.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. Very well. [Continuing the reading:]

Mr. HANLEY. Isn't that a matter of record? This is just repetition. It is a record proposition.

Mr. SUMNERS—

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, may I suggest that, in the interest of saving time, the colloquy between the counsel be omitted and that merely the testimony be read?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If that is agreeable to both sides, the Chair does not think there will be any objection to that course being followed.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. That is agreeable to the managers, and I will read the testimony as suggested. [Continuing the reading:]

Mr. BROWNING. You may proceed, Mr. Guereña.

The WITNESS. My first knowledge of any difficulty with the association was in the latter part of July 1930, when I was advised of the situation by Mrs. Long, deputy insurance commissioner of California.

I asked her if the insurance company at that time was in receivership in Texas, the home State. She said it was not. I asked whether the authorities in Texas had sequestered any of the assets of the association at that time. She said it had not. I gave her directions to immediately send an examiner, equipped with proper credentials, into the San Francisco office of the association, to assume possession, under that authority, of all property and all assets of every kind, and also instructed that the examiner be equipped with a demand to be served upon Mr. Brockman, who was the Pacific coast manager of the association, for delivery to the examiner of all notes or other assets of that character capable of manual delivery.

I also instructed that the examiner remain in possession of the office.

When advised by the deputy commissioner that there was money in the bank, in the Crocker-First National Bank, I advised that an order be served upon the bank demanding that that money be held intact and not permitted to be withdrawn. I personally dictated the demands that I felt were necessary for that purpose, including the notice to the bank. Those are all incorporated in the record, and all preceded the filing of this bill of complaint in the equity proceeding.

As I recall, my next discussion concerning the matter was with Mr. Roy Bronson, of the local law firm of Bronson, Bronson & Slaven. Mr. Bronson came to my office, 11 Sutter Street. We had some discussion and some argument in a friendly way concerning the appointment of a receiver, the substance of the conversation being that Mr. Bronson expressed his apprehension that the Texas authorities would move in and take the assets or a considerable portion of them out of California. Bronson also expressed his opinion that under the California law that was in effect the commissioner of insurance of California could not act until there was an appointment of a receiver in the home State, or until there were assets of the company seized by the authorities in the home State. We discussed and argued that matter, and I expressed at that time to Mr. Bronson my views, with which he did not agree; also that the commissioner under the circumstances had power to go in and do the things that I just related that I instructed the deputy commissioner should be done, putting an examiner in charge and seizing the assets.

There was also some discussion concerning the appointment of Mr. Mitchell, the insurance commissioner, as receiver on the Federal side. My recollection is, at that time, I expressed to Mr. Bronson my views, that a State officer would not be able to serve under a Federal appointment, that he could serve only under the State law under appointment by a State court.

That is the substance of that discussion.

By Mr. SUMNERS:

Q. Do you mean that as commissioner he could only serve to do these particular things for the State; and if he became receiver in a Federal action he would act as receiver, as any other human being, and not as an officer of the State commission?—A. Yes; he would in any event. He would be acting in any event, but not in an official capacity, my view being he could not act in an official capacity on the Federal side. I know that an examiner of the department, Mr. King, was equipped with the demands and credentials that I have related, and went to the place of the association in San Francisco. I also know personally that the demand for the moneys be not withdrawn was served upon the Crocker-First National Bank of San Francisco. All of this preceding the filing of the petition in this equity matter.

The petition was filed on the 29th of July 1930, but I did not know that personally until, I think, a day or two later. In any event, before the filing of the petition, Mrs. Long, of the department, at my suggestion had kept the wires pretty hot between here and Texas trying to stimulate some activity there, so we could move ahead promptly and act in the State court, assuming that the commissioner would be appointed on the State's side here. However, Texas did not move until the 1st of August 1930. At that time a receiver was appointed in Texas, and the next day I prepared and filed for the commissioner a proceeding in the Superior Court of San Francisco asking for the liquidation of the association, and asking that the commissioner be appointed liquidator under the terms of the State liquidation act, and also asking that Mr. Brockman, Pacific coast manager, be ordered into court a few days later—I don't recall the date at this moment, but I think it was the 2d of August—to show cause why he and the association should not be restrained from doing any more business, and also the temporary order was issued on August 2, the day of the filing, which was served the same day upon Mr. Brockman, directing the cessation of business and the withholding of all assets.

Q. Prior to the issuance of the notice to the California agent to show cause why the business should not be suspended, had business, as a matter of fact, been suspended?—A. Yes, Mr. Chairman; on the 23d of July 1930 the license had been taken away in Texas by the Texas authorities, and on the 24th of July of the same year the license was taken away here by the commissioner of insurance.

By Mr. BROWNING:

Q. May I ask right there—as a matter of fact, without giving the details of the statute, do you have a provision in your State statute by which you can take charge in a preliminary way before receivership is actually applied for under your State law?—A. Under the State laws that then existed, Mr. Browning, the language was that if it appeared to the commissioner that there was danger of irreparable injury to the creditors and others dealing with the association or affected by its transactions, and if it appeared to the commissioner that there had been a misappropriation or sequestration of any assets of the association, he then could summarily go into possession and seize the assets and call upon the peace officers, if desired and if necessary, to take summary possession.

Having that in mind, the demand of which was served upon the manager specifically directing the delivery to the commissioner of a negotiable note, which we were advised was in his possession, and that note was not turned over when the demand was served, and I regarded that as a sufficient indication of sequestration to justify exercise of summary power, and so the summary power was exercised in the way indicated.

At this point Mr. Manager BROWNING continued the reading of the testimony of Mr. Guereña, as follows:

Q. And that was before the application for receivership in either the State or Federal court was applied for?—A. That was during the period from July 25 to July 28, to and including those dates. I just recall that I am a little bit inaccurate on some of these dates. The Texas receivership was appointed on July 31. The petition was filed by the commissioner in the State court on August 1, and on August 2 the commissioner was served with a restraining order issued by Judge Louderback on the Federal side, directing him to show cause before Judge Louderback on the following Monday.

By Mr. SUMNERS:

Q. Will you be good enough to check up on these dates and find out when any definite action was taken?—A. I have not chronologically stated—

Mr. SUMNERS (interrupting). I think it would be rather good to have an exact statement, a chronological statement.

The WITNESS. If you will hand me the opening brief on the first appeal, I can give that to you.

(Document handed to the witness.)

Q. Give those to us if you can.—A. On July 23, 1930, Texas revoked specific authority of this association, that is, its right to do insurance business on that date. On the following day the insurance commissioners of California did the same thing here. On the same day, the 24th of July, the commissioner of insurance directed the manager here not to transact any other business. On the next day, July 25, Mr. King, the examiner for the insurance department, was equipped in the way I have stated with authority and went to the association offices in San Francisco and entered into possession of all that was there.

On the 25th of July the manager, Mr. Brockman, was served with a written demand to file a statement of all moneys and negotiables in his possession or under his control, and to advise the commissioner where such moneys and negotiables were located, and to hold all the moneys and negotiables intact and make no expenditures of funds. On the 26th of July the notice I have referred to was served on the Crocker-First National Bank of San Francisco to freeze the Lumbermen's account. On July 26, 1930, Mr. Brockman advised the commissioner that he had a 10-year negotiable note for $18,063.78 to the association made by Feather River pine mill. He said that note was deposited in the safe-deposit box—

Mr. SUMNERS (interrupting). Don't go into details.

The WITNESS. All right. On July 28 the Crocker-First National Bank acknowledged the demand letter regarding the account. On July 28 the commissioner served upon Brockman a demand to surrender the note that I have referred to. On July 31 the receiver was appointed in Texas. On August 1 the State proceedings were instituted by the commissioner.

Q. What do you call State proceedings? Were you required to go into a State court?—A. It was instituted through the filing of a petition by the commissioner in the superior court.

By Mr. BROWNING:

Q. The law requires you to take that course?—A. Yes. In order that the commissioner be appointed liquidator, the first step was the filing of a petition—

Q. I understand.—A. (Continuing.) And the issuance of an order to show cause. That was issued on the day of the filing of the petition, August 1. That was directed against the manager. He was ordered to come into court on August 17 to show cause why the commissioner should not be appointed liquidator. On August 1 that temporary restraining order was served upon the manager by the commissioner. On August 7 the association—that is, Mr. Brockman representing it, the manager—appeared in the superior court and an agreement was made for a continuance. As a matter of fact, that matter was held in abeyance under an agreement because of the pendency of the matter on the Federal side. We waited until that was disposed of.

By Mr. SUMNERS:

Q. When was the petition filed in the Federal court in that connection?—A. The petition was filed in the Federal court in that connection on July 29.

Mr. SUMNERS. I think that is sufficient on the dates. It will help us to understand the situation.

A. Well, on the same day that the manager was served with an order to show cause, issued in the State proceedings, the commissioner was served with an order to show cause issued by the Federal court in equity proceedings directing the commissioner to show cause on the 4th of August. The commissioner was actually served, because the papers came immediately to me on Saturday morning, and the return date was the following Monday, and on the following Monday, not having been able to prepare the answer and return a showing over Sunday, I appeared before Judge Louderback and requested and obtained a continuance until August 8.

Mr. SUMNERS. You have complied with my request. Thank you.

Mr. BROWNING. We just want to get a full story of the case, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. SUMNERS. You are through with me. Go ahead with your story.

The WITNESS (continuing). On August 8 the commissioner appeared on the Federal side and made a double showing, consisting of a number of affidavits, reciting the things I have already enumerated, and also a petition to revoke the appointment of Mr. Shortridge as receiver, alleging various grounds, based upon the claim that the commissioner of the State had first acted; that the matter was dedicated and reserved to the jurisdiction of the State, and under the circumstances the Federal receiver should not have been appointed.

That matter—the petition rather—was heard on the 8th. Testimony was taken and the matter was argued. It was thereafter briefed, and about the last of September the Federal court made its order denying the petition to vacate the appointment of the Federal receiver and issued a permanent injunction against the commissioner. If you are interested in the treatment of that, I can tell you the substance.

Mr. SUMNERS. No.

Mr. BROWNING. It is in the record.

Q. Mr. Guereña, what proof was offered, if any, in affidavit form by you to apprise the Federal court of the position and contention of the State commissioner?

Mr. SUMNERS. Is that of record, Mr. Browning?

Mr. BROWNING. Yes, it is; but I would like to get it in this record.

Mr. SUMNERS. You can get the record of the witness' testimony.

Mr. BROWNING. Yes. I would like to insert it in our report. It is in the Federal court record of the hearing.

Mr. SUMNERS. What is the point of that?

Mr. BROWNING. The proof which the commissioner offered to apprise the court of his intention.

Mr. SUMNERS. It may go in.

Mr. HANLEY. Whatever proof is offered, let the whole proof go in, if they are going to put part of it in. Don't take an involved matter and not put the whole thing in.

Mr. SUMNERS. I have already ruled, gentlemen.

The WITNESS. There was proof by both sides.

Mr. SUMNERS. Incorporate at this point the record in that matter.

The WITNESS. It is all set out, Mr. Chairman, in the transcript on the first appeal.

(Government document in no. 6340 entitled "United States Circuit Court of Appeals, DeForest Mitchell as Insurance Commissioner of the State of California, appellant, v. Helen Lay and Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association and Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr.", as fact that the citation on appeal had not been served within the 30-day period indicated in the citation.)

By Mr. BROWNING:

Q. Just what is that citation, Mr. Guereña?—A. That citation is substantially—it increases the time of the appeal and it directs the preparation of the record on the appeal within the 30-day period, and the practice is to serve that citation, through the marshal, during that 30 days, on the opposing counsel.

By Mr. SUMNERS:

Q. What is the explanation as to why that was not done?—A. Well, it was primarily an oversight which occurred in my office, Mr. Chairman, and I was heartened, however, by the fact that the understanding was that the purpose of the citation was merely directory, and was to apprise the other side of the pendency of the appeal or the intention to take an appeal, and I thought I was sure they had ample notice because we had constantly negotiated during the 30-day period, and during that period the statement of the evidence, or bill of exceptions, was in course of preparation and had been discussed by the attorneys for the Federal receiver and by me.

On the 4th of December, when I was so advised by Judge Loderback's secretary, I had made the request of his secretary that I be given the engrossed statement of the evidence, which had been prepared for the purpose of appeal. That had been left theretofore with Judge Loderback's secretary, and when left had been signed by counsel on each side, by Mr. Woodworth for the Federal receiver and by me for the commissioner. In other words, at that point we had agreed on the sufficiency and the accuracy of that statement.

Miss Berger, on the 4th of December, left the anteroom and went in through the door leading into the judge's chambers and came back after a few moments and told me—brought the document with her, and I saw that it had the signature of Judge Loderback on it. I also saw some notations on the side of the signature; that is, I saw there were some notations, and I tried to see them and did not succeed, and my seeing them was not aided at all. On the contrary, the secretary was careful, apparently careful, to see that I did not see those notations, but I did see the signature, and she took her scissors and cut off the lower portion of the last page of the engrossed statement and destroyed or retained, at any rate, that part which contained the signature of the judge and the notations, the nature of which I do not know. Then the secretary returned to me the engrossed bill. Of course, the engrossed bill, which is on file, will show that clipped page.

At this point Mr. Manager LEWIS continued the reading of the testimony of Mr. Guereña, as follows:

Q. Let me see that engrossed bill.

The WITNESS (continuing). I stated at that time to the judge's secretary that I did not think our rights had been lost to go on with the appeal by reason of the fact that the other side was fully notified by reason of the fact that the statement of the evidence had been stipulated to—we had gotten that far along—but she said she was positive the judge would not sign it. I then asked her to give back to me the blank form of order which had theretofore been left with Miss Berger, my purpose being to use that form of order and go to the circuit judge or to one of the circuit judges and ask one of those judges to sign the order, which, after he was so advised, he had the power under the rules of procedure to do, and I made that request because, as a matter of convenience, that saved going back to my office, and I thought I could have it retyped in the building here.

Q. When was the expiration of your 30 days?—A. It is the last day, on the 30th of November.

Q. This document I have here was dated November 18, 1930. There appears the signature of the attorney for the insurance commissioner, the attorney for the receiver, the attorney for the plaintiff, and the attorney for the defendant. Were any other lawyers connected with that?—A. Yes; there were other lawyers connected with it, Mr. Chairman. At that time there was the firm of Reisner & Deming, representing Helen Lay, the plaintiff, who were active in the case; the firm of Bronson, Bronson & Slaven, representing the defendant association, who were active in the case.

Q. Well, for the purpose of protecting your appeal, was this document filed prior to the preparation of the appeal?—A. Yes.

Q. For the purpose of protecting your appeal, was the agreement or signature of any other attorneys then necessary?—A. I assumed that the only signatures necessary were those of Mr. Woodworth for the Federal receiver and me for the insurance commissioner, the controversy being between the two parties; that is my recollection. I don't recall just how that page was made up. We could check up on that.

Q. These 30 days had to do with reference to the giving of the formal notice to the defendants here whose signatures appear here?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are sure about that?—A. Now, just a minute and I will be sure. I will refer to the citation. The citation is on page 140 of the transcript, on the first appeal, Mr. Chairman. It is directed to Helen Lay, the plaintiff, to her attorney, to the association and its attorneys—Mr. Bronson and his firm—to Mr. Shortridge, the receiver, and to his attorneys, directing them to appear within 30 days from the date of the citation, which was the 30th of October, and show cause why the writ issued by the judge should not be vacated and reversed, and why the order denying the petition to vacate the appointment of receiver should not be reversed and the petition granted.

Q. On July 18, under the signature of the attorneys there appears, "There was an order approving and settling filing of exceptions." In this particular situation, if approved, would it be approved by the judge and the judge's signature would have followed?—A. It would be approved, and the practice is to have the approval follow the signature of the counsel.

Q. Do you understand my question?—A. I thought I did.

Q. I ask you this way: Supposing the signature of the attorney, or the words "Order approving and settling bill of exceptions"—those words preceded the signature of the judge?—A. Yes; that is the way I prepared the order, Mr. Chairman, and that is the way it was presented to the court.

By Mr. BROWNING:

Q. Now, Mr. Guereña, you were speaking of just a copy of a citation which you asked the judge—A. (Interrupting.) A copy of the order, the blank order, had been left there, which, if signed, would have been an order extending the time for docketing the case, which would have constituted the statement of the evidence on bill of exceptions.

By Mr. SUMNERS:

Q. You left that with the secretary of the judge how long before the expiration of the 30 days?—A. I don't recall, Mr. Chairman. I am sure it was several days; I am sure it was soon after the date shown there was signature.

Q. Is there any memorandum or any record in this proceeding that would fix that date definitely?—A. I am not sure about that, but I will make investigation and advise the chairman if I can find any memorandum that would help fix that date. My best recollection is that it was very soon after the date which the statement bears following the signature underneath.

Q. In order that the record may clearly show, there is appended the sheet that has been clipped, but there is appended to it, however, an order approving and settling bill of exceptions, which is dated December 12, 1930. What is the effect of that order? The reason I am asking this question is, in order to save, if this record has to be examined by anybody else, the necessity of having to dig through the whole thing to arrive at our conclusions. I wish you would examine that document, please. Now, Mr. BROWNING, I am not interfering with you examination?

Mr. BROWNING. Not at all.

Mr. SUMNERS. I would like to fix this date.

Mr. BROWNING. That is all right, sir.

The WITNESS. Yes, sir; I have examined it.

By Mr. SUMNERS:

Q. What is the difference between the effect of the approval as of date of December 12 and the approval if it had occurred under date of November 13?—A. It would make no difference in effect between the date when the signature was clipped off in the way I have described, and the date of December 12, shown on that attached rider, but then there is an application for additional time made to the circuit court, and that—

Q. (Interrupting.) Then let's get this clear. If there is no difference between them, what is the point of contention?—A. You told me to tell the story, sir.

Mr. BROWNING. Mr. Chairman, I could state that, but I believe the Chair will understand the pertinency of it when he has finished his recital.

The WITNESS. The reason I asked for the formal order again was I would have the convenience of it in getting an order from a circuit judge. It was refused me by the secretary, and I asked to see the judge, and she said the judge was not available. That was about 2:30 on the afternoon of December 4. Immediately thereafter I consulted Mr. O'Brien, the clerk of the circuit court, and after consulting him, I hurried to my office, which was Sutter and Montgomery, a mile, more or less, from here, to prepare an order and bring it back here to submit to one of the circuit judges. I got back here with the prepared order around 3:30 that afternoon and asked to see Judge Rudkin, and told his secretary, a young man, I had the order, and he said that Mr. Woodworth, who is attorney for Mr. Shortridge, had already been there a little bit before, and that he had left word to be advised of any application that I might make for an extension of time. I was ushered in to Judge Rudkin's chambers and explained the situation, and he did not at that time give me the order extending the time, but said he would have the matter heard before that court 2 days later, the 6th—Saturday morning—of September, and the order for that purpose was made and served, and on the 6th, a representative of mine appeared there and the matter was discussed and the order was made extending the time for the docketing of the cause to December 22, 1930.

The next thing to do was to get that statement of the evidence signed, and the 6th was a Saturday. On the 8th my office endeavored to find out whether this statement of the evidence had been approved by Judge Louderback, and throughout that week, the 8th, 9th, 10th, and 11th, we endeavored to see Judge Louderback personally about the matter, to ask for his approval and to get the statement so we might turn it over to the clerk, which, with the other papers, would have made the appeal to be docketed by the 22d.

After having had the one experience but a short time before, I did not want to have it again, and we pressed pretty hard all that week of the 8th on that, and we were repeatedly promised that it would be signed, and the reason I can say that with some definiteness is that I was so concerned about the delay then, and afraid of another slip-up on it, that I prepared a petition for a writ of mandate, which I expected to have the circuit court issue directing Judge Louderback to approve the statement of the evidence. The petition that I have here in my hand, the original is dated in blank, but I did not need to use it. It was never filed, because on the 12th of December Judge Louderback approved the statement of the evidence, and the matter went forward.

By Mr. BROWNING:

Q. That was the matter that went to the circuit court on that appeal?—A. That was the first appeal, that was decided on the 24th of February 1931.

Q. It was reversed and remanded?—A. It was reversed and remanded.

Q. In reading the order of the court, after the remand by the circuit court, I find that there was a provision inserted in that order to the effect that the receiver for the Federal court would turn over to the commissioner, as State receiver, the assets of the estate within 30 days provided no appeal was taken by the commissioner from the fees allowed?—A. That is in the order of December 15, 1931.

Q. Was that order carried out?—A. No; I don't know what you mean by "carried out." That provision in the order I saw when the formal decree was shown me by Mr. Woodworth, Mr. Shortridge's attorney. I told him at that time that that was in defiance of the circuit court order, because things had happened which the circuit court said should happen before the delivery. The circuit court decided that when the commissioner was appointed on the State side, and when Judge Louderback had settled the amount of the receiver, that the assets should be turned over to the commissioner. Those things happened. The delivery had not been made. Even after the 15th of December 1931, when the accounts of the Federal receiver were settled, theretofore the commissioner had been appointed on the State side and was ready and anxious to get the assets together afterward. But nevertheless that provision remained in the order that was appealed from on the second appeal. I objected to it for the reason I stated, and because it was necessary for someone to take charge of those assets and start handling them in the proper way.

Shortly after the 15th of December the second appeal was taken from that order. I assure you that was well within the 30 days, and there were many extensions for the docketing of the cause, because the record was long, and it was in January that the assets were turned over, but notwithstanding the provision in the order—

Mr. SUMNERS (interrupting). What time in January?

A. I will give you that, sir, in just a moment. [Examining record.] It was January 12 or 14, I think; some on the 12th and some on the 14th of January.

Mr. SUMNERS. Mr. BROWNING, have you got the court record there showing clearly the date when these assets were turned over?

Mr. BROWNING. Yes; it is in the transcript.

The WITNESS. I will give it to you.

Mr. BROWNING. As I recall, it was turned over on stipulation.

The WITNESS. After the order was made of December 15, settling the Federal receiver's account, the order of Judge Louderback, the appeal steps were taken, and one of them was the assignment of error, and one of the assignments of error, which was specific and included in a group assignment, was the presence of that provision you mention, the 30-day provision in the order; and after that assignment, including that specification, had been filed, the delivery was offered to us in the form of a stipulation, and I have the form of the stipulation that was prepared by counsel for Mr. Shortridge. It does not bear any date.

Mr. BROWNING. Can you get the date from the transcript that you have there?

A. Yes; I have it. It was served on me on the 9th of January, Mr. Chairman—the first and the last page. [Document shown to Mr. BROWNING.] The insert is my change, and I told Mr. Woodworth when he called at my office with that proposed stipulation for the turning over of the assets, that in view of the pendency of the appeal, where one of the alleged errors specified was the presence of that 30-day provision in the order, that I was not going to sign the stipulation in that form, and I said I wanted a clause that the signing of the stipulation would be without prejudice to the rights of either party on the second appeal, and I redictated the second page of the proposed stipulation and included that feature, and as so modified, the stipulation was signed and filed and the delivery made. That is my page in there. [Document examined by the chairman.] Here is a copy, Mr.

Chairman, of the order as modified and as signed. [Examined by the chairman.] The original, of course, is on file. The original is on page 722 of volume 2 of the second appeal transcript.

Mr. BROWNING. I think that is all.

Cross-examination by Mr. HANLEY:

Q. There was one matter I wanted to go into so that the record will show it; that is, the activities of this attorney with reference to the setting aside of the award of Mr. Delger Trowbridge, but that is in the testimony, as I understand it.—A. You mean the source of that, the history of that?

Q. Your activities in appearing for the insured and setting aside the award, your solicitation—that is all in the record, isn't it?—A. I would answer "Yes" to the question in that form. There is, in the first record, and I can point it out to you if you are really interested in it. In the first appeal, during the hearing on August 8 that I referred to, Mr. Roy Bronson asked me the question, "Who prepared or who drew?"—I can't give the exact language—"the petition for rehearing which had been filed by the employer of the deceased husband of Helen Lay, who was the complainant in this equity proceeding?" and I answered, "I did", which is a fact.

Q. Then the evidence along that line, the testimony adduced by Mr. Bronson at that time in the hearing, is part and parcel of the record, isn't it?—and we stipulate it all go in.—A. The question that was asked me and my answer are all in the record; but I cannot give the page, Mr. Hanley.

Mr. HANLEY. That is all I want.

Mr. SUMNERS. You don't mind giving the page reference to the stenographer for the convenience of the committee?

Mr. HANLEY. Oh, no.

Mr. SUMNERS. You have no questions to ask?

Mr. HANLEY. No. All right.

(This page reference will be found in exhibit no. 20-E of this record, which is a complete copy of the printed transcript of record above referred to, secured from Mr. Guereña's files by the reporter, there being no extra copies on file in the Federal court at this time.)

Mr. SUMNERS. Call your next witness.

(Mr. Reisner was then called, but did not respond.)

Mr. SUMNERS. It is 10 minutes to 12, gentlemen. How late do you want to run?

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Run to 12 o'clock.

Mr. SUMNERS. If you have any witness, put him on.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Mr. Gilbert.

Mr. BROWNING. There is one question I want to ask Mr. Guereña that I really overlooked.

Q. Mr. Guereña, when you made the objection to the allowance of expenses for the receiver in this case, I will ask you what, if anything, the court said to you in response and what the circumstances were leading up to it.—A. Well, I don't know just exactly what you refer to. There were 20 pages of exceptions filed to the fourth and final account which ran also to the three preceding accounts, and there was considerable of a hearing, taking of testimony on the account. All of that testimony is in the transcript on the second appeal, but the argument concerning those objections and that account is not in the record. I think there was a reporter present, and the only discussion between the court and myself—that is, Judge Louderback and myself—concerning my argument was with reference to my insistence that there was unreasonableness exhibited in the extent and the character of charges made by the receiver's counsel for his meals—

Q. (interrupting). What were some of those?—A. (continuing). And for his traveling expense.

Q. What were some of those expenses?—A. Without going into detail, I will say just generally that the testimony—

Mr. SUMNERS (interrupting). Pardon me just a minute. You may identify sufficiently the nature of statements about that, but don't go into any details about this beyond sufficiently to relate what statements are in the transcript.

A. The record, Mr. Chairman, shows the allowances which were made, or for the expenditures which were allowed, for food and means to the receiver and to his counsel, to which objection was made by the commissioner. For instance, on October 6 the expense for meals ran $10 to $12, and I was urging the unreasonableness of that allowance and was told by the court that my insistence on that objection was petty. That is the extent of the exchange. I didn't agree, but I didn't get any chance to say so.

Mr. SUMNERS. Anything further?

Mr. BROWNING. That is all.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, I offer at this time the order of the court in this Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association case, filed December 16, 1931, containing the proviso which has just been read out of the testimony.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be made a part of the record.

(See U.S.S Exhibit 51.)

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, we want to offer an original letter, which was included in the testimony taken in San Francisco last September, from Mr. John Douglas Short to Mr. Hathaway, his father-in-law. We offer it for the record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be made a part of the record.

(See U.S.S. Exhibit 52.)

Mr. HANLEY. What is the date of it?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. The date of it is March 27, 1931, showing that he is enclosing a check for $5,000.

Mr. LINFORTH. And the reasons for enclosing the check.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Yes; setting out an involved family transaction, stating what he owes Mr. Hathaway, and that he is enclosing a check for $5,000.

EXAMINATION OF RANDOLPH V. WHITING

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Call Mr. Randolph Whiting. Randolph V. Whiting, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

By Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. Mr. Whiting, will you state to the court your name, business, and residence?—A. Randolph V. Whiting; an attorney; I reside in San Francisco, Calif.

Q. Have you recently been president of the Bar Association of San Francisco?—A. I was until last January, about the middle.

Q. Do you recall the correspondence between yourself as president of the bar association and the President of the United States, and later with the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives?—A. I do.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, I think it is fair to the entire situation to state at this point that Mr. Whiting was president of the Bar Association of San Francisco at the time the correspondence took place which initiated this investigation. He is tendered to the court in order that it may have all the information it may desire with reference to that point. We do not care to press the interrogation beyond the point of the pleasure of the President, in the first instance, and the court itself, of course.

By Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. Will you state why it was that the letter was written—it is already in evidence here—to the Committee on the Judiciary with reference to the proposed investigation?

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, we object to that question as being utterly immaterial to any issue here. The investigation was started and made. The reason for it cannot be material upon this inquiry. If there was correspondence between members of the Bar Association and the witness, that correspondence would be hearsay so far as the respondent is concerned. We are here to meet these charges. How the charges happened to be brought is not a material issue here.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, I quite recognize that, under the ordinary rules governing the admission of testimony, a very serious question would present itself with reference to the admission of this testimony. That is the reason why I took the precaution of advising the Chair and the court with reference to the character of testimony or information which was sought to be elicited from this witness. The witness is here. He was the president of the Bar Association of San Francisco at the time this matter was initiated.

I gather from the testimony which has been adduced, and probably the same result will come from testimony which will be adduced, that these questions will come to the minds of Senators—and I will be very brief: Whether this prosecution was initiated by a disgruntled litigant, whether it was initiated by the stock exchange, or how it came to be initiated, as bearing upon the whole situation.

Here is the president of the Bar Association of San Francisco, who, acting in his official capacity, did initiate this investigation, and he knows the reasons which prompted his action, and the situation which obtained at the time of that action. We tender the witness to the Senate, and if it desires to have the information the witness is here prepared to give it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This witness would be competent to testify if within his knowledge he knew of some facts which have a bearing upon these charges. Whatever he initiated, either personally or in conjunction with members of the bar of his city or otherwise, it seems to the present occupant of the chair has all merged into the articles of impeachment brought to the Senate by the honorable managers on the part of the House, and we are concerned with those now, and not with the first steps taken by this witness, either individually or in conjunction with others, in bringing that result about.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, in view of that attitude on the part of the President—and certainly the managers have no disposition to complain with reference to it—we will not press further examination of this witness at this time, reserving the right, of course, if later on it may be desired, to tender the witness in rebuttal.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Then you are excused, Mr. Whiting.

(The witness retired from the stand.)

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, the managers have no further evidence to offer at this time.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, if it would not be asking too much, we would very much appreciate an adjournment until tomorrow in order that we may determine whether or not to make a motion which we are considering at this time. We expected that the testimony of other witnesses would be introduced, and that the case of the prosecutors would not be concluded this early. If the Senate and you, Mr. President, can grant my request, the respondent will be ready to proceed at any time tomorrow which you may designate.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, will the President permit an observation on the part of the managers?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Certainly.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Our suggestion is to this effect, that counsel for the respondent begin the presentation of their case, and while it may not be according to the usual procedure, the managers on the part of the House would not object, if tomorrow counsel for respondent should determine to present the motion indicated, to have the motion presented then as of this time. I merely make that suggestion in the interest of the economy of time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is disposed to submit that question to the Senate for its determination and will entertain any motion which a Senator may desire to make.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I have been engaged in a committee meeting. What is the motion, may I ask?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion now proposed is to take an adjournment until tomorrow morning, at which time counsel for the respondent will have determined whether they will move for a dismissal of the articles of impeachment or to proceed with the introduction of evidence. Is that correctly stated, the Chair will inquire of counsel?

Mr. LINFORTH. That is substantially correct, Mr. President. We propose, if we follow that course, to make a motion which is tantamount to a demurrer to the evidence.

RECESS

Mr. ASHURST. I move that the Senate take a recess for 1 hour so that the honorable attorneys on the part of the respondent may determine whether or not they wish to make any such motion. It seems to me that an hour is appropriate time. I make that motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Arizona.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 3 o'clock and 1 minute p.m.) the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment took a recess for 1 hour. On the expiration of the recess the Senate sitting as a court reassembled.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HEBERT in the chair). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-four Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. Is counsel for the respondent ready to proceed?

TESTIMONY ON BEHALF OF RESPONDENT

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, on behalf of the respondent, we wish to thank the Presiding Officer and the Senate for the courtesy of giving us an hour within which to confer. Counsel are under instructions from the respondent not to make any motion but to proceed to offer the proof.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Very well, gentlemen. Call your first witness.

EXAMINATION OF ROY A. BRONSON

Mr. LINFORTH. Call Mr. Roy Bronson.

Roy A. Bronson, having previously been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Bronson, you have already been a witness in this matter on behalf of the prosecution?—A. I have.

Q. How long have you been practicing law?—A. Twenty years.

Q. How long have you known Herbert Erskine?—A. For about 25 or 30 years.

Q. How long have you known his brother, Morse Erskine?—A. Ever since he has practiced law, which, I believe, is something like 10 or 12 years.

Q. And did you know the senior member of that firm in his lifetime, Mr. Keyes?—A. I did.

Q. Do you know what the reputation of Herbert Erskine is, as a man and a lawyer, in the community where he resides?—A. I do.

Q. Is it good or bad?—A. It is excellent.

Q. And what is the reputation of his brother, Morse Erskine?—A. It is excellent also.

Q. And what was the reputation of the deceased member of the firm, Mr. Keyes?—A. The very highest.

Mr. LINFORTH. That is all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Do Managers on the part of the House desire to ask the witness any questions?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. We do not.

(The witness retired from the stand.)

EXAMINATION OF THOMAS W. SLAVEN

Mr. LINFORTH. Call Mr. T. W. Slaven.

Thomas W. Slaven, having been previously duly sworn, was examined, and testified as follows:

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Slaven, you have already been a witness in behalf of the other side to this proceeding?—A. I have.

Q. How long have you been practicing as an attorney?—A. Fifteen years.

Q. Do you know Herbert Erskine?—A. I do.

Q. How long have you known him?—A. About 10 years.

Q. Do you know his brother, his partner, Morse Erskine?—A. I do.

Q. How long have you known him?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Just a minute. Mr. President, we do not object at all to the testimony, but in order to save time we believe that the interrogation ought to be directed to the reputation of the attorney whose reputation was brought in question this morning by a question asked by counsel for the respondent.

Mr. LINFORTH. May I add one word in reply, Mr. President? The witness Brown, after testifying that the reputation of Herbert Erskine was not good, then refused to answer a question as to the reputation of Morse Erskine. So I think, under that state of affairs, in justice to those men, it is proper to use the witness on the other side in defense of that situation. We are 3,000 miles away from home where these men practice and where they live, but, fortunately, we have some lawyers here on the other side in this case that know them.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, will the Chair hear me for just a moment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The manager may proceed.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I may suggest to the Chair that on a former examination of Mr. Brown it was disclosed that he did at that time testify that Mr. Erskine's reputation was not good. Counsel for the respondent knew that. At the time they propounded the question this morning to Mr. Brown they brought out that information or testimony themselves. We are not at all objecting, notwithstanding the fact that they put it in issue themselves and knew exactly what was going to happen when they asked the question. We do not at all object to this witness answering questions with regard to the reputation of a lawyer whose reputation was put in issue by counsel for the respondent. We do not at all object to that.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, will you allow me one word in defense of a brother lawyer? True, upon preliminary statement, Mr. Brown did make the statement which he repeated here. Some weeks ago when I was in the city of Washington in connection with this proceeding the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate told us that the Treasury of this country was at the defense of the respondent, if necessary, but he asked us to bear in mind existing conditions and not to pile up unnecessary expense. For that reason we did not bring attorneys 3,000 miles to substantiate the reputation of these men, but we are fortunate in having some of the lawyers on the other side in this case who know them; and I say, inasmuch as the witness referred to declined to answer the question as to what the reputation of Morse Erskine was, in fairness to any lawyer, we ought to be permitted to remove the insinuation, if it is no more than that, from the declination of that witness to answer the question as to what the reputation of Morse Erskine was.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The opinion of the present occupant of the chair is that this is a matter in which the Senate is not concerned. It is not the issue here. The Chair appreciates the attitude of counsel in wishing to clear the reputation of a fellow member of the bar. The Chair can well appreciate their desire to do that. On the other hand, the Chair does not feel justified in allowing the time of the Senate to be taken up in any such inquiry. While the Chair is going to allow this witness for the time being to testify, he will not permit the inquiry to proceed any further.

Mr. LINFORTH. We bow to the wishes of the Chair, and we shall not call anyone else on the subject.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. The managers did not put in issue the reputation of Mr. Erskine, and do not now question it, and never have questioned it.

Mr. LINFORTH. But your witness did.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. You asked him the question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair does not think we ought to waste any further time on this issue. Proceed with the examination.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. What is the reputation of Morse Erskine in the community in which he lives for honesty, integrity, and ability as a lawyer?—A. It is of the highest.

Q. And his brother Herbert?—A. Likewise I know it to be the highest.

Mr. LINFORTH. No further questions.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I have a question I want to ask.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee propounds an inquiry, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. Do you know the general reputation of John Douglas Short? If you do, what is the general reputation of John Douglas Short for truth and veracity and as a lawyer?

The WITNESS. For truth and veracity I know the reputation of Mr. Short to be good. As for his ability as a lawyer I am unable to state.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any further inquiries? If not, the witness may be excused.

EXAMINATION OF J. H. ZOLINSKY

Mr. LINFORTH. We will call Mr. Zolinsky.

J. H. Zolinsky, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Zolinsky, will you state your residence and occupation?—A. My residence is San Francisco. My occupation is an accountant.

Q. How long have you been following the business of an accountant?—A. About 13 years.

Q. Were you the accountant for Russell-Colvin & Co. before the appointment of the receiver?—A. I was.

Q. How long had you been the accountant of that firm before the receivership?—A. About 3 years.

Q. Following the receivership, were you employed by the receiver, Mr. Hunter?—A. I was.

Q. Did you continue from that time on in the employment of Mr. Hunter as accountant?—A. Yes; I was.

Q. Can you tell the Presiding Officer and the Senate what the balance sheet, taken March 11, 1930, the date of the receivership of that concern, showed, so far as assets and liabilities were concerned?—A. There were firm assets and firm securities amounting to $1,521,096.54. There were also held for customers securities to the amount of $1,538,879.81, making a total of assets of $3,059,976.35.

Q. According to the balance sheet at the date of the receivership?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. According to the books of the company, what was the appraised value of the securities—not their assets but securities—belonging to Russell-Colvin Co. at the date of the receivership?—A. The appraised value of securities belonging to Russell-Colvin was $503,267.25, not including any belonging to customers.

Q. Did they have assets other than securities?—A. Yes; they had about $1,000,000 of other assets, including membership seats. There was some cash, accounts due from customers, and miscellaneous.

Q. In round numbers as of the date of the receivership the assets were approximately $1,000,000?—A. That is right.

Q. How many claims were presented and filed with the receiver?—A. There were 679 claims filed with the receiver.

Q. Can you state from your record the aggregate sum of those claims filed with the receiver?—A. Yes; they were $1,722,004.53.

Q. Do your books show and can you state the amount due by Russell-Colvin & Co. on that date for bank loans, brokers' loans, and repurchase agreements in total?—A. Yes; that amounted to $973,170.94.

Q. Were the securities held by Russell-Colvin & Co. at the time of the receivership pledged by them for an amount in excess of what Russell-Colvin & Co. had loaned on them?—A. Yes; they were.

Q. How much more did that concern pledge them for than they had loaned on them, in round numbers?—A. That was about $359,000.

Q. From your books can you state how much in cash was paid by the receiver to the customers who had preferred claims?—A. I do not understand the question. Was that the amount paid to—

Q. Let me withdraw the question and put it in a different form. How much did the receiver pay to the customers of the firm in cash and securities?—A. It totaled $830,439.73.

Q. Can you state how much of that was paid by the receiver to those customers in cash?—A. It was $328,406.72.

Q. Was the balance paid in stock of the appraised value of the difference?—A. Yes; it was.

Q. According to your books how much was paid to the secured customers by the receiver in the liquidation, in percent?—A. One hundred percent was paid to the secured claimants.

Q. The secured claims were paid 100 percent?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I send a question to the desk. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana propounds a question, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. Was the firm of Erskine & Erskine associated as attorneys for the receiver with John Douglas Short?

Yes; they were.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Having told us that in the liquidation the secured customers received 100 percent of their claims, how much did the marginal customers not entitle to priority receive in percentage?—A. They have already received 48.07 percent.

Q. Are there still assets out of which a further dividend will be paid them?—A. Yes; they will receive about 6.8 percent additional.

Q. Making, in round numbers, how much in percentage?—A. About 55 percent.

Q. What have the general creditors received in percentage?—A. So far they have received 28 percent.

Q. Are there assets remaining out of which they will be paid an additional percentage?—A. They will receive an additional 12 percent, making a total of 40 percent.

Q. What remaining assets are there at the present time? I do not mean to specify what they are, but in total?—A. In total we have assets of about $65,000, and in addition to that we have uncollected customers' accounts of $179,000.

Q. In figuring the percentage that will still be paid, have you figured anything on the $170,000 and odd of uncollected accounts?—A. We have not figured anything on the $179,000 of uncollected accounts.

Q. The balance you have referred to from your record—A. $65,000.

Q. Is it due from solvent concerns?—A. It is all due from solvent concerns.

Q. And good?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. LINFORTH. Take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. Your statement is that there will be 12 percent more paid to the general creditors?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that the money is due from solvent concerns?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why have you not already collected the money?—A. Why, of that amount $5,200 is being held in escrow by the legal firm who had charge of the Farmers' Investment Co., which was liquidated by the receiver. They are waiting to turn it over to Mr. Hunter.

Q. What are they waiting for?—A. I could not tell you that; some legal difficulty in closing that concern. It should have been paid, I understand, several years ago. I do not know why it has not been paid.

Q. How do you know it is going to be paid?—A. I know they have it in escrow. Mr. Hunter sold the stocks which made up this sum of money and was asking for it several times. I do not know why he has not been paid it.

Q. What I am trying to find out is how you know it is going to be paid. You have testified that it is going to be paid, and it has been in escrow for these years.—A. It should be paid, because it was a subsidiary of Russell-Colvin. There is no liability against it that I know of.

Q. And yet it is being held in escrow?—A. Yes; it is being held in escrow by the attorneys who were in charge of the corporation.

Q. And you testify it is going to be paid and distributed to the general creditors?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You swear to that?—A. That is, $5,000 of the amount.

Q. You swear to that?—A. Yes, sir; an additional amount—that is, $5,000 of the $65,000. The other large amount is $58,000, with interest, due on a contract of sale of securities, sale of notes of the Anchorage Light & Power Co., which contract is secured by all the common stock of the company and is being paid off in regular payments. We have received so far $12,000 on the sale.

Q. What position did you hold with the Russell-Colvin Co. prior to the receivership?—A. I was the accountant, in charge of the accounts.

Q. What does that mean?—A. I was in charge of all the accounting for the firm, all the bookkeepers and margin customers and cashiers, and so forth.

Q. Was it part of your duties to trace these accounts that you had with other brokers—New York brokers, and so forth?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did that before. Did you continue your responsibility in that regard after your employment by the receiver?—A. We never had to trace the securities before the receivership in the same light as we had to trace them for the receiver. There was no occasion to trace before the receivership that I know of.

Q. Did you have the responsibility of making those tracings after the receiver took control?—A. Yes; I did.

Q. Under anybody's direction as to the plan of procedure?—A. Yes. Mr. Short laid out the routine, separating the various classifications of customers for tracing.

Q. Mr. Short, the attorney for the receiver?—A. The attorney.

Q. Did the receiver have anything to do with that?—A. Mr. Hunter was with us, working with us on it. We had quite a few people working on the actual work.

Q. What was the character of the assets of the Russell-Colvin Co. when the receiver took charge?—A. The character? They had their securities. The investment department securities were being sold. We had the accounts receivable, money due from customers. We had the membership, the firm membership account, the stock-exchange seats; money due it from various accounts, such as the Consolidated Paper Box Co., one of its subsidiaries. There was some cash on hand. There was, of course, furniture and fixtures. They were the principal assets.

Q. How many companies held these pledged securities?—A. We had a total of some forty odd different pledgees, different pools—some very small and some large.

Q. How many other concerns held the pledged securities, margined securities?—A. How many concerns were they pledged with?

Q. Yes; that is right.—A. Around 40.

Q. Were they located in San Francisco or in New York?—A. They were all located in San Francisco—San Francisco and California. Lots of them were up-State and down south a way; and some of the companies had correspondents in New York.

Q. You did not have any securities pledged in New York?—A. Well, the largest account, E. A. Pierce & Co., had the most of their securities in New York, held for us there. We had the account with the San Francisco office.

Q. What made up the three million assets, briefly?—A. There was $500,000 worth of firm securities. We had—

Q. You need not be too particular. I do not care for too much detail.—A. All right. The seats, the exchange seats, were $75,000. Due from customers were $650,000; and there was cash, $43,000. There were furniture and fixtures of an appraised value of $7,700; and there were miscellaneous items due from different concerns of over $100,000.

Q. The customers owing you the $650,000 were marginal customers, were they not?—A. Yes, sir; they were all marginal customers.

Q. And you had the stocks pledged to secure the indebtedness that was owing?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much did those stocks lack of being of value equal to the amount that was owing to you by these customers?—A. I have not got the figures at that time. I have what they were later sold for, and what the customers still owe on those stocks.

Q. How much were they sold for?—A. They were sold for an amount which left a balance due the receivership of $179,000.

Q. Do you assume from that statement that they lacked $179,000 of bringing the amount originally pledged?—A. If I am right, originally about $140,000 were the amounts that we considered deficit accounts. Those were accounts that did not have enough collateral to secure the indebtedness.

Q. What has been the accounting cost since the receiver has been in charge?—A. The accounting cost?

Q. The accounting cost.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Mr. Witness, some of the Senators are unable to hear, and it has been suggested that the microphone be raised 8 or 10 inches. Suppose you try that.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I take the liberty—although I am violating the rule—of asking the President to instruct the witness to speak louder? He drops his voice and those of us who are near lose some of his sentences.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness will please raise his voice all the time. It is rather difficult to hear. The acoustics are not particularly good and Senators have to strain a good deal to hear what is said.

By Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. In order that the court may get the mechanics of this thing, is it not true that much of the payments to which you refer—and much of the indebtedness—simply meant that you recovered the pledged securities and delivered them back to the persons who have pledged them?—A. Well, of course, we secured the remaining securities from the pledgees after the pledges were satisfied and distributed them to claimants.

Q. I should like to repeat my question. As I understand from your statement, much of the assets and much of the liabilities of this concern had to do with pledged securities?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In winding up that part of the transactions of the concern, what you had to do was to recover these pledged securities and deliver them to the respective pledgors?—A. That is right, sir.

Q. About what percentage of the business of winding up the receivership did that character of transaction constitute?—A. You mean of the accounting part of the receivership?

Q. You can answer it either way, or both ways, if you like.—A. Of course the tracing of the securities involved both the securities pledged and unpledged. I do not know just what percentage we spent on the tracing.

Q. Perhaps we can get at it in this way: Since the receiver took charge of the Russell-Colvin Co. it has not been a going concern? It has not bought and sold stock?—A. That is correct; yes, sir.

Q. It has been purely a liquidating receivership?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is it not true that the process of liquidation was to recover first the unsold stocks and deliver them back to the persons to whom they respectively belonged?—A. Well, that was not our procedure. We traced all securities into the various pledges, determined which securities had been sold, whose securities had been sold, and the losses and gains thereon, and then delivered to the customers the remaining securities or the cash equivalent, the cash realized from the sale of the securities by pledges. Some of the securities the pledgees sold out at the commencement of the receivership. Others were sold by the receiver later on.

Q. Do you mean that the securities that were pledged with A, B, or C were sold by A, B, or C under the original authorization of sale, and they paid themselves the amount of money that the Russell-Colvin Co. owed to them? Is that true?—A. Yes; most of the banks and brokers did that. There were several who did not do it.

Q. With regard to those transactions where the brokers pursued the first policy, what you had to do was to find out what part of the entire amount received, having already determined with reference to these pools that you have indicated, belonged to each of the pledgors?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you had some securities which the Russell-Colvin Co. had underwritten; did you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have to do with the transactions concerning their sale?—A. Yes; I did. Well, I had to do with the records, of course, concerning their sale. I had to do with the sales of those securities which were pledged, owing to us, Colvin & Co.—those underwritings.

Q. How long was it before the bulk of the business of this concern was wound up under the receivership? Let me put it in this way: What percentage of the bulk of the transactions of the receivership was wound up in the first 3 months?—A. The first 3 months there was very little wound up. At the end of the first 3 months, if I recall, we had completed receiving all the claims from the various claimants and determining the classification of those claims.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I do not think it is profitable to pursue this any further.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any further questions?

Mr. LINFORTH. No further questions.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I send an interrogatory to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah propounds an interrogatory, which will be read by the clerk.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. How long was the Russell-Colvin Co. in the hands of the receiver?

The WITNESS. The company went into the hands of the receiver March 11, 1930, and I suppose to date. Its work was finished quite a while ago. Final payments out of firm accounts, and so forth, were paid in the fall of 1931. However, they received a general distribution from the general fund early this year.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I send up two questions, which I ask to have read.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, a point of order. I think that question would mean in point of years. I will ask the Chair to ask the witness to answer how many years or months it was. I do not get exactly what he means by that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair suggests that the Reporter read the answer to the interrogatory for the information of the Senate.

The Official Reporter read as follows:

A. The company went into the hands of the receiver March 11, 1930, and I suppose to date. Its work was finished quite a while ago. Final payments out of firm accounts, etc., were paid in the fall of 1931. However, they received a general distribution from the general fund early this year.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. There is one question I overlooked asking the witness.

Mr. McKELLAR. May I have read the questions which I have sent to the desk?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The manager will permit the interrogatories of the Senator from Tennessee to be propounded.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Yes; I beg pardon.

The legislative clerk read the first question, as follows:

Q. How many lawsuits were brought by the attorneys for the receiver?

The WITNESS. I do not know the total number of lawsuits.

The legislative clerk read the second question, as follows:

Q. How much was recovered on such suits as were brought?

The WITNESS. I have not the figures on those suits.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I desire to ask another question in order to finish the matter. I will have it ready in a moment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Very well. In the meantime, the manager for the House has a question.

By Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. I should like to ask you, Mr. Witness, how much of the assets of the Russell-Colvin Co. was paid out to the receiver and the attorney for the receiver?—A. The receiver and his attorney received $90,000. Do you mean what percentage?

Q. No. Will you please state the sums paid respectively to the receiver and the attorney for the receiver?—A. The attorneys of the receiver received $51,250. The receiver was paid $40,500.

Q. For how long a period of time was that?—A. Mr. Hunter was actively on the job all last year, all 1932, and on and off to the present date.

Q. How long after the receiver qualified and took charge of the property was this payment made to the receiver?—A. The receiver was paid in the spring—I have not the exact date—the spring of 1931.

Q. Can you fix the date a little more definitely and give us some information as to how long the receiver had been in charge of the property at the time the payment was made?—A. I think just about a year after the commencement of the receivership.

Q. Is that true also with reference to the attorney for the receiver?—A. They both were paid at the same time.

Q. Do you know how much time the attorney for the receiver devoted to this receivership?—A. I know he was with us most of the first year practically all the time—that is, with the accounting end of it. Of course, I do not know just what extra time he spent.

Q. How long was Mr. Erskine with you?—A. Mr. Morse Erskine was with us a while on the tracing of the claims and preparing the different classifications of customers.

Q. For how long a period of time, if you know?—A. I imagine for about the first 6 months we were working together.

Q. He was there, then, practically all the time?—A. He was there on and off; not as steady as Mr. Short.

Q. Did Mr. Short come down in the morning and stay until evening?—A. Yes; he did. Many times he was there the full day just the same as we were.

Q. Were there many days when he was not there? We are trying to get a picture.—A. Yes; I know. I know sometimes, of course, he was working with Mr. Hunter on other things, and then we would call him in on our work. Of course, we did not bother with the sale of the other assets of the company.

Q. Were there any other attorneys who worked with you during that period, representatives of the Russell-Colvin Co.? Were they there at any time?—A. I worked up some figures for Mr. Brown at one time. He was the only one.

Q. There were no other attorneys representing anybody else who had contact with the activities of the receiver?—A. There were other attorneys representing claimants who came.

Q. I am asking with regard to attorneys who helped to complete the settlement of the estate.—A. Yes, the attorneys for the creditors' committee went over the outline of the work we were doing, and went over certain accounts in which they were interested.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. That is all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee desired to propound an inquiry.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I have an interrogatory which I desire to propound.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the interrogatory.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. Will you ascertain how much money was recovered by means of lawsuits brought by attorneys for the receiver, and give the total sum to the reporter in answer to this question?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, in that connection I respectfully suggest to the president that it would perhaps be valuable to have retained as a part of the record in this case the memoranda from which the witness has testified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. I think perhaps that might well be made a part of the record for the information of the Senate.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. We respectfully ask that it may be made a part of the record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That may be done, Mr. Zolinsky, and it will be here in safe-keeping, and will be available to you at a later date.

(See U.S.S. Exhibit 53.)

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I do not think the witness answered the question and stated whether he would get the information that was asked for.

The WITNESS. I have not a record of the different lawsuits that were instituted by the attorneys.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I send two interrogatories to the desk, which I desire to have propounded to the witness.

Mr. McKELLAR. One moment. May I suggest, without writing it, that the witness has not answered the question I asked? This witness is an accountant for the company, and all I ask is how much money is shown by his account to have been received from lawsuits. Surely he ought to be able to find out from his accounting how much money was received as a result of lawsuits.

The WITNESS. One of the principal suits by the attorney, or the work by the attorney, was in the case of the Consolidated Paper Box Co., on which we received about $211,000 in cash and credits to the pledgees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah propounds the following interrogatories, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. For how many months did Short serve as attorney?

The WITNESS. For about the first 6 months, or most of the first year, he served a good deal with the accounting department, showing us the claims, and later with the receiver as well, in disposing of the other firm assets. That was a period of, I should say, about 2 years—less than 2 years.

Q. For how many months did Erskine serve as attorney?

The WITNESS. It is my recollection, or my opinion, that on all the cases, outside of the claims for securities, Mr. Erskine worked with Mr. Short. As a matter of fact, I want to say that Mr. Short, even to the present time, is interested in conducting some of the suits against some of the deficit accounts which we are trying to collect.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I send an interrogatory to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida propounds the following interrogatory, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. What were the total expenses paid out by the receiver in addition to the compensation to the receiver and the attorneys out of the trust funds?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk informs the Chair that there are two interrogatories. The witness will be directed to answer the first, which has just been propounded, and then the second will be propounded to him.

The WITNESS. There were about $50,000 expenses.

Q. What were the different items of expense?

The WITNESS. There were office salaries, amounting to approximately $29,000; rent, about $4,000; and there were fees to other attorneys, about $17,000.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I send three interrogatories to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada propounds three interrogatories, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. How much did the creditors realize from the estate?

The WITNESS. The average paid to all creditors amounts to a little over 65 percent and the amount of money and securities paid amounted to $830,000.

Q. What was the total amount of the estate?

The WITNESS. The total amount of the estate was $3,000,000.

Q. What was the appraised value of the estate?

The WITNESS. That is the appraised value, or book value, in either case.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I have two interrogatories I wish to propound.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee propounds the following interrogatories, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. What were the fees to other attorneys for?

The WITNESS. In one case there was a firm of attorneys representing a client in New York that replevined their stock. In other cases there was a fee allowed to the attorneys representing the firm of Russell-Colvin & Co. That is the record I have on that.

Q. If Mr. Short and Messrs. Erskine & Erskine were employed, why was $17,000 paid to other attorneys?

The WITNESS. I do not know why it was paid. I guess that will have to be answered by someone else.

Recross-examination by Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. Mr. Zolinsky, you stated, as I understood your statement, that the attorneys have recovered in a lawsuit two hundred thousand and some odd dollars in the Consolidated Paper Box Co. matter. Do you not know, as a matter of fact, there was not any lawsuit at all about that; that that was merely a sale of the property?—A. I said that I have no information as to the number of suits filed, except those filed against customers, which are in process of collection now; but I stated there was a great deal of legal work on that Consolidated Box case, and that is the reason I mentioned it.

Q. But did you or not mention it in response to an inquiry as to what had been recovered by lawsuits on the part of these attorneys?—A. I did.

Q. What lawsuit was instituted?—A. As I said, I know there was a good deal of legal work. I do not know just what kind of a suit was brought against it, and, as I said before, I have no record of all the suits that were brought in this case.

Q. In other words, you do not know whether there was any suit brought at all or not in that matter?—A. I know there were some suits, but I have no record of what suits were brought.

Q. I do not want to take too much time on this, but I am speaking now with respect to the Consolidated Paper Box Co., the only concern that you pointed out definitely with reference to which there had been a lawsuit. I want to know what lawsuit that was.—A. I do not know whether there was a lawsuit or not. I know there was a good deal of legal work.

Q. Do you not know that it was not a lawsuit, that it was a negotiation and sale, and that Mr. De Lancey Smith had the major part to do with reference to the negotiation and sale and closing of the matter?—A. I know that Mr. De Lancey Smith worked on it.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. That is all.

Redirect examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. May I ask just one further question? You recall, do you not, that the court made an order allowing, if I remember correctly, $8,750 to Brown & Smith as attorneys for the defendant and to Thelen & Marrin; at the same time it made an allowance of forty-six thousand and odd dollars to Keyes & Erskine. Is that $8,750 a part of the amount that you have mentioned?—A. Yes; it is.

Q. One further question. Can you tell the Presiding Officer and the Senate about when the dividend was paid to the creditors?—A. The first amount was paid in September 1931, and prior to that we had satisfied the full-paid-security claimants.

Q. And was there a second dividend payment?—A. There were two general dividend payments; as a matter of fact, there were three before the end of 1931; a fourth dividend was paid in March of this year.

Q. That is, the last dividend was paid in March of this year?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that a small one?—A. It was 3 percent of the general claims.

Mr. LINFORTH. I think that is all.

Recross-examination by Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. Just one question, and I am sure I am through. How much was paid to the general creditors in money?—A. In money?

Q. Yes; how much has actually been paid to the general creditors—what percentage of their respective claims?—A. We have paid 28 percent so far.

Q. How much does that amount to?—A. It amounts to $168,595.82.

Mr. BLACK. I send to the desk an interrogatory.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama propounds an interrogatory, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. Who were the other lawyers receiving the $17,000, and what amount did each receive, and where are such lawyers located?

The WITNESS. The attorneys for the plaintiff received $4,375; the same amount to attorneys for the defendant.

The attorneys for the defendant were De Lancey Smith and Francis Brown; the attorneys for the plaintiff, I think, were Thelen & Marrin. One thousand dollars was paid to a New York firm of attorneys on account of securities held for the agency, and there were $7,000 of miscellaneous legal expenses, which includes clerical and legal expense as well.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I should like for the clerk to be instructed again to read the question to the witness so that he may answer the entire question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will again read the interrogatory.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. Who were the other lawyers receiving the $17,000, and what amount did each receive, and where are such lawyers located?

The WITNESS. De Lancey Smith and Francis Brown, San Francisco, received $4,375; Thelen & Marrin, attorneys for the plaintiff, received the same amount, $4,375, also of San Francisco; $1,000 was paid through Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro, of San Francisco, for account of a New York firm. I do not know the name of that firm. There was still $7,000 for miscellaneous amounts that I have not here. I think most of them are for court and different clerical expenses.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I submit two interrogatories.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the interrogatories propounded by the Senator from Utah.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Did all the members of the Erskine & Short firm render services in the handling of the Russell-Colvin estate?

The WITNESS. Not to my knowledge.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the second interrogatory propounded by the Senator from Utah.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. Who were the members of the firm of Erskine & Short?

The WITNESS. I know of Mr. Morse and Mr. Herbert Erskine and Mr. Short. I did not have any business with the other members.

Mr. KING. I submit two further interrogatories.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah submits two interrogatories, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. Is Hunter still acting as receiver?

The WITNESS. He is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the second interrogatory propounded by the Senator from Utah.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. To whom were the payments made which, as you said, constituted 100 per cent?

The WITNESS. They were made to security claimants who had paid their accounts in full. The securities were held in safe keeping. They were also claims such as United States Government taxes, and other taxes, and employees' salaries and salesmen's commissions.

Mr. BLACK. I send another interrogatory to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama propounds an interrogatory, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. What lawyers received the miscellaneous expenses of $7,000; and if you do not have it in the account now, do you have it accessible?

The WITNESS. I can procure that information. I do not think that it was paid to any attorneys. I believe it was just for legal expenses in court and for stenographers, and so on, in the different cases.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I submit another inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee propounds an inquiry, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. Are John Douglas Short and Erskine & Erskine here in Washington in attendance on this case?

The WITNESS. Yes; they are.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, may I state, for the information of the Presiding Officer and those who are here, that Mr. Herbert Erskine is here and Mr. Short is also here. The other Mr. Erskine will come by airplane. He is not here at the present time. I want the witness to be exactly correct about it.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I wish to submit an interrogatory.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington propounds an interrogatory, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. Why were other San Francisco lawyers retained to represent or defend when the receiver had his own lawyers?

The WITNESS. I do not think the other firms were retained by the receiver.

Mr. BONE. That does not quite answer the question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the reporter please read the answer?

The Official Reporter read as follows:

A. I do not think the other firms were retained by the receiver.

Mr. LINFORTH. If I may be permitted to ask a question, I think I can make it clear to Senators in a moment. Mr. Witness, as to the $8,750 paid to Thelen & Marrin and to Smith & Brown, they were attorneys for the plaintiff and defendant, respectively, in the Russell-Colvin lawsuit, were they not?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. And they were not employed, any one of them, by the receiver?—A. They were not employed by the receiver.

Q. And the work that they did in connection with the Russell-Colvin matter was the basis of the application which they made to the court direct for compensation, was it not?—A. I believe it was. It had nothing to do with the work, so far as I know, of the receivership.

Q. And the court made an order allowing those gentlemen the amount that you testified to?—A. It was allowed by the court, I know.

Q. At no time were either one of those four gentlemen employed by the receiver?—A. They were not.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any further interrogatories?

Mr. LINFORTH. As a suggestion, Mr. President, the service rendered by those gentlemen started with the filing of the petition, which resulted in the appointment of the receiver, and such services as they rendered during the receivership. I will ask the witness if that is right?

The WITNESS. That is correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any further questions?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I desire to submit a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada propounds an interrogatory, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. Is it not true that the bulk of the work was in the nature of accountancy rather than law?

The WITNESS. I would say that for the first year Mr. Short spent most of his time on accounting problems and later on the sale of the various firm assets. I do not know just what percentage could be applied to each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any further questions?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. We have no further questions.

Mr. BLACK. I desire to ask a question. I thought it would probably be asked, but, as it has not been, I send it to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama propounds the following interrogatory, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. What fee did you receive as an accountant?

The WITNESS. I received a salary of $290 a month until December 1931, my regular salary, the same as I received from the firm.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there are no further questions, the witness may be excused.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. We have no further questions.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, as a matter of inquiry of the Chair, do I understand the statement held in the hands of the witness while he was testifying is to be made of record here?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the understanding.

Mr. McCARRAN. Is that a full statement of litigation conducted or defended during the course of the administration of the estate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair cannot answer that interrogatory. Under the rule, the Chair suggests that one of the managers on the part of the House could propound it, and then the witness may answer it, if he is able to answer.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, in order to save time may I propound the question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The manager may.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Does the statement to which reference has been made contain the entire statement with reference to the litigation either instituted and prosecuted or defended by counsel for the receiver?—A. I do not think it is complete. All the figures I have given this afternoon, of course, are in there.

Q. May I ask why do you think it is not complete?—A. Well, there may be more details which I have on the books of the company. These are just excerpts from the books, in somewhat round figures.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I desire to submit an inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada propounds an inquiry, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. Why was it necessary to retain and pay outside San Francisco counsel during the receivership while the receiver had his own attorneys?

The WITNESS. I think that no outside firms were retained by the receivership. Those outside fees were paid to the attorneys of the old partnership of Russell-Colvin & Co. and for the plaintiff in making the application for receivership.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I submit the following interrogatory.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah propounds an inquiry, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. Does the statement contain the names of claims filed or presented?

The WITNESS. My statement does not reveal the names, but they were filed in court at the first hearing for compensation.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I submit a further interrogatory.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington propounds a further interrogatory, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. Did the court allow $7,000 to a law firm for the preparation of a receivership petition?

The WITNESS. Not that I know of. There were two amounts of $4,300 apiece that were allowed to the attorney for the plaintiff and the attorneys for the defendant for work done in preparing the application and also for assistance given during some other deals.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any further questions? If not, the witness will be excused.

EXAMINATION OF HERBERT W. ERSKINE

Mr. LINFORTH. Shall we proceed, Mr. President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes; call your next witness.

Mr. LINFORTH. We will call Herbert W. Erskine.

Herbert W. Erskine, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Please state your name.—A. Herbert W. Erskine.

Q. Where do you live?—A. I live in the city of Piedmont, Alameda County, Calif.

Q. What is your profession?—A. I am an attorney at law.

Q. How long have you been practicing as an attorney at law?—A. Twenty-five years.

Q. In San Francisco?—A. Yes.

Q. What is the name of your present firm?—A. Keyes & Erskine.

Q. That firm is made up of whom?—A. It is made up of my brother and myself, since Mr. Keyes, my former senior law partner, died.

Q. When was it that Mr. Keyes was deceased?—A. He died in April of 1928.

Q. Is Mr. John Douglas Short connected with your firm in any capacity?—A. Yes.

Q. How long has he been connected with that firm?—A. Approximately 5 years.

Q. In what capacity?—A. He is associated with us, and also employed by us.

Q. Under what terms and arrangements?—A. We carry all the office overhead—rent, stenographers, telephone, and everything—and paid him up until last year $200 a month, and divided whatever business we jointly handled. In addition to that, he had his own business.

Q. On whatever business was jointly handled he received what proportion?—A. One half.

Q. In addition to that arrangement he has his own business, did you say?—A. Yes.

Q. How long were you in partnership with Mr. Alexander Keyes?—A. 1917.

Q. Down to the time of his death?—A. Down to the time of his death; yes.

Q. Have you been in the past the attorney for the Humboldt Savings Bank of San Francisco?—A. Yes. Mr. Keyes was the president of the bank and I was a director, and we were attorneys for the bank from the time I went to work for him until the bank was purchased or merged with the United Securities Bank & Trust Co., which later on became one of the parts of the Bank of America.

Q. How long were you one of the directors of the Humboldt Savings Bank?—A. I should say approximately 4 or 5 years prior to its absorption by the Bank of America.

Q. Are you one of the attorneys at the present time for the Bank of America at San Francisco?—A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been one of the attorneys for the Bank of America?—A. Ever since the absorption of the Humboldt Bank by the Bank of America chain.

Q. Were you one of the directors of the Bank of America?—A. Up until this January; yes.

Q. Have you also been one of the governors of the San Francisco Bar Association?—A. Yes; I was governor of the bar association for two terms, 1931 and 1932.

Q. How long have you known John Douglas Short?—A. I should say 20 years.

Q. How long has he been practicing law?—A. Approximately that time; perhaps 18 years.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I did not understand the question or answer. May I have it read?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reporter will read as requested.

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. How long has he been practicing law?—A. Approximately that time; perhaps 18 years.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. How old a man is John Douglas Short?—A. I do not know, but I think he is about 37 to 39 years of age. I would not say exactly.

Q. Do you know Francis C. Brown, who was a witness in this proceeding?—A. I believe I met him in 1924, but only vaguely believe it. He was a relative of Mr. Keyes, my former partner, and came in to ask us for employment at that time. I believe I met him then.

Q. Have you had any relations with him since then?—A. No; I have not. I do not know the man by sight even.

Q. Have you ever had any differences with him?—A. None; no.

Q. Do you know Mr. H. B. Hunter, the receiver?—A. Yes.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Hunter?—A. I have known Mr. Hunter ever since I became general counsel for the United Security Bank & Trust Co. That was about 5 years ago.

Q. Before you became one of its attorneys in this receivership matter had you had any business relations with him?—A. Oh, yes.

Q. In what connection?—A. He was auditor for the branches of the United Security Bank & Trust Co. and when we were merging and absorbing various branches, I think 23 or 25 of them throughout the State of California, my work brought me in contact with him.

Q. He was at that time employed in what capacity?—A. He was an auditor of the United Security Bank.

Q. Did you know him when he was also connected with the Mercantile Bank of San Francisco?—A. Slightly, but not professionally until he was connected with our bank.

Q. At the time of his appointment as receiver I understand he was connected with the firm of Cavalier & Co., stockbrokers in San Francisco and Oakland?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you attorney for Cavalier & Co.?—A. Yes; in some things.

Q. And had been for how long?—A. I was not under a regular retainer from them, but I represented them in some various phases of litigation for 4 or 5 years.

Q. In that way had you come in contact with Mr. H. B. Hunter?—A. Yes. The last case I handled for Cavalier, he was one of the men I came in contact with.

Q. Had your firm and in particular yourself had any experience in stockbrokerage transactions prior to this receivership?—A. Some.

Q. When you were a director and attorney for the Humboldt Savings Bank, was it also a member of the San Francisco Stock Exchange?—A. Yes. It had what is known as an "associate membership" in the San Francisco Stock Exchange.

Q. During those years did you have stock-transaction business with them?—A. Oh, yes; a great many.

Q. And also while you had been attorney for the Bank of America?—A. Yes.

Q. Who first spoke to you about your firm representing Mr. Hunter as receiver in the Russell-Colvin case?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, at this point I want to propound two questions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana propounds two interrogatories which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read the first interrogatory, as follows:

Q. Did you say that Lawyer Brown asked you for a job about 1924, or when?

The WITNESS. He asked my deceased partner, Alexander Keyes, for employment in 1924, approximately.

The legislative clerk read the second interrogatory, as follows:

Q. Why did you not hire Brown?

The WITNESS. Because I suppose we had enough men on hand at the time. I had nothing to do either with not hiring him or the hiring of him.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Who first spoke to you about representing Mr. Hunter as receiver?—A. Mr. Short.

Q. Do you recall when and where it was that he first spoke to you on that subject?—A. I believe it was in my office the morning after Mr. Hunter received his appointment.

Q. What talk did you have with him at that time on the subject of your firm being associated with him as attorney for Mr. Hunter?—A. He stated that Mr. Hunter had discussed with him the matter of employing our firm with him as attorneys for him as receiver, and we discussed it briefly and I stated that we would be glad to accept the employment.

Q. Were you at that time familiar in a general way with this kind of work in this receivership matter?—A. In a general way; yes.

Q. Which members or member of your firm paid particular attention to this receivership matter?—A. My brother.

Q. What was his name?—A. Morse Erskine.

Q. Are you familiar in a general way with the work done by Mr. Short in connection with that matter?—A. Yes; I am.

Q. How much of their time, to your knowledge, was devoted to this receivership matter?—A. All of Mr. Short's time for at least a year was devoted to it, and my brother devoted substantially all of his time for about 4 months in the beginning of the first year of it, and for about 4 months at the end of the first year of it, and in the interim approximately three quarters of his time.

Q. After the expiration of the first year are you familiar with what time was devoted by each one of them to the affairs of this receivership?—A. I am.

Q. Will you state, not exactly, but approximately?—A. My brother did not devote so much time after the first year to it. I think after the settlement of the account and the recasting of the account, which had to be done on a couple of occasions, Mr. Short from that time on handled it exclusively.

Q. During this period that you have spoken of, did you employ other lawyers in your office to do the work that your brother and Mr. Short had been doing prior to this receivership?—A. Yes; you see, we were doing a great deal of work for the Bank of America at the time, and my brother does most of that work. Mr. Short did some of it; and when we had to take him off that work, we had to get one other lawyer and then promote a man in the office that we already had.

Q. During the receivership were you or your brother called into consultation by Mr. Short or the receiver at various times?—A. Various times: yes.

Q. How frequently?—A. Well, many, many times. That would be hard to say, just how frequently. It was one of the big jobs in our office, and we were at it all the time, Sundays and Saturdays and all the time.

Q. Are you familiar with the report of H. B. Hunter on claims filed by him with the court?—A. Yes; I am.

Q. And also with the general report and account of Mr. Hunter as receiver in that matter?—A. Yes.

Q. I hand you these two documents and ask you if those are copies of his reports?—A. Yes; that is a copy of the report on claims, and I believe this is a copy of his general report, with the exception, I think, of some exhibits that are not attached to it.

Mr. LINFORTH. We offer these two papers. I do not care to have them printed in the record; but, to avoid that, I will ask a few questions in regard to them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Very well. The clerk will mark them.

(The first report was marked "U.S.S. Exhibit A", and the second report was marked "U.S.S. Exhibit B.")

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana will state it.

Mr. LONG. Could not those documents, instead of being printed in the record, be printed as exhibits, as Senate documents, to save expense?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is a matter for the Senate to determine, if it desires them printed as Senate documents.

Mr. LONG. It seems to me quite important to have before us the nature of the work, to see just what the receiver did.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will entertain a motion as to what disposition shall be made of them.

Mr. LONG. I move that they be printed as Senate documents.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. KING. If I may be permitted to state it without writing it, ought not the wishes of counsel for the respective parties to be considered in determining that question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Counsel for the respondent said he did not care to have these reports made a part of the record.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, I have no desire in the matter, if it is the desire of the Senate to have them printed.

My suggestion was to try to adopt a short course to save the expense of having them printed. If the Senators desire them printed—

Mr. LONG. I withdraw my point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator withdraws his motion. You may proceed.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. The report of the receiver on claims embraces 102 printed pages, does it not?—A. Yes.

Mr. LINFORTH. For the purpose of avoiding printing the matter in the record, I should like it to appear that it has an index or table of contents which, if I read it, will point to the contents of the paper, and may save the necessity of printing it in the record. It is headed:

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Did your report deal with the subjects referred to in the title to which I have called your attention?—A. It did.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Will counsel for the respondent permit an interruption?

Mr. LINFORTH. Certainly.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I desire to suggest to counsel for the respondent that on page 499 of the hearings before the special committee in San Francisco the document to which the gentleman is making reference appears to have been printed in full; and for the convenience of the Senate it might be suggested that if it is desired resort may be had to this document without the necessity for printing it.

Mr. LINFORTH. There is no objection to that so far as the respondent is concerned.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Very well.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Erskine, this general report and account of Mr. Hunter embraces 49 pages?—A. Yes; 49.

Q. And has a list of the subjects under discussion on the first 2½ pages thereof, does it not?—A. Yes.

Mr. LINFORTH. May I inquire of the honorable Manager of the House, Mr. SUMNERS, whether this paper to which he has referred is also printed in the record?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I am quite sure it is. If counsel will indicate the title of the paper, I will verify that.

Mr. LINFORTH. The paper is entitled "General Report and Account of H. B. Hunter, Receiver in Equity in Russell-Colvin & Co."

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I am sure it is. I can give complete assurance in just a moment. Is it First General Report, may I ask counsel?

Mr. LINFORTH. It is not designated as "First". It is designated as "General Report and Account." My information will not enable me to answer as to whether it is the first.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. The first General Report and Account, and report of the cash receipts and disbursements, is on page 419. The first report of Hunter on claims is on page 458.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I think I can give counsel assurance, if I may, that the document is incorporated in the volume of exhibits.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I am sure it is.

Mr. LINFORTH. Upon the assurance of counsel that it is also contained in that record, it is unnecessary further at this time to refer to it.

Mr. President, may I inquire whether this is a convenient time for an adjournment?

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, before an adjournment is taken, I should like to have two interrogatories propounded, so that the record will show them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee propounds two interrogatories, which will be read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. How were the fees your firm received from the receivership of Russell-Colvin & Co. divided between the members of your firm? How much did Mr. Short get, and how much did each of the others get?

The WITNESS. The fee was divided in half. Mr. Short received one half, and our firm received the other half, and it went into the cash receipts of the firm, and was divided in accordance with the partnership articles between myself and my brother. I received 60 percent of it, and he received 40 percent of it.

Q. How many suits were brought by your firm for the receiver? What was the aggregate amount received in all suits?

The WITNESS. I could not answer that last question without reference to the records. I am not familiar enough with that particular phase of it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Without writing the question, may I be permitted to ask the witness whether he will get that information?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is it possible for the witness to get that information and furnish it to the Senate?

The WITNESS. Yes.

Mr. McKELLAR. That will be entirely satisfactory.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, I may add that Mr. Short is here, and he no doubt will have full information on that subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. So long as the information comes from some witness, I take it that it will be satisfactory to the Senator.

Mr. McKELLAR. We will let the witness take his own course about it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Whether or not the Senate shall proceed further in the consideration of the case remains with the Senate to determine. Do counsel desire to have an adjournment at this time for some reason?

Mr. LINFORTH. I would appreciate very much an adjournment, Mr. President and Senators.

EXHIBITS ADMITTED IN EVIDENCE

The documents this day admitted in evidence, marked, respectively, "U.S.S. Exhibit 40" to "U.S.S. Exhibit 53", both inclusive, with the exception of "U.S.S. Exhibit 49" and "U.S.S. Exhibit 50", which were not ordered printed, are as follows:

U.S.S. EXHIBIT 40

IN THE SOUTHERN DIVISION OF THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

AMERICAN CAN CO., A CORPORATION, PLAINTIFF, v. GOLDEN STATE ASPARAGUS CO., A CORPORATION, DEFENDANT. IN EQUITY NO. 2683-K

Petition of receiver for authority to employ counsel

To the Honorable the Judge of the United States District Court in and for the Northern District of California, Southern Division: The petition of George N. Edwards respectfully represents to this court:

1. That he is the duly appointed, qualified, and acting receiver in equity in the above-entitled matter, having been duly appointed and qualified thereunder on the 5th day of September 1930;

2. That your petitioner finds that his duties as such receiver are very complicated and that in managing the property of said Golden State Asparagus Co., a corporation, your petitioner is constantly confronted with legal questions as to the extent of the authority of and the nature of the duties of your petitioner as said receiver;

3. That it also will be necessary to prepare petitions, orders, and other legal documents required in the administration of your petitioner's office and to do such things as are necessary to the end that your petitioner shall have proper legal advice; that because of the legal questions involved it is imperative that your petitioner be allowed to employ counsel to represent him in the discharge of his duties as said receiver;

4. That your petitioner purposes, upon the granting of this petition, to employ Messrs. Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel, attorneys at law of the city and county of San Francisco, State of California, as counsel, who have agreed to accept as compensation for any services rendered to your receiver such amount of money as may be allowed therefor by this court.

Wherefore said receiver prays that he be authorized and directed to employ said firm of attorneys as his counsel at the expense of said estate.

Dated September 8, 1930.

BEFORE THE INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENT COMMISSION OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA. CLAIM NO. 32249

MRS. HELEN LAY, APPLICANT, v. BOS CONSTRUCTION CO. AND LUMBERMEN'S RECIPROCAL ASSOCIATION, DEFENDANTS. FILED AUGUST 5, 1930

Petition for rehearing by Bos Construction Co., defendant in the above-entitled matter

To the Industrial Accident Commission of the State of California:

Now comes Bos Construction Co., one of the defendants in the above-entitled matter, and petitions for a rehearing under section 65 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, as grounds of this petition alleging:

I. That Adrian I. Bos is and has been at all times mentioned in the above-entitled matter doing business in the city and county of San Francisco, Calif., under the name of Bos Construction Co.; and that Adrian I. Bos and Bos Construction Co. are the employer involved in this matter.

II. That findings and award by the industrial accident commission in the above matter were made and filed on July 28, 1930.

III. That neither defendant Bos Construction Co. nor Adrian I. Bos had any notice of the pendency of this proceeding before the industrial accident commission until he was served with a copy of said findings and award.

IV. That it does not appear from said findings and award that the defendant Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association, the insurance carrier in the above matter, has assumed and agreed to pay the compensation covered by said findings and award, or that said carrier has served or caused to be served upon the applicant herein notice of its assumption of said liability, or that said carrier has filed a copy of such notice with the industrial accident commission, or that said carrier has been substituted in place of said employer in this proceeding, or that said employer has been dismissed from said proceeding or exonerated from liability under said findings and award; and therefore the defendant employer alleges that he is not exonerated or protected from liability in the above-entitled proceeding or in said findings and award.

V. That the defendant employer has not served or caused to be served upon the applicant or upon any person claiming compensation on account of the death involved herein, or upon the said insurance carrier, any notice that said carrier has in its policy, contract, or otherwise assumed and agreed to pay the compensation for which the defendant employer may be liable, or which has been awarded to the applicant herein by the terms of said findings and award; and that the defendant employer has not filed a copy of any such notice with the industrial accident commission.

VI. That it does not appear from the face of said findings and award or otherwise in this proceeding that the industrial accident commission is satisfied that the defendant carrier has through the issuance of its contract of insurance or otherwise assumed such liability for compensation, or that the defendant employer has been relieved from liability for compensation to the applicant or claimant, or that the defendant carrier has been substituted herein in place of the employer, or that the defendant employer has been dismissed herefrom.

VII. That the industrial accident commission acted without and in excess of its power in the making of the said findings and award and that the findings and award are contrary to law, in that the defendant employer, who is covered by compensation insurance, has not been dismissed herefrom and exonerated from liability for compensation on account of said accident.

VIII. That the evidence does not justify the said findings of facts and that said findings of facts do not support said award.

IX. That at the hearing of this matter before the industrial accident commission neither Earl Lay, M. Banovitch, nor Barney Downs was called as a witness in this matter; that at the time of said accident all of said persons were in the employ of the defendant employer, and that they were the only persons who were present at the time and place of the accident.

Wherefore the defendant employer prays that this petition for a rehearing in this matter be granted.

It is now here further ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the "Exceptions and objections to receiver's petition to pay certain preferred claims", filed by E. Brockmann, defendants, or in any other appropriate suit or proceeding, said claims being as follows: Claim of J. L. Kearney for legal services rendered in the receivership proceedings as set out in the petition for allowance of preferred claims and the itemized statement of legal services filed as an exhibit in support of said claim; claim of E. J. It is now here further ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the fourth and final report of the receiver and the supplemental report thereto and the accounts involved therein be, and they are hereby, allowed, settled, and approved; that the moneys collected and received by the receiver as enumerated in said fourth and final report and the supplemental report thereto were properly and legally collected and received by said receiver and deposited in bank to the credit of said receivership; that the expenditures involved in said accounts were necessarily incurred and the services therein enumerated actually rendered and that the charges therefor were proper and reasonable and were proper charges against, and were properly paid out of, the funds of the estate of the defendant, Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association;

It is now here further ordered, adjudged, and decreed that no further or additional allowance on account of compensation for services rendered by the receiver or by his attorney be allowed for the period covered by the fourth and final report and the supplemental report thereto from April 1, 1931, down to the present time;

It is now here further ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the following items are allowed and directed to be paid by the receiver as being proper and reasonable and preferred costs and expenses connected with the administration of the receiver, to wit: Claim of Columbia Casualty Co. in the sum of $33.30 being pro rata insurance for premium due on receiver's bond from July 30, 1931, up to and including the date of this order; claim of E. J. Brockmann for his witness fees in actual attendance in court upon the hearings of the settlement of the fourth and final report of the receiver and the supplemental report thereto including his traveling and subsistence expenses to and from Boulder City, Nev., in the sum of $102.32, as per sworn voucher filed in this case; claim of R. Binet for the witness fees in actual attendance in court upon the hearings of the settlement of the fourth and final report of the receiver and the supplemental report thereto and mileage in the sum of $5.20; also any further accruing court costs involved in these final proceedings;

It is now here further ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the decision, and the mandate thereafter issued and filed in this court, of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit rendered in the above-entitled case, entitled E. Forrest Mitchell, as insurance commissioner of the State of California, appellant, v. Helen Lay,

Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association, and Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr., as receiver of Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association, appellees, no. 6340 on the docket of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, which decision recites, in part, that this court "is directed to settle the accounts of the receiver and to order the receiver to turn over to the appellant (E. Forrest Mitchell, as insurance commissioner of the State of California), all property seized under its order by the receiver as soon as the appellant (E. Forrest Mitchell, as insurance commissioner of the State of California) has secured an appointment as receiver thereof in the action now pending in the State court", be complied with and the receiver is hereby instructed to comply with said decision and mandate;

And, it further appearing to the court that said appellant, E. Forrest Mitchell, as insurance commissioner of the State of California, has, since said decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, been appointed receiver of the Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association by the Superior Court of the State of California in and for the city and county of San Francisco in the suit now pending therein of E. Forrest Mitchell, as insurance commissioner of the State of California, plaintiff, v. Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association and E. J. Brockmann, defendants;

It is now here further ordered, adjudged, and decreed that Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr., receiver of Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association, defendant herein, be, and he is hereby, instructed and directed, within 30 days from the date of the signing and filing of this order, to deliver to the receiver appointed by the Superior Court of the State of California in and for the city and county of San Francisco, to wit, E. Forrest Mitchell, State insurance commissioner of California, any and all moneys in bank or otherwise held in the possession and custody of said Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr., as receiver of said defendant, Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association, and also any and all other assets, properties, books, records, papers, documents, notes, and all other personal property now in the possession or custody of said Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr., as receiver of said defendant, Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association, upon his obtaining and receiving a proper receipt or receipts therefor and filing said receipt or receipts with the clerk of the above-entitled court: Provided, however, That if within 30 days from the signing and filing of this order the attorney for E. Forrest Mitchell, State insurance commissioner of California and receiver appointed by the State Court of California, as above stated, shall appeal from this order, then the further execution and performance by said receiver of this order shall be stayed until the final action by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit on said appeal or until the other or further order of this court or of the Circuit Court of Appeals;

And it is now here further ordered, adjudged, and decreed that, upon the filing of said receipt or receipts with the clerk of the above-entitled court, said Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr., as receiver of said defendant, Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association, be, and he is hereby, released, exonerated, and discharged of any and all liability or otherwise as receiver of said defendant, Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association, and that his bond as such receiver, heretofore given and filed in the above-entitled suit in the sum of $20,000, be, and the same is hereby, exonerated.

LAW OFFICES OF KEYES & ERSKINE,
March 27, 1931.

Mr. W. L. HATHAWAY,
San Francisco, Calif.

DEAR MR. HATHAWAY: We have finally received our compensation to date in the Russell-Colvin & Co. matter, and I can now take up at least a part of my obligations to you. The record in my two check books shows the following advances made me by you:

October 1929 (Crocker Bank)	$200
December 1929 (Crocker Bank)	100
February 1930 (Crocker Bank)	100
June 1930 (Crocker Bank)	60
October 1930 (Bank of Italy)	100
December 1930 (Bank of Italy)	100
January 1931 (Crocker Bank)	1,500
Do	75

I also have a note in my bill file stating that I owe you "$500 for advances in 1929", which indicates that there is $200 due in addition to the first two items above. If your records do not show this, we can correct it later.

In addition to these advances there is our understanding in respect to the 12½ acres you deeded us at Woodside that I should reimburse you for the balance remaining due on that portion of your purchase from the Spring Valley Water Co. in accordance with the memorandum you prepared at the time we arranged to build our house. The balance arrived at was $3,651.61.

I am enclosing my check for $5,000, of which $2,435 is in repayment of your advances as above and the rest is on account of the Woodside property, which leaves a balance on this account of $1,086.61.

Sincerely yours,

DOUGLAS.

U.S.S. EXHIBIT 53

The answer sets up that the appraised value of all securities belonging to the firm of Russell-Colvin Co. and its creditors was the sum of $2,111,536.24, as of March 11, 1930.

Answer. This is correct.

The answer says that the appraised value of the firm securities, not including other assets was over one half million dollars.

Answer. This is correct. The exact amount was $503,267.20.

The answer says that 679 claims were filed with the receiver for cash and securities, totaling $1,722,402.51.

Answer. This is correct, but minor adjustments have been made to the extent of $379.98, making the correct amount $1,722,004.53.

Claims	$1,722,004.53
Bank, brokers' repurchases	956,036.39

Total	2,678,040.92
-------	--------------

The answer says that the amount of bank loans and repurchase agreements included in the receivership was $971,870.94.

Answer. This should have been bank and other loans, and should have been for $1,300 more, being the Colvin loan from the Bank of America for the firm and secured by firm securities, so the correct amount should be, as above, $971,870.94, plus the Colvin loan of $1,300, making the total $973,170.94.

Made up as follows:

Bank loans	$341,632.50
Brokers' loans	495,858.89
Repurchase agreements	118,545.00
Tracey loan (secured by note)	17,134.55

Total, as above	973,170.94

The answer says that the administration of the estate resulted in the payment to customers of cash $385,745.70 and the delivery to customers of securities of the value of $505,977.39.

Answer. The amount $385,745.70 is not correct. The correct amount is $328,406.72, the difference of $57,338.98 being made up of a duplication of the Aiken estate claim, through E. A. Pierce & Co., of $55,980.74 and readjustments of $1,358.24. Also securities, delivered amount to $502,033.04, instead of $505,977.39, difference $3,944.35 minor adjustment.

The answer says the ordinary margin customers of the firm not entitled to priority received 56 percent of their claims in cash and securities.

Answer. They have already received 48.07 percent, and will receive from the remaining assets 6.8 percent more.

The answer says that the claims of the general creditors, including the claims of marginal customers who were relegated to the position of general creditors for a portion of their claims amounted to $505,277.44, of which amount $152,733.97 represented the claims of general creditors not customers, and $352,533.47 represented the claims of margin customers who were relegated to the position of general creditors.

Answer. The amount as shown by the books is $539,230.39, but of this $27,035.26 was afterward determined to constitute preferred claims, so deducting this amount leaves $512,195.13.

Also some of the 21 excepting creditors succeeded by court proceedings in having their claims increased a total of $6,917.69, thus making a total for the general creditors in the sum of $512,195.13, instead of $505,277.44 referred to in the answer.

The amount of the claims of general creditors not customers is $152,733.97, as stated in the answer.

The answer says the general creditors have already received 28 percent of their claims with a prospect of an additional 12 percent.

Answer. This is correct.

The answer also says that the customers and creditors of the firm have received securities and cash to the amount of $828,000, an average of 65 percent for all customers and creditors.

Answer. This is correct, except the amount should be $830,439.60—a difference of $2,439.76.

The amount paid in cash was	$328,406.72

PROTEST AGAINST RECOGNITION OF SOVIET GOVERNMENT OF RUSSIA

Mr. REED presented a resolution adopted by the Philadelphia (Pa.) Board of Trade, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EXTRACT FROM MINUTES OF STATED MEETING, PHILADELPHIA BOARD OF TRADE, HELD MAY 15, 1933

Your Committee on Foreign and Coastwise Commerce submits the following preamble and resolution, protesting recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States:

Whereas Russia's vast land area together with its enormous natural resources create in that country a potential wealth which, to establish its people as a nation in the commercial rank and prestige to which they are justly entitled, needs only the stimulus of government grounded in strict administrative and commercial integrity, recognizing absolutely the basic principles upon which international trade is necessarily conducted; and

Whereas trade with Russia under present conditions fails to justify diplomatic recognition by the United States of America for that communistic regime now administering domestic affairs and foreign policies of the Russian people, especially when it is appreciated that such action on behalf of the Federal Government at Washington must subject American citizens to that form of subversive political propaganda now characterizing the Soviet international activities, the effect of which must impair the morale of our own nationals; and

Whereas until a government for Russia is established which acknowledges due respect for the rights of all, regardless of class or creed, the attitude heretofore enunciated by the Department of State at Washington should, we believe, find endorsement in Congress: Therefore

Resolved, That the Philadelphia Board of Trade hereby protests recognition by the United States of America of a government in Russia such as that now constituted in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics maintained in power through military oppression and social and economic policies opposed to American ideals of government, which ideals preserve and protect the lives of its citizens and their property rights.

On motion the preamble and resolution were unanimously adopted.

True copy.

THE PHILADELPHIA BOARD OF TRADE,
PHILIP GODLEY, President.

Attest:
[SEAL]

HENRY W. WILLS, Secretary.

REGULATION OF BANKING—AMENDMENTS

Mr. FLETCHER and Mr. DILL each submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them, respectively, to Senate bill 1631, the banking bill, which were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

Mr. VANDENBERG submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to Senate bill 1631, the banking bill, which was ordered to lie on the table, to be printed, and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

On page 44, end of line 15, add new section:

"Sec. 12C. (a) There is hereby created a temporary Federal bank-deposit insurance fund (hereinafter referred to as the fund), effective July 1, 1933, whose duty it shall be to insure certain deposits until July 1, 1934, when the Federal Bank Deposit Insurance Corporation begins to operate.

"(b) Each member bank of the Federal Reserve System which is now or hereafter licensed by the Secretary of the Treasury, pursuant to the authority vested in him by the President's proclamation of March 10, 1933, shall become a member of such fund in respect to each of its several deposits not in excess of $2,500, and in respect to the first $2,500 of any deposit in excess thereof: Provided, That section 12C shall not apply to any impounded or otherwise restricted deposit (except such restrictions as have been or may be proclaimed by the Secretary of the Treasury), or impounded or restricted portion thereof.

"(c) Any State bank which is not a member of the Federal Reserve System, but which is certified by the State's chief banking authority as solvent in respect to its free deposits in the date of application for membership in the fund, shall, upon application, become a member of said fund in respect to each of its several deposits not in excess of $2,500, and in respect to the first $2,500 of any deposit in excess thereof: Provided, That section 12C shall not apply to any impounded or otherwise restricted deposit (except such restrictions as have been or may be proclaimed by the Secretary of the Treasury).

"(d) Each member of the fund shall file with the fund prior to July 1, 1933, a sworn statement of the number and amount of its deposits, as of June 1, 1933, which would be eligible for insurance under this section, together with a certified check for one half of 1 percent of the total deposits thus certified. A similar certification shall be made on January 1, 1934, together with a certified check for one half of 1 percent of any increase in the total certification.

"(e) Each member of the fund shall be subject to one assessment of an additional one half of 1 percent (the same amount as accompanied its application and its payment, if any, on January 1, 1934) at any time prior to July 1, 1934, if the fund requires this additional revenue to meet its obligations as hereinafter defined.

"(f) During the life of the fund no member of the fund shall pay in excess of 2½ percent per annum interest on any insured deposit.

"(g) Whenever any member of the fund shall have been closed by appropriate legal authority the fund shall pay to each insured depositor as soon as possible thereafter the amount of his insured deposit on the date of such closing. After such payment the fund shall be subrogated to all rights against the closed bank of the owners of such deposits and shall be entitled to receive the same dividends from the proceeds of the assets of such closed bank as would have been payable to each such depositor in respect to the insured deposit.

"(h) In the event that the fund shall be unable to pay any of its obligations when due the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay the amount thereof which is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. If any such advances are made by the Secretary of the Treasury, they shall be subsequently reimbursed to the Treasury by the Federal Bank Deposit Insurance Corporation to the extent of the proceeds of a special annual assessment, for not to exceed 10 years after July 1, 1934, of one fourth of 1 percent of the total insured deposits of the members of the fund on January 1, 1934, which the Corporation is hereby authorized to collect.

"(i) In the event that the fund shall pay all of its obligations without recourse to the authority contained in the subsection (h), any balance remaining therein on July 1, 1934, when the life of the fund terminates, shall be transferred to the Federal Bank Deposit Insurance Corporation.

"(j) The fund shall be a body corporate with power to adopt and use a corporate seal; to make contracts; to sue and be sued, complain and defend in any court of law or equity, State or Federal; to appoint by its board of directors, which shall consist of the members of the Federal Reserve Board, such officers and employees as may be necessary to carry out the powers granted to the fund by this act; to define their duties, fix their compensation, require bonds of them and fix the penalty thereof, and to dismiss at pleasure such officers or employees; to prescribe by its board of directors bylaws not inconsistent with law, regulating the manner in which its general business may be conducted and the privileges granted to it by law may be exercised and enjoyed; and to exercise by its board of directors, or duly authorized officers or agents, all powers specifically granted by this act and such incidental powers as shall be necessary to carry out the powers so granted. No member of the board of directors of the fund shall receive any additional compensation for his services as such member.

"(k) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $10,000,000, which shall be made available to the fund for the purpose of any of its expenses or obligations.

"(l) All obligations of the fund shall cease on July 1, 1934. Thereafter it shall function solely in the collection of any liquidating dividends still due, as defined in subsection (g). The net proceeds of these subsequent collections shall be paid into the Federal Bank Deposit Insurance Corporation unless there is an unreimbursed balance due the Treasury under subsection (h), in which event they shall be paid into the Treasury."

MEMBER OF THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER COMMISSION

Leo O. Colbert to be a member of the Mississippi River Commission.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, MAY 18, 1933

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

Rev. Charles A. Hall, Main Street Baptist Church, Luray, Va., offered the following prayer:

We thank Thee, our Heavenly Father, for the beauty of this wonderful day that is ours. We thank Thee for this Nation that Thou hast given unto us and preserved unto this day. We thank Thee for this Government of ours, for this group of men who are in the hands of God, as we trust, to make laws for the betterment of the peoples of the earth, as well as our Nation. We invoke Thy divine favor upon each and all, and in their deliberations may they be led of Thy divine Spirit, that their hearts may be touched with the great heart of God, and may pulsate the very will of God with reference to the people to whom they are responsible. Bless the President of the United States and all who are in authority. Hold the hand of the Speaker of this House and guide and guard every thought and every deed here. Continue Thy blessings upon this great Nation of ours and the people of all the world. We ask it in the name and for the sake of Jesus Christ, our adorable Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution:

Senate Resolution 81

May 15 (calendar day May 17), 1933

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow the announcement of the death of Hon. CHARLES HILLYER BRAND, late a Representative from the State of Georgia.

Resolved, That a committee of two Senators be appointed by the Vice President to join the committee appointed on the part of the House of Representatives to attend the funeral of the deceased Representative.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased Representative the Senate do now take a recess until the conclusion of the session of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment on tomorrow.

The message also announced that in compliance with the foregoing resolution the Vice President had appointed Mr. GEORGE and Mr. RUSSELL a committee on the part of the Senate to join a similar committee on the part of the House to attend the funeral of the deceased Representative.

EXPLANATION OF VOTE

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I wish to state that when the roll was called on yesterday on the Muscle Shoals conference report the Colorado delegation was in conference with the Senators from Colorado on the acute unemployment and relief situation in that State, and were therefore unavoidably absent. If present, they would have voted "yea" on the report.

Mr. CLARKE of New York. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I yield.

Mr. CLARKE of New York. Did that conference have any concern regarding deserving Democrats?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. We are not discriminating out in our State. I will say to the gentleman we are feeding Republicans and all.

BANKING BILL

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency I am directed to ask unanimous consent that that committee may have until midnight tonight to file its report on the bill (H.R. 5661) to provide for the safer and more effective use of the assets of banks, to regulate interbank control, to prevent the undue diversion of funds into speculative operations, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Reserving the right to object, is this bill similar to the Glass bill?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. No. It is a House bill which contains no branch banking and contains no bank-deposit guaranty plan.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. I should like to ask the gentleman why the hurry?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Is the gentleman going to object to the filing of our report?

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. I do not know whether I will or not. If the gentleman can give me some information I think the House is entitled to, it may be that I will not object.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I shall be glad to give the gentleman any information I can.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. I want to know whether the President of the United States is for this bill. A newspaper article states he does not favor its enactment at this time.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Well, the gentleman has the privilege of asking him. I cannot speak for the President of the United States.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. It seems to me the committee should find out. It is my understanding that this session of Congress was called for the purpose of passing legislation recommended by the President to meet the emergency, and I do not think we should be considering bills except those recommended by the President. I see no hurry in making this report. I think we must all admit the President has a man's job on his hands. No one can deny that he has more than demonstrated that he is big enough to deal with it. Now, my thought is—and I am not considering the merits of this legislation—that we should be extremely careful to refrain from doing anything that will upset the President's plans. Why not wait until the President says, I want such legislation? Who can tell but this bill or some other bill that we might pass will embarrass the President? I am supporting his recommendations, and if he says he wants this measure, I will help pass it; but until then let him do the driving. He is making a good job of it.

Solely because I think it most essential that in a matter of this kind we should have some expression from the President before giving our approval to this bill, I object to the request.

INSURANCE LEGISLATION

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, I ask unanimous consent that that committee may have until midnight tonight to file a report on the bill (S. 1094) to provide for the purchase by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation of preferred stock and/or bonds and/or debentures of insurance companies.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH]?

Mr. KELLER. Reserving the right to object, I would like to ask if the banking bill has been printed?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. It has been printed and is available this morning.

Mr. SNELL. Reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman what the last bill referred to covers?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. It is a bill introduced by Mr. STEAGALL in the House. It is not like the Glass bill. It provides for the separation of affiliates from banks.

Mr. SNELL. There are two banking bills, then?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. No. There is one banking bill.

Mr. SNELL. I thought the gentleman just asked unanimous consent to file a report on a banking bill, and now is asking another.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. The last request was with reference to the insurance bill.

Mr. McFADDEN. Reserving the right to object, did I understand the gentleman to say that the question of affiliates was in the insurance bill?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Oh, no. I was discussing the banking bill.

Mr. BLANTON. This Congress before it adjourns must provide for the absolute guarantee of all bank deposits. It being such an important question, I sincerely hope that one objection is not going to prevent the gentleman or his committee from filing a report expeditiously on a proper bank guaranty bill. Will the one objection stop it?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. No.

Mr. BLANTON. It is such an important matter that it should be filed today, and we ought to pass the bill tomorrow.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I want to say that our purpose was this: The House is at leisure now, and we were extremely anxious to have the House consider the bank guaranty bill tomorrow.

Mr. BLANTON. If the gentleman could get his report here today before we adjourn, the bill could be taken up and passed tomorrow?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. That is correct; yes.

Mr. McFADDEN. May I make this remark in connection with what the gentleman from Texas has just said, that there are many important matters in this banking bill other than the guarantee of deposits.

Mr. BLANTON. But there is not anything more important to the American people just now than to have their deposits in banks guaranteed, and they are not going to have any more faith in banks until that is done.

Mr. McFADDEN. While that is being done, I should like to suggest to the gentleman and to the House that we must not permit a lot of things to slip through in this bill which are particularly objectionable.

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, certainly not. We must pass a proper bill to guarantee all bank deposits.

Mr. McFADDEN. There should be plenty of time given to consider this important matter.

Mr. RANKIN. Reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, I should like to ask the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH] how long it would take to prepare his report on the banking bill?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. We were afraid the House would adjourn early today. Of course, if the House should remain in session until 3 or 4 o'clock, we will have the report ready.

Mr. RANKIN. If we should hold the House in session until 5 or 6 o'clock, will that give plenty of time for the gentleman to file his report?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Absolutely.

Mr. RANKIN. I for one will help to hold the House in session until that report can be prepared.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, if the bill H.R. 5661 were brought before the House at this time it would give the Members more time for free discussion of the bill, would it not?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Yes.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. And that is why the gentleman is anxious to have the bill brought up now?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Yes.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. I shall cooperate in holding the House here.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is it the gentleman's intention to bring the bill up tomorrow?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. That is what we would like to do. Of course we do not know whether or not the leadership of the House will cooperate with us in this behalf, but that was the reason for the request.

Mr. PATMAN. And if this request is granted there will be more liberal time to discuss the bill.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. We will try to bring it up tomorrow if we get this permission.

Mr. KELLER. We ought to have time to study this bill if we are expected to discuss it. I have been working on this for a long time. I think I shall work with the committee, but we ought to have an opportunity to study the report before we are expected to consider the bill, for what is the use of getting up here and talking and talking about a matter when we do not know what we are talking about? We ought to have the information before us.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. I objected to the gentleman's first request, and I shall renew that objection. I have no objection to the second request, to report the insurance bill.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. This is the insurance bill.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. To his first request I still object.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is it the intention of the chairman of the committee to bring this insurance bill up before tomorrow?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Not as far as I know. All we were trying to do was to bring up the bank bill tomorrow.

Mr. SNELL. Then it is not expected that the insurance bill will be brought up before tomorrow?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. No.

THIRD DEFICIENCY BILL, FISCAL YEAR 1933

Mr. BUCHANAN presented the conference report on the bill H.R. 5390, the third deficiency bill, for printing under the rule.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that at 12:30 I may address the House for 10 minutes.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, what is going to happen between now and 12:30?

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, I will explain that a lady wishes to see me at the door, and I cannot get back before that time. [Laughter.]

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I understand there is not going to be very much to do today, and that after the preliminaries are disposed of the House will probably stay in session for an hour or more for some discussions. I think the gentleman from Nebraska can get time, even if he does not specify any particular hour, after he has seen the lady.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Tennessee what the program for today is. Then we could tell more about these requests.

Mr. BYRNS. We have nothing on the calendar for today. We will have for consideration tomorrow the conference report on the deficiency bill that was presented today.

I understand the conferees on the securities bill will probably file their report tomorrow, but, of course, it cannot be taken up tomorrow.

Mr. SNELL. Then there will be nothing ready for tomorrow except the conference report.

Mr. BYRNS. I do not know whether the Committee on Rules will have a rule by tomorrow or not upon the Celler resolution, which was referred to yesterday. It is possible one or two rules may come up.

Mr. SNELL. As I understand it, the Rules Committee did not grant them.

Mr. BLANTON. That is a very hopeful sign for Congress.

Mr. BACON. Is the Steagall-Glass banking bill to be brought up under a rule?

Mr. BYRNS. It has not been reported yet.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I have no objection to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I suggest the gentleman go ahead with his speech now.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska asks unanimous consent that at 12:30 he be permitted to address the House for 10 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 30 minutes.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, we have already granted one request to address the House at 12:30.

Mr. BYRNS. What are we going to do between now and 12:30?

Mr. SNELL. We should not now grant another request to address the House for 30 minutes at this time.

Mr. PARSONS. I think we could arrange that the gentleman from Nebraska shall follow me.

Mr. HOWARD. No; I am arriving at 12:30. [Laughter.]

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object—

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, we can turn the clock back.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the gentleman ought not to take advantage of the distinguished gentleman from Nebraska, who has gone to meet his friend at the door. The gentleman should wait until the gentleman from Nebraska gets through. How about following the gentleman from Nebraska?

Mr. PARSONS. What is the House going to do during the next 10 minutes?

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois to now address the House for 30 minutes?

There was no objection.

THE BLIND FINANCIAL CRIME OF THE CENTURIES

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Speaker, on April 6, 1933, I had an opportunity and the pleasure of addressing the House on economy by reducing the rate of interest paid on Government bonds. In that address I advanced the principle heretofore little referred to and little mentioned, namely, that the Government hires money for which it pays a wage the same as it employs labor for which wages are paid.

We have reduced the wages of labor, we have reduced pensions, gratuities and benefits to veterans, and following up the same principle this House should take immediate action to reduce the wages for money, which is the interest on the public debt.

My purpose today, however, is to speak on the financial policy followed by the Federal Government since the adoption of the Constitution, and more especially with reference to the fiscal policy followed by the Government since the World War. This is a dry and uninteresting subject. I do not expect the membership of the House as a whole to be interested. But for those who are interested in the financial stability of the Government and who would like to follow briefly the policy pursued by our Government in its periods of depression and prosperity and in the periods of peace and war I will ask you to be patient and give me your attention for a short time, because I believe I have some information and statistics, part of which will be illustrated, that will interest you.

In my humble judgment, there has never been in the history of this Nation such blind financial negligence as that shown by those in power and authority to shape the financial policy of the Federal Government since March 4, 1921. Contrary to general opinion, profits made by corporations and individuals following the World War and during the era of prosperity from 1922 to 1929 were far greater than the profits made during the World War. For the period beginning January 1, 1916, and ending December 31, 1929, corporations of this country made net profits of approximately $100,000,000,000. If there ever was a time in which the National debt could be retired without burdensome taxation, it was during this period.

We had three Presidents and a Secretary of the Treasury—a man whose span of three-score years and ten, carried him through three major depressions. If there was any business man in America experienced in periods of prosperity and depressions, it was Andrew Mellon. Yet, the policy which he followed, by refusing to retire the national debt during the prosperous years of the Republic, thereby saving more than $1,000,000,000 to the Budget in this economic distress, is gross neglect and little short of economic treason.

Before I finish I hope to give you some facts to ponder, which I trust will be of service in the future when our Government is called upon to discharge its financial obligations. It is true that most of what I recite here today is water over the dam. We cannot retrieve past losses now for the present emergency, but if in the future there comes a time of prosperity, in which my suggestions may be followed for the retirement of national obligations, the years of study and labor I have put into this subject will be wholly justified, and I shall be happy.

In order to give you some idea of comparative expenditures made by the Federal Government in its history I would like to insert a table of the ordinary expenditures divided into two periods.

Ordinary expenditures of the Federal Government from 1791 to 1932, inclusive

1791 to 1916.....	$26,759,010,661
1917 to 1932.....	82,336,391,914
Total ordinary expenditures.....	109,095,402,575

In the period from 1791 to 1916, or 128 years, our Government spent $26,759,010,661. For the period from 1917 to 1932, or 16 years, our Government spent $82,336,391,914. In other words, in the past 16 years we spent more than three times the amount that we had spent in 126 years prior to 1917. Of course, this contains the amount needed to prosecute the World War. But there were millions of wasteful extravagance in governmental expenditures from 1922 to 1932. Other items of importance is the expenditure for interest on the public debt. I here insert a table showing the interest payments by war periods from 1790 to April 19, 1933.

Amount of interest paid on the public debt of the United States from 1790 to April 19, 1933, inclusive

1790 to 1812.....	$73,064,133
1813 to 1847.....	93,143,759
1848 to 1860.....	37,501,900
1861 to 1897.....	2,668,092,667
1898 to 1916.....	505,744,273
Total, 1790 to 1916, inclusive.....	3,377,546,732
1917 to 1933.....	12,137,114,571
Total.....	15,514,661,303

Please note the interest on the public debt beginning with the foundation of the Republic until 1917 was $3,377,546,732, compared with more than $12,000,000,000 of interest paid since the beginning of the World War period. In other words, approximately four fifths of the total amount of interest paid on the national debt was paid to bondholders during the past 16 years. This amount of interest is almost identically equal to the total amount of European debts owed this Government at the time of settlement in 1923. It amounts to almost one half of the outstanding indebtedness of the Federal Government at the highest peak after the close of the World War.

I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, to revise and extend my remarks and to include such tables as I may use to illustrate the subject.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. PARSONS. For every dollar that the Federal Government has spent in ordinary operating expenses in 142 years of its history we have paid 15 cents in interest; in other words, more than one seventh of every dollar that the Federal Government has spent in its entire history has been for interest on the public debt.

In order to get a birdseye view of the revenue, expenditures, and public debt of the Federal Government since 1790 I have prepared a rough graph illustrating the rise and fall of these three items.

Beginning in 1790 we started out with revenues and the expenditures about the same, but after a few years the revenues exceeded the expenditures and the public debt fell. Each one of these rises and falls in the public debt is described by certain events in our history, but note that after the War of 1812 the expenditures were three times what they were before the war. Going over to the Mexican War, we find the expenses following that war were five times more than they were after the Revolution [indicating]. After the Civil War, we find the expenses never got below $250,000,000 annually. There was a gradual increase from that period on up the line to the World War, when we had our greatest period of revenue production, greatest expenditure, and greatest public debt, ranging up to $27,000,000,000.

These lines were drawn from the record without any view to including the war periods or the depression periods, but after they were placed on the map it was very easy, indeed, to pick out these various periods and to see where the extra expense, the extra revenues, and the extra debt came in.

It is very interesting to note here how in 1837 the revenues fell in the depression. The same thing is true throughout every one of our depressions that have followed in a few years after each war.

It is also very interesting to note that following each war the expenditures of the Federal Government stayed at from 4 to 7 times what they were before that war.

For instance, in 1915 the expenditures were about $700,000,000. We have never been able to get back to less than four billion since the World War, and a large portion of this has gone into interest. I want to point these things out here, as it has a particular bearing on what I am going to say later as to our income.

Now, let us get back to the consideration of the financial policy followed during and since the World War. Soon after the declaration of war, on April 6, 1917, Congress, by virtue of power vested in it, sought to levy and collect taxes for the purpose of prosecuting the war. It began the study of proper rates of taxation in accordance with the then recently adopted income-tax law ratified by the States in 1915. Congress realized the enormous expense of billions of dollars which the war would entail, and, of course, contemplated a much longer period of hostilities than actually occurred. That measure came to be known as "the revenue bill of 1918", and was committed to the Committee of the Whole House on September 3, 1918, and later was passed on September 20, 1918, less than 2 months before the armistice. The Senate, however, did not complete consideration of this measure until in the following February, and, due to cessation of hostilities, made many changes in the rates that would have been applied had not the armistice been signed on November 11. Mr. Kitchin, then Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, in submitting report to accompany this bill, said:

Your committee has determined the proportion of the cost of the war that should be financed by taxation and by bonds, not upon the basis of previous experience, for there is no analogy in history, but upon a careful consideration of the effect of the fiscal policy upon the morale of the people, upon the inflation of prices, upon production, and with reference to the relative ability of the people to pay taxes now and after the war.

Note the last words, "ability of the people to pay taxes now and after the war." This term will be emphasized later. Quoting further from Mr. Kitchin's report:

On June 5 the Secretary of the Treasury advised your committee that the probable expenditures for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, would be about $24,000,000,000, and recommended that one third of this amount be raised in taxes, or $8,000,000,000.

A member of the committee who afterward was a distinguished Speaker of this House, the late Nicholas Longworth, had the following to say in closing the debate just before the vote was taken on the afternoon of September 20, 1918:

We have succeeded with a little more than 24 hours of actual debate, and with no amendment of major importance, in passing the mightiest taxation measure ever enacted by any people of the world. We are raising by this bill eight times the amount that it ever cost this Nation to live before in any one year. We are providing in this bill a sum of money equivalent to nearly one third of the amount that it has cost this Nation to live from the first inauguration of George Washington down to the second inauguration of Woodrow Wilson, and we have done it, in my belief, without inflicting a burden upon wealth under which it cannot at least stagger and without demanding from American industry that energy and initiative which it must necessarily possess if our war program is to be prosecuted to the limit. * * * In a few minutes there will be flashed around the world the announcement that the representatives of the American people have unanimously passed a bill carrying $8,000,000,000 in taxes to prosecute the war.

The bill was passed that same afternoon with 349 yeas. Not one single vote was registered against it. It went to the Senate and, after weeks of discussion, along with other important matters then before the Senate, final action was not taken until the following February, which necessitated some changes in reductions of rates and elimination of some of the objectionable features in special excise taxes. I want you to keep in mind the words of Mr. Kitchin and Mr. Longworth. Mr. Kitchin said that Congress levied a tax bill to raise revenue to prosecute the war and pay the cost after the war. Mr. Longworth said that it was the greatest tax bill ever levied, but was done, in his belief, without inflicting a burden upon wealth and without taking from American industry its energy and initiative. If the rates levied in the revenue bill of 1918 had remained on the statute books until June 1, 1926, every dollar of the national debt would have been wiped out. Such a program would have been strictly in keeping with the policy enunciated by Mr. Kitchen and would have resulted in discharging our national obligations without inflicting a burden upon wealth, as expressed on the same occasion by Mr. Longworth. Our interest charge of more than $700,000,000 annually would have at the present time been eliminated from the Budget.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PARSONS. For a brief question.

Mr. PATMAN. Does the gentleman mean to say that if that law had continued on the statute books without the passing of the Mellon tax bills reducing the war-time rates, the entire national debt, or at least the cost of the war, would have been paid by January 1, 1927?

Mr. PARSONS. Absolutely.

Mr. PATMAN. And then those who profited most by reason of the country's misery and misfortune during the war would have paid for the cost of the war.

Mr. PARSONS. Exactly. It was the fair and the right thing to do.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. And if these rates are again restored, we will go a long way toward accomplishing this thing.

Mr. PARSONS. But in this depression it will not yield the revenue. If the debt had been eliminated, of course, the charge now on the Budget of $700,000,000 a year for interest, which will be $900,000,000 when the new bond issue goes out, plus the $500,000,000 debt retirement, or a total of $1,400,000,000 charge on the Budget, would also be eliminated now.

A tremendous debt which our Government was left with at the close of the war amounted to more than $26,000,000,000. The American Congress and the Secretary of the Treasury, as well as the President of the United States, were duty bound to recommend and levy taxes following the war to retire this national debt in the same proportion in times of peace as they were duty bound to raise the revenue to pay expenses in time of war. The measure which Speaker Longworth called the greatest tax bill ever levied on the American people contained not only numerous special excise taxes but the largest item was the excess profits and surtaxes levied under the title of the income tax. For the year 1918 that bill raised $4,286,486,257 in individual and corporation taxes. It raised a little less than $1,000,000,000 in special excise taxes. Had the same rates been maintained through the following decade these two items alone would have produced the enormous total of $8,620,000,000 for the year 1928, $5,000,000,000 of which could have been applied in retirement of our national debt. It was in effect for the years 1918, 1919, 1920, and 1921. During those 4 years more than $21,000,000,000 was raised in revenue by the Government. Had those same rates been maintained during the years 1922 to 1926, inclusive, our national debt would be entirely eliminated from the picture in this depression. I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD at this point two tables showing the income and war excise taxes, the amount actually collected and the estimated revenues collectible, had the rates for 1918 been retained to the year 1931.

Additional revenue from excise tax 7,025,914,146

Total additional estimated revenue, 1919-31 45,261,603,120

Had these tax rates been maintained, they would have produced $38,000,000,000 more than the Government collected. Add to that the $7,000,000,000 more that we would have collected in excess taxes, and we have a total of $45,000,000,000 which the Federal Government would have obtained by revenue, which would have paid the national debt three times, because it was reduced to $16,000,000,000 in 1930.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PARSONS. Yes.

Mr. McFADDEN. I am reminded in connection with the interesting statement that the gentleman is making that the corporations of the country have now a surplus of $60,000,000,000. Apparently, if they had been taxed as the gentleman suggests, instead of that surplus being $60,000,000,000, it would be reduced to about $12,000,000,000.

Mr. PARSONS. That is true. Between the years 1916, January 1, and December 31, 1929, 376,000 corporations of this country made net profits of $100,000,000,000. That is net profits above all taxes, local, property, income tax, surtax, and excess-profits tax. Twenty-five percent levied upon those profits of 14 years would have entirely eliminated the national debt and reduced our present Budget by $1,250,000,000.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PARSONS. Yes.

Mr. McFARLANE. These 376,000 corporations that realized these enormous profits have done so very largely by special grants and privileges in the way of patents, and so forth, from our Government, have they not?

Mr. PARSONS. Some of them have, and of course, they got the benefit of the tax reduction.

Mr. McFARLANE. If the gentleman has a list of these corporations, I wish he would insert it in his remarks.

Mr. PARSONS. I am very sorry to say that I do not have them here, but they can be found in the hearings before the Ways and Means Committee on the tax reduction bill of 1921.

Unfortunately a great wave for tax reduction swept the country and in the Presidential campaign of 1920 the Republican Party was restored to power in all branches of the Government with a tremendous landslide, on a slogan of reducing taxes and restoring the country to normalcy. Immediately upon its inauguration into office, wealthy and powerful lobbyists swarmed the Capitol, for the purpose of forcing tremendous tax reductions, not upon the rank and file of the American people but reducing the surtax and excess-profits tax on thriving corporations and wealthy individuals. From 1921 to 1929 five major tax reductions were made on the wealthiest classes of the Nation to the extent of $35,000,000,000, while local and State taxes in the various States and subdivisions levied on farm lands and tangible property, increased 300 percent. The estimates show that had the 1918 rates been maintained on both income and excise taxes, the Federal Government would have collected the stupendous sum of $45,000,000,000 more than it actually collected—enough to have retired the national debt twice and at the same time built up a reserve of $5,000,000,000 to carry us through the depression. I repeat that the financial policy followed by Secretary Mellon, recommended by the three Presidents who served under him and the Congress who did their bidding, perpetrated the most disgraceful financial crime on the American people in all history.

Although some reduction was made by the Senate after the signing of the armistice in the tax bill of 1918, the real first large reduction came in the revenue bill of 1921, which was reported by Mr. Fordney on August 16 from the Committee on Ways and Means. In submitting that report he said:

The cost of the war, the extent of its destruction, and the financial loss it occasioned is felt not during the period of the combat but after the cessation of hostilities.

Note his words that the cost of the war is felt not only during the period of combat but after the cessation of hostilities. While he championed the cause of reduction, nevertheless, he stated what every man knows, that the cost of any war, leaving a great burden of debt, should be paid by substantially the same tax rates in effect during hostilities. Especially is that true when long periods of prosperity follow war, as was the case following the World War. In that same report, although it was 3 years after the signing of the armistice, the Budget demanded more than $4,000,000,000 to operate the Federal Government. This was substantially seven times the cost of Government for any year in the Nation's history prior to the World War except 2 years of the Civil War.

The Republican majority in the House after the tremendous landslide in 1920 sought to lift from profiteering corporations and individuals $560,000,000 in excess profit and surtaxes in the revenue bill of 1921. The same man who was chairman of the Ways and Means Committee in 1918, reporting the war-time tax bill, was the ranking Democratic member of the committee in 1921, that patron saint of Democracy, Claude Kitchin, of North Carolina. He wrote the minority report to the Revenue Act of 1921. A report that will go down in history as one of the sacred documents of Congress. To that report Ways and Means Committee members in the future will turn to read of the iniquitous policy enforced upon the people by the Republican administration. They will turn to read this report because of the prophecy it contains and of the fulfillment of that prophecy which subsequent history has vindicated. That report will serve as a guide for the American Congress in future generations, when heavy debts hang over our heads and we are looking for means with which to pay them.

It also blazes the path which future Congresses may tread when, following the wars of the future, men eagerly seek for light as to the proper course to follow in ways and means of taxation. Permit me to quote from the report of Mr. Kitchin's:

An analysis of the statistics contained in the detailed report as to corporate incomes and excess-profits taxes, * * * shows that 180 corporations making annually from $5,000,000 up to $300,000,000 and over (the Steel Corporation made over $500,000,000 net profits in 1918), had a net income of $2,554,000,000 in 1918, and while paying only $300,000,000 income tax, they paid $848,000,000 excess-profits taxes. One thousand and twenty-six corporations with a net income of $4,255,000,000, more than one half of the total corporate income of all the 317,559 corporations, while paying only $533,000,000 income tax, paid $1,422,000,000 of excess-profits tax; that is, paid over one half, or nearly two thirds, of the entire excess-profits tax of all the corporations making reports. At a glance one will see that the proposed proposition is one to relieve a few hundred of the biggest profiteering corporations in the United States, and not, as Secretary Mellon says, to unclog business.

An analysis of the returns as detailed in the reports of the Internal Revenue Commissioner from January 1, 1916, to January 1, 1921, shows that corporations in the United States made net profits of $47,000,000,000. After deducting all of the taxes they paid, including income, excess-profits tax, and other war taxes, they have a clear profit left of $38,000,000,000, * * * four fifths of which was made by less than 10,000 corporations, and more than one half of which was made by 1,026 of the big profiteering corporations.

Continuing Mr. Kitchin said:

Let every Democrat and Republican bear in mind always that these same corporations were filling their coffers with these fabulous billions for the profits of their stockholders while our brave boys were spilling their blood in France for the protection and defense of their country. Remember, too, that not a large stockholder, officer, or director of one of these rapacious corporations ever faced a German gun, braved a danger, took a risk, made a sacrifice, or endured any suffering during the entire war, but stayed at home in safety, 3,000 miles from the danger line, and made of the war and its resulting stress on their Government and its people an opportunity to plunder and profiteer upon both to the extent of these inconceivable billions.

Although a sick man and not able to be with his committee on the floor when the bill came before the House, Mr. Kitchin, in prophetic words of warning, sounded the battle cry of progressive principles of taxation, just a few months before his death, which may go down in history as the last noble utterance of one of America's great parliamentary leaders, when he said—mark these words, gentlemen; they are as true today as when written; they will be true when prosperity blooms again; and they are eternal in principle to the future generations to come in blazing a definite and specific financial policy to be followed after wars. These are Mr. Kitchin's words:

What an impregnable position would it be, and what an appeal it would make to the sense of right and justice and to the sense of the people, for the Democrats to take the position that not a dollar of taxes should be reduced on these profiteering corporations and on the millionaires and multimillionaires that reaped the harvest of wealth during the war as long as a single dollar of indebtedness remains or so long as there is a disabled or wounded soldier or a widow or an orphan of a dead soldier or a single veteran in need.

Why in the name of right and justice should these big profiteering corporations and millionaires and multimillionaires who filled their rapacious mouths with millions of blood money be relieved of taxation while we not only keep but increase the taxation of hundreds of thousands of weak corporations and keep the war-income taxes on millions of our fellow citizens who, and whose sons, went to the trenches in defense and protection not only of our country but in defense of the profiteers and wealth of these same corporations and millionaires?

The closing words of that minority report are as applicable to our present situation today as they were in 1921. Speaking of the policy the Democratic minority should follow, he said:

The people of the party will take hold, that Andrew Jackson's dream of an ideal government will be a reality in this country.

A government protecting all the weak as well as the strong, granting favors to none, but dispensing its blessings like the dews of heaven, unseen and unfelt save in the freshness and the beauty which they contribute to produce.

One of the members of the minority who was present when the bill came before the House was the illustrious son of Texas, later a distinguished Speaker of this House, and now Vice President of the United States, John N. Garner. In discussing the bill in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, Mr. Garner said, and his words were apparently directed, according to the RECORD, to his worthy antagonist, the late Speaker Longworth:

You know, as the country knows, that your Ways and Means Committee cannot submit this bill with information as to its contents, purposes, and effects to your conferences and get their support for the bill. . . . I shall make a motion to recommit this bill. I am going to offer a bill to recommit, striking out surtaxes alone. You are going to have an opportunity to vote in this House as to whether you would like this bill better with the surtaxes stricken out or with them left in as in the present law.

That was the surtax rates of 1918 which were then still in effect. It is a puzzle today and will perhaps remain so as to why Mr. Garner did not offer a motion so as to retain not only the surtax but the excess-profits tax as well. Is it possible that the small but wealthy and powerful minority group of lobbyists who swarmed Washington whispered in not only the ears of the party in power but into the ears of the minority party as well? That question will perhaps never be answered satisfactorily to the people. There was considerable discussion, and on the motion to recommit practically the solid Democratic delegation voted "aye", together with the progressive Republicans, and the solid "Old Guard" Republican delegation voted "nay."

One Member of that Congress who discussed the proposition at the time is still a colleague among us. I admire and agree with the position he took on this measure, and while he was bound by the Republican caucus to support the iniquitous reduction in surtaxes and excess-profits tax, nevertheless his heart and principles were right. He said, and I am quoting from the language of Mr. FREAR, of Wisconsin:

I could not move to recommit if I so desired; but the important part of this bill, to my mind, is involved in the excess-profits tax; and that tax, stricken from the bill in committee, in my judgment, ought to have been included in this motion to recommit. . . . We ought to have had the whole $540,000,000 involved in the excess-profits tax and surtax repeal included in any motion to recommit.

But strong opposition to this measure melted away and the first giant tax reduction, constituting the first great miscarriage of justice after the war, was adopted by a vote of 274 to 125, and thus was initiated and written into the policy of the Republican administration a defalcation of trust to the taxpayers of the Nation and to the 4,000,000 men who mobilized to preserve posterity and make the world safe for democracy. Ever since that eventful and black Saturday of August 20, 1921, special benefits and privileges in the way of tax reduction, tariff rates, refunds, and so forth, have been poured out upon the gigantic corporations and wealthy individuals. Through interlocking directorates they manipulated the commercial, financial, and industrial activities of the Nation. Credit, withdrawn from agriculture, was placed to their use. Tax reductions and refunds on continued increasing profits piled up large surpluses, resulting in an era of speculation, overbuilding, and flotation of a securities racket which is basically and directly responsible for our economic ills.

I shall not have time to discuss in detail subsequent tax reductions. In all there were five major operations, which is shown in the accompanying tables together with the raise in rates included in the tax bill of 1932 for both corporations and individuals.

The new revenue bill contained a provision for the repeal of the excess-profits tax on corporations and an increase in the normal tax to 12 1/2 percent.

The effect of this law on those corporations whose invested capital is from $5,000 to $10,000,000, and who are earning from 5 percent to 50 percent thereon, is shown in the above exhibit.

The figures between the heavy black lines is the amount by which their taxes will be increased; the figures to the right and below the second black line is the amount by which their taxes will be reduced.

You will remember reading in the press at the time of how Mr. Mellon propagandized the country that he was reducing taxes upon so many millions then paying taxes, ranging from $12 up to $60, or from $17 up to $180, but during the time they were getting $60 and $180 relief the fellow with a million income was getting $500,000 relief.

But this is the point I want to get you to see: When was the time to retire the debt? When was the time to get revenue? When was the time to get rid of our interest charge? When business was good and we were having a $50,000,000,000 turnover in the country each year in corporate and individual profits. They had the money then to roll into the Treasury.

This is all water over the dam, it is true. You wonder why I am mentioning it. I am mentioning it to show you the policy the Federal Government has followed in all the years of its history. After every war debts have been left on the books, retiring just a small portion each year, making no effort to wipe out the debt. Although ten billion was paid from 1921 to 1930, reducing the interest charge 150 or 200 million dollars, it would have been such an easy matter to have retired the entire debt and built up a reserve of $5,000,000,000 that would have carried us through this depression without having to levy a single dime additional in taxes or float a single bond. [Applause.]

Now, we have passed a farm relief bill.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, before the gentleman leaves this subject, will he yield for a question?

Mr. PARSONS. I yield.

Mr. KELLER. Is it not also true that every time taxes were reduced we gave back the exact amount by which we reduced the taxes for the coming year, just as the gentleman stated once before?

Mr. PARSONS. The fact is, I may say, that Congress in passing these tax reductions detoured the money away from the Treasury of the United States back into the hands of the corporate interests, which took that money and speculated with it in the market.

Mr. Mellon's plea was that if you retired this debt too fast it would put out a lot of surplus money into the hands of investors who would become speculatively minded, play the stock market, and we would have an orgy of wild spending that would finally wreck the country; and that, therefore, we should only retire this debt by degrees, little by little.

The actual fact is that by detouring this money from the Public Treasury back into the hands of these people who largely held the bonds, the surplus money from the profits they had made was invested in securities on the stock market, broke the country, lost themselves, and yet the national debt remains unpaid.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PARSONS. I yield.

Mr. DONDERO. Has the gentleman prepared anything to show how we might reduce the amount of the annual interest charge of something like three quarters of a billion dollars a year?

Mr. PARSONS. On April 15, the fourth Liberty Loan bonds were callable. They bear interest at the rate of 4½ percent, which means $263,000,000 annually. We passed up the call, and I am informed by the Commissioner that we can not call them again until April 15, 1934, although I think he is mistaken about that. I think they are callable on any interest payment date.

We should have exercised our option in calling these bonds and refloated them.

Mr. DONDERO. At a lower rate of interest?

Mr. PARSONS. Yes. I understand, however, that the President felt, or at least his advisers felt, that they should not be molested, they should not be called as it might disturb the money market and affect the bonds he anticipates floating for the public-works program.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PARSONS. I yield.

Mr. McFADDEN. In the gentleman's very interesting study, has he seen fit to ascertain for the same period the amount of refunds to the large taxpayers? Can he give us any light on this subject?

Mr. PARSONS. I am glad the gentleman mentioned that. All of us, I think, have had some preconceived ideas about these tax refunds. I am about to change my mind as to some of the reasons for these refunds being so large.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 10 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. PARSONS. Here is what happened about tax refunds: The law permitted the taxpayer to file a protest if he felt he was paying more taxes than he should. Those taxes, when once paid into the Treasury and afterward refunded, drew interest at the rate of 6 percent from the time they were paid until the time the refund was made to the taxpayer. It got to be the finest racket in the world, while we were continuing to reduce these tax rates.

Greater profits were made after the war than during the war. Greater profits were made in 1928 and 1929 by 35 percent than were made during any year of the World War. Out of surpluses, accumulating stock dividends were paid in addition to the regular dividends, and it was mighty nice for a corporation owing a tax of $10,000,000 to fix their return for $15,000,000, pay $5,000,000 more than they should, and then file a protest to have it returned by the Government. It meant, in reality, the investing of $5,000,000 at 6 percent, which was more than they could make from any other investment in the country.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PARSONS. I yield.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Returning to the gentleman's idea of calling the bonds, reducing the interest, and lowering our annual contribution toward the sinking fund to retire the national debt, has the gentleman given any consideration to the so-called "proviso" in the Sinking Fund Act carried in the Victory Liberty Loan Act which requires Congress to appropriate annually an amount equal to the interest upon the bonds that have been canceled by the Government since the issue was floated? In other words, the law provides that we must appropriate the interest that would have been paid on the bonds that already have been canceled, the same as though they were not canceled, which money is applied to the sinking fund, with the result that it jumps up annually until now it is over $200,000,000 a year.

I introduced a bill to suspend this temporarily, but both Secretaries of the Treasury under the last administration, Mr. Mellon and Mr. Mills, vigorously opposed the enactment of such legislation. However, it would have saved us from appropriating an additional $200,000,000 for the sinking fund. In times such as this $200,000,000 is rather a desirable sum, even to the Government.

Mr. PARSONS. May I say to the gentleman that is a permanent appropriation.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. That is true. While not mentioned, nevertheless it is automatically appropriated annually. The sinking fund is to absorb the bonds. The amount of interest that would have been paid on the bonds that have been canceled by reason of retirement through the operation of the fund must be placed in the Treasury to the credit of the sinking fund annually by Congress. It accelerates the sinking fund. That is what I am getting at. It is the second proviso of the act. It is increasing every year. Why not suspend this provision until conditions are improved?

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PARSONS. I yield.

Mr. PATMAN. Is it not a fact that after the taxes had been paid and no protest had been entered by the taxpayer, laws were passed which permitted the taxpayer to go back several years and get refunds of taxes, although he made no protest at the time he paid the tax legally?

Mr. PARSONS. The gentleman is correct; and they went back and filed their protests and applications for refunds back to the beginning of the war when the high rates of 1918 were in effect.

Mr. McFADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PARSONS. I yield.

Mr. McFADDEN. Referring to what the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] has just said, it is commonly bantered around that this evasion of taxes or the making of refunds is netting the racketeers, of which there is a clique here, in the neighborhood of $50,000,000 a year. I recall one specific instance where an employee of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, who was working on the statements of one of the large taxpayers, left the employ of the income-tax office and went into private practice before the Bureau of Internal Revenue and secured not only a confirmation of $6,000,000 that looked like a refund but he got an additional refund which amounted to something over $50,000,000. Now, these practices are proceeding today and I should like to know what the administration is going to do toward a correction of these well-known frauds. [Applause.]

Mr. O'CONNOR. Will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. When the gentleman says that these practices are continuing today, he knows that the same individuals who have been doing this for years in this Department are there now.

Mr. McFADDEN. That is perfectly true.

Mr. O'CONNOR. So they are not new appointees who are continuing such practices.

Mr. McFADDEN. I would suggest to the gentleman that his administration is in power and that this ring of racketeers should be eliminated from this bureau.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Do not worry—they will be.

Mr. McFADDEN. And I may also suggest for the gentleman's information that there are several of these large taxpayers who have evaded taxation and the Department's attention has been called to them by me, and they should not hesitate but should prosecute without further delay.

Mr. O'CONNOR. They are doing that in New York City right today—the jury is sitting and listening to the testimony.

Mr. McFADDEN. And if the gentleman will yield further, I am willing to suggest specific cases, in addition to those which I have already called to the attention of the Attorney General and the administration. I refer now to the income-tax accounts for the years 1927, 1928, 1929, and 1930 of H. L. Doherty, of Cities Service fame, and I refer to the tax evasions of the partners of J. P. Morgan & Co. in their promotions during the year 1929, and these evasions, with particular attention to Frozen Foods Corporation, should be investigated in connection with a number of their other promotions.

Mr. PARSONS. I may say to the gentleman that from press reports issued by the Attorney General, I think that matter is being looked after and the gentleman from Pennsylvania has rendered very great service to this House and to the country in calling these irregularities to the attention of the Attorney General.

Mr. DONDERO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PARSONS. I yield.

Mr. DONDERO. Might it not be for the benefit of the Nation if that law which has such defects in it, were modified or changed or altered by the House or by the Congress of the United States in order to see to it that this kind of thing is not repeated.

Mr. PARSONS. We modified it at the last session of Congress to the extent that we reduced the interest rate from 6 percent to 4 percent, but that is still a very good rate of investment.

Mr. McFADDEN. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. PARSONS. I yield.

Mr. McFADDEN. I should like to call the gentleman's attention, as well as the attention of the Income Tax Division of the Department of the Treasury, to the fact that section 220 of the taxing laws, which is the section which deals with the taxation of private trusts should also be looked into and enforced. An examination of these big trusts, created by big taxpayers of the type of Mellon, into which they pour their ill-gotten gains to avoid their lawful taxes, should be made and the taxes that are due the United States should be collected. [Applause.]

Mr. PARSONS. The gentleman is right.

Mr. LOZIER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PARSONS. If I may get more time, I shall be pleased to yield.

Mr. LOZIER. Another favorite indoor sport and species of racketeering was when the estates in the United States a few years ago came to Congress and got a retroactive provision in a tax bill which refunded to them $80,000,000.

Mr. PARSONS. These were all retroactive payments, every one of them, detouring the money from the Treasury back to the taxpayer, although they had established their prices on products and had collected the tax from the people, yet the tax was returned back to the taxpayer and not to the people.

Mr. BEAM. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PARSONS. Yes.

Mr. BEAM. The gentleman is making a very interesting and illuminating statement, and I should like to ask him whether or not he has made a survey of the amount of tax-exempt bonds issued by the Government and what proportion they bear to the interest-bearing obligations which the Government has issued.

Mr. PARSONS. The best check I could get on tax-exempt bonds a year and a half ago was that they amounted to approximately $58,000,000,000. Some say the amount is eighty-odd billion dollars, but the best check I could get was that they amounted to $58,000,000,000. This includes Federal, State, municipal, and various political subdivisions, and, of course, this system is keeping quite a lot of revenue away from the various local taxing bodies, as well as the Public Treasury.

Let us see for a moment what has resulted from our failure to retire the national debt during the years of national prosperity.

First, we have already spent $6,000,000,000 additional interest from 1926, when we could have retired the debt, down to the present time.

That interest amounts to more than $700,000,000 annually.

(The time of Mr. PARSONS having again expired, by unanimous consent he was given 10 minutes more.)

Mr. PARSONS. If we include Treasury refunding operations, it creates one and a quarter billions of our present Budget. It has prevented the payment of the soldiers' bonus. It has resulted in tax reduction in years of prosperity when the people were best able to pay, and made necessary the levying of higher taxes in times of depression when people were least able to pay. It is responsible for a $5,000,000,000 deficit in the last 2 years. It makes necessary a reduction in the Budget of approximately $1,000,000,000 by reducing salaries of employees and elimination of veterans' benefits at the very time their buying power is most needed. It prevents inauguration of a large scale of public improvements which would employ labor. It stands in the way to a large extent of European debt settlement. The national debt hangs like a dark cloud over the Nation. Those individuals and corporate interests who sought tax reductions are now paying the price of their folly by being burdened with increased taxation at a time they are least able to pay it. I was about to say that the failure to retire the debt is essentially and fundamentally the cause of our depression.

Mr. PATMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PARSONS. I yield.

Mr. PATMAN. Is it not true that that can be done by the issuance of new money? Under the present law the average requirement is 10-percent money back of 100-percent credit. Would not it be safer to require a 33 1/3-percent reserve of the banks and pay the national debt in new money than to have the present system, which does not permit a sufficient money reserve and requires an annual interest payment of $725,000,000 by the Government?

Mr. PARSONS. The gentleman belongs to one school of thought that comes to what I think is an excessive conclusion in the issuance of currency. I am sorry to say that I cannot go that far with the gentleman. I doubt if you could satisfy the financial, commercial, and business interests of the country that such would be a sound financial policy.

We passed the farm relief bill, providing for an issue of $3,000,000,000 in currency, devaluation of gold, and acceptance of silver from Europe on her debts, which may provide for additional currency.

Of the money to be provided for the public-works program, coming up to us this week or next, we cannot spend more than a billion dollars the first year, and it seems to me, instead of issuing bonds, we should take advantage of the inflation proposition granted in the relief bill to issue currency, instead of floating bonds entailing a further interest charge in our Budget for retirement in the future. [Applause.] If inflation is ever to be used, there is no better use for it than that, except it be to pay the soldiers' bonus; and if we are not going to use it, why have it enacted into law in the first place? Ample provisions should be made, beginning 5 years from now, for the retirement of this currency, or in 10 years, whatever is the best thought of those in charge of the Treasury at this time, whereby we could make the appropriations in the future to retire so many hundred million dollars a year, after we get the golden stream of revenue rolling back into the Treasury of the United States. The point I am trying to get you to see is that when we do have a return of prosperity, we should restore the excess-profits rates, and we would then make this stream of gold roll back into the Treasury, retire the debt, and build up a reserve for the future to carry us through the rainy day which must inevitably come.

Answer one question and it will decide the whole proposition. Is it fundamentally, financially, and morally right to pay a debt? The answer is obvious. Instead of the Government setting the example for the payment of debt and the retirement of obligations for the various subdivisions of Government as well as the individual citizen, it set exactly an opposite example. It will probably take 50 years to overcome this tragic mistake. We are now emerging slowly but definitely from the depression. We fervently hope for a return of prosperity. The firm and decisive leadership of Franklin D. Roosevelt spreads hope and confidence throughout the land. New ambitions are springing up in the hearts of men and women. The world is looking to America for counsel and guidance. If and when a kind Providence gives us occasion for rejoicing in another era of unbounding prosperity, let us not commit another blunder such as we have in the past. We have a reasonably high rate of income tax now. Such rates with the volume of business enjoyed in the last decade will retire our national debt in less than 10 years. The excess-profits tax should be restored as a part of our tax measures as soon as normal business conditions will permit.

We should pay these taxes in the years of prosperity and reduce the tax in the years of depression. But I want to warn this House, I want to warn the Membership now, that just as soon as business conditions are restored in this country and we have what we call prosperity, the lobbyists will swarm around this hall again asking that these rates be reduced back to where they were in 1928, 1929, and 1930. It is that policy that is behind the sales-tax proposition now, to add it to our statutes, in order that when prosperity returns again we can raise or lower the sales tax and reduce most of the income-tax rates. I may not be in these halls to raise a voice in protest when the lobbyists come back to demand tax reduction, but the experience of the last 4 years should be a lesson to the Membership of this and future Congresses. Let us on the threshold of a new era resolve that these depressing experiences shall not have been in vain, that from the ashes of economic collapse there shall rise a new system of planning, and a definite policy of taxation, a policy that will raise revenue to retire our obligations and set up a reserve for future depressions during the prosperous years of the Republic. To follow any other course, which is the course we followed for 150 years, is stupid and ultimately invites disaster. Such a plan will not only be a part of the "new deal" but will insure a "square deal" to industry and every class and occupation and profession of our citizenry. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman be extended for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. PATMAN. I understood the gentleman to endorse the proposal of financing the public-works proposal of $3,000,000,000, with the issuance of new money rather than a tax?

Mr. PARSONS. I do.

Mr. PATMAN. I want it understood that the Ways and Means Committee is meeting this afternoon and will meet all this week to study a plan to finance the public-works program, and all who are interested in that should contact the members of the Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. PARSONS. I think everyone who is interested in using that fund as an inflationary measure should make their wishes known to the Ways and Means Committee. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PARSONS] has again expired.

SESSIONS OF WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE

Mr. RAGON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Ways and Means may sit during the sessions of Congress for the rest of the week.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

THE PUBLIC WORKS AND INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY ACT AND THE ACT PROVIDING FOR UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF

Mr. HAINES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include a statement of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ELLENBOGEN].

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. HAINES]?

There was no objection.

Mr. HAINES. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following article written by Congressman HENRY ELLENBOGEN, of Pennsylvania, relative to unemployment relief:

One of the planks upon which I campaigned and was elected to Congress was the plank advocating unemployment relief in two ways:

1. The creation of employment for millions of men and women through the expenditure by the Federal Government of $5,000,000,000 in the construction of public works; and

2. Direct unemployment relief by the Federal Government through substantial contributions to the States and municipal subdivisions for the relief of the unemployed.

Even before I entertained any thoughts of becoming a candidate for public office I was greatly interested in a public-construction program by the Federal Government as the one measure which would provide employment for large numbers of unemployed and would thus relieve, to a considerable extent, the serious unemployment conditions existing in our country and the terrible misery and suffering of our people.

In January 1932 I journeyed to Washington and presented to President Hoover, at the White House, a program calling for the expenditure by the Federal Government of $5,000,000,000 in the construction of public buildings, highways, roads, tunnels, bridges, railroad crossings, irrigation and power projects, afforestation, and many other construction projects. Unfortunately, President Hoover was determined to oppose a large public construction program by the Federal Government. Had this public construction program been accepted by President Hoover and been inaugurated in 1932, I sincerely believe that we would now be well on the road to recovery.

The program of large expenditures by the Federal Government in public construction, as a relief and unemployment measure, has at last been realized.

Under the inspiring leadership of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Congress has just passed the bill known as the "National Industrial Recovery Act" which provides for the expenditure by the Federal Government of $3,300,000,000 in the construction of needed and useful public improvements.

While I have advocated the expenditure of at least $5,000,000,000 for that purpose, and while, in view of the fact that since 1932 unemployment has greatly increased, the expenditures for public construction should now be well in excess of $5,000,000,000, I believe that the expenditure of $3,300,000,000, as proposed by President Roosevelt and as provided for in the act just passed by Congress, will provide a large measure of relief.

It has been estimated by competent engineers that the carrying out of this construction program will give employment, directly and indirectly, to more than 3,000,000 men and women. Mr. William F. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, estimated that this act might provide employment for 6,000,000 men and women. At the hearing held on this bill by the Ways and Means Committee of the House Mr. Green testified as follows:

"Labor is thoroughly convinced that if the real purpose of the Industrial Recovery Act is achieved, and all is done which can be done by authority of this legislation, 6,000,000 unemployed people, who otherwise would be forced to remain idle, can be given employment within a reasonable length of time."

In my own calculation I shall accept the more moderate estimate that more than 3,000,000 of unemployed will be given employment by the carrying out of this act.

The execution of this public-construction program and of the other provisions of this act will mean that more than 3,000,000 men and women, some of whom have been unemployed for nearly 4 long and bitter years, will again find positions and thus become self-supporting and self-respecting citizens. It will mean even more. It will mean that 3,000,000 breadwinners will again be able, through the work of their hands or their brains, to earn a decent livelihood for themselves and their wives and children.

If we figure an average family as consisting of four persons, it becomes apparent that the proper execution of this bill will provide a decent livelihood for more than 12,000,000 men, women, and children.

It is certain that the expenditure of such large sums of money for public works will stimulate private industry and will cause the investment of large amounts of private funds. This will again provide employment for thousands, and perhaps millions, of now idle people, and thus the real effect of a public-construction program will be much greater than I have just indicated.

The public works bill provides that the $3,300,000,000 shall be expended for the construction and improvement of public highways, public buildings, for the conservation and development of natural resources, for the development of water power and electrical energy, for construction of river and harbor improvements and flood control, for the construction, under public regulation and control, of proper housing facilities at small rentals for the working people, for the construction, replacement, or improvement of bridges, tunnels, ducts, viaducts, canals, waterways, and markets, devoted to public use, and for other necessary and useful public projects.

The construction of these projects will necessarily create employment not only on these public-works projects, but will provide much-needed employment in the factories and mills where the raw materials to be used will be prepared. Other producers of raw materials, such as the lumber camps and stone quarries, will receive much-needed impetus toward recovery both in employment and production output.

The carrying out of this huge construction program by the administration of President Roosevelt will be of particular benefit to the Pittsburgh district. Our steel mills will manufacture a very large part of the iron and steel, which will be used in the construction of these projects. Pennsylvania will also furnish a large part of the cement and other raw materials which will be used. The execution of this Federal construction program is, therefore, more important to Pennsylvania than to any other State in the Union.

The millions of workers who will be employed on the various construction projects, and in the mines and mills, quarrying and manufacturing the materials for these projects, will spend their wages in the purchase of food, clothing, shoes, and other necessities of life. This will greatly increase the business of grocers, butchers, clothing stores, shoe stores, department stores, etc., and may permanently revive trade and commerce generally. These stores will, in turn, replace their supplies of commodities by purchases from the farmer, the wholesaler, and the manufacturer. This will increase the buying power of the farmer and will force plants to increase their production, which will provide employment for thousands or perhaps millions of further groups of men and women. In this way, there may be a permanent revival of commerce and industry and a return of better times.

In times of depression it becomes unprofitable for private business to proceed at the usual rate of production, because, due to the large unemployment and the materially reduced purchasing power of the people, private business is unable to find a market for its products.

During these periods of depression, public construction is the only sound method of absorbing the unemployed and spreading purchasing power. Indeed, public construction, if properly planned and timed, could prevent the occurrence of periodic cycles of depression and prosperity. During times of prosperity public construction should be fully planned, but execution should be deferred. If signs of a depression appear, these accumulated public-construction projects should at once be executed. This would absorb the workers who have been discharged by private industry, and might immediately check a depression in its first stages. Not only was this not done in 1929 and 1930, but, to the contrary, we find that public construction by all Government units, Federal, State, and local, was much less in the years of 1931 and 1932 than it had been during normal years. In 1932 alone, the amount expended on public construction was one and a half billion dollars less than in 1930.

It is quite clear that the expenditure of $3,300,000,000 on construction will hardly be sufficient to take care of needful projects, deferred by States and municipalities, because of their inability to raise the necessary funds.

The public works program cannot be carried out without the cooperation of the States, counties, and municipalities throughout the Nation. The Federal Government does not have sufficient necessary and useful public improvements to justify an expenditure of more than $3,000,000,000, and there is no intention anywhere to construct buildings or other projects which are not needed. But the States, the counties, and the municipalities have been unable to undertake the construction of public projects which they need in their respective communities, because of the lack of funds. The bulk of the construction provided for in the Public Works Act must, therefore, come from the States, counties, and municipalities. In order to enable the States, the counties, and the municipalities to construct necessary and practical projects at this time, the act provides for financial assistance by the Federal Government in the following forms:

1. By extending direct grants to the States, counties, and municipalities up to 30 percent of the cost of the labor and materials expended in the construction of the projects.
2. By extending loans to States, counties, and municipalities for the construction of such projects in such amounts as shall be approved by the Federal authorities.
3. By combining these two methods of assistance, viz, by giving grants to the local governments up to 30 percent of the cost of labor and material and extending loans for the balance of the necessary expenditures.
4. By divers other methods of aid and assistance in financing, or by actually constructing these projects.

We now come to provisions of the act which will establish a new epoch in the lives of the workingman. These provisions establish a code of cooperation within each industry and lay down a Magna Charta for the protection of our working people. These provisions will benefit not only the employees but also fair employers.

Take, for instance, the clothing industry. About 90 percent of the manufacturers of clothing are willing to pay employees decent wages and to operate their factories on the basis of reasonable working hours. But about 10 percent of the clothing manufacturers insist on gaining a competitive advantage over the fair-minded men in the industry by making their employees work unreasonably long hours and by paying them starvation wages. Thus, this unscrupulous little group has been able to manufacture much more cheaply than the fair-minded employers. This forced the other employers, if they wanted to continue their businesses, to resort to the same practices of long hours and pathetically low wages. In this way a small part of an industry was able to force upon an entire industry sweatshop conditions.

Never has there been such widespread application of the sweatshop as there is today. In these years of depression the difficulty of making an honest profit in business or in industry has led ever-increasing numbers of employers to the introduction of sweatshop methods in their shops and factories. Thousands upon thousands of men have been displaced by women at lower wages, and these women, in turn, have been displaced by children at still lower wages.

It has been estimated that sweatshops in Pennsylvania alone now employ more than 200,000 people. Particularly the employment of children has been increased in astounding numbers. These children work from 50 to 90 hours a week. Boys and girls, 10 and 12 years of age, have been taken from school and forced to labor 10 to 18 hours a day. Workers in Allentown factories receive as little as 57 cents a week. An investigator of the Lehigh County Emergency Board in Pennsylvania has seen pay envelopes bearing these figures for a 6-day week of 9 hours daily: $0.57, $0.94, $1.23, $1.68. Children have been forced to work long hours for as little as 5 cents a day. This is nothing less than peonage. There is only one remedy: The abolition of the sweatshop.

The Pennsylvania State Legislature, under the domination of a corrupt Republican machine, has refused to stamp out the evil of the sweatshop and of child labor. These Republican misrepresentatives have refused to establish laws providing for maximum hours of labor and minimum wages, and to ratify the Child Labor Amendment to the United States Constitution, which would abolish child labor in the entire Nation.

The National Industrial Recovery Act will, I am confident, be so administered that it will banish the sweatshop from all industries. Under this act maximum hours of labor will be established in every industry. The hours of labor will be shortened, so that millions of men and women, now unemployed, will be able to find employment. But the shortening of the hours of labor alone is not sufficient. Therefore, the act provides for the establishment of minimum wages. Under it the workingman will receive, for the shorter hours of labor, adequate wages to guarantee him a fair and decent standard of living. Further, the act guarantees to labor the right to organize in unions and bargain collectively and it outlaws the "yellow dog" contract.

A fair employer will have no reason to complain about this act. It will enforce in all industries uniform conditions of wages and hours of labor. It will enable the fair employer to compete on an equal basis with all other persons engaged in the same industry, and particularly with the unscrupulous employer who before the passage of the act resorted to sweatshops and other unparalleled forms of exploitation of labor. This act will give industry an opportunity for self-organization and self-discipline, and will assure to each industry the cooperation and the full force of the Federal Government in forcing into line unfair and unscrupulous minorities. It is an act designed to lead us out of the depression and bring about industrial recovery. It will provide, I am confident, employment for millions of men and women now unemployed. It will establish a new era in the life of the workingman. It will bring about, through power vested in the President of the United States, the 6-hour day and the 5-day week in most industries.

FEDERAL EMERGENCY RELIEF ACT OF 1933

I want to call your attention to another act passed by Congress during this session, the Federal Emergency Relief Act of 1933.

(For about a year and a half I have advocated the principle of direct relief by the Federal Government for the unemployed. It had early become apparent to me that the cities and counties could no longer assume the major share of the burden of unemployment relief.) The cities and counties of Pennsylvania derive practically all of their revenue from taxes on real estate. These taxes against real estate had already become excessively high and extremely burdensome, and it was evident to every student of the matter that real-estate taxes could not be raised any higher.

(Some of the money for unemployment relief could and should be raised and contributed by the State from taxes imposed by the State.)

The sessions of the Pennsylvania State Legislature in 1932 and 1933 show that it would be difficult, if not impossible, to raise sufficient taxes in Pennsylvania to meet the ever-increasing amounts necessary for unemployment relief.

Recognizing this situation, I proposed that the Federal Government should assume a substantial proportion of the necessary unemployment relief. I submitted this proposal to President Hoover in January 1932, but he rejected it.

Under the leadership of President Roosevelt, Congress has now adopted the principle of making large contributions to the States toward unemployment relief. This act marks a new epoch in our Government. It definitely provides that the Federal Government shall assume its proper share of unemployment relief.

The Act recognizes that it is better to provide employment instead of relief, and permits the use of part of the money for work relief.

This Act, together with the National Industrial Recovery Act, already discussed, are heroic measures on the part of the Federal Government to meet the crisis and the human misery created by the depression.

March 4, 1933, is a date which will never be forgotten in the history of the United States. On that day Franklin D. Roosevelt became President of the United States. He was called to the leadership of our great country by an overwhelming vote of the people at a time of unemployment, distress, and acute suffering. As he stood on the steps of the Capitol delivering his inspiring inaugural address, he was faced with a situation such as this country had never before witnessed. Our people had been suffering for more than 3 long years. The crisis had started in 1929. The number of unemployed had increased week by week, month by month, and year by year. The national income had been reduced from about $84,000,000,000 in 1929 to less than $40,000,000,000 in 1932. Pay rolls fell from an index of 100.5 in 1929 to 81.3 in 1930, to 61.5 in 1931, to 41.6 in 1932, to 35.2 in the first quarter of 1933. The people throughout the United States had lost confidence in the banks. On Saturday, March 4, 1933, practically every bank in the United States had been forced to close its doors and suspend business operations. Our economic system was tottering and a feeling of panic prevailed.

At this point of emergency, in this hour of need, Franklin D. Roosevelt became President. He immediately met the bank crisis in a way commended by all. He proposed and Congress passed legislation for the relief of small home owners, which will be a blessing and indeed a salvation to thousands of home owners. He proposed the act for the construction of huge power and irrigation projects at Muscle Shoals in the Tennessee Valley. The power plants at Muscle Shoals will benefit every person in the United States by establishing a yardstick for measuring the cost of generating and distributing electric power. This will force down the rates for electric power throughout the country. President Roosevelt suggested and Congress enacted the act regulating the sale of securities which will eliminate flagrant abuses by the dealers in stocks and bonds and will save millions of dollars for investors.

There are many other outstanding achievements and great legislative measures which were proposed by President Roosevelt and enacted by Congress in the special session in 1933.

The people of the United States have confidence in President Roosevelt. They believe in him and in his leadership. They love him and are devoted to him.

May a benign Providence give President Roosevelt long life, and may it endow him with wisdom and human understanding in the leadership of our great country. May President Roosevelt lead us out of the depression and into better times.

NATIONAL MARITIME DAY

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution, S.J. Res. 50, a similar House joint resolution being on the calendar.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the Senate joint resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Senate Joint Resolution 50

Whereas on May 22, 1819, the steamship The Savannah set sail from Savannah, Ga., on the first successful transoceanic voyage under steam propulsion, thus making a material contribution to the advancement of ocean transportation: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That May 22 of each year shall hereafter be designated and known as "National Maritime Day", and the President is authorized and requested annually to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe such National Maritime Day by displaying the flag at their homes or other suitable places and Government officials to display the flag on all Government buildings on May 22 of each year.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. TARVER]?

There was no objection.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House joint resolution was laid on the table.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in connection with the Senate joint resolution just passed, and to include therein certain data relative to the first steam voyage across the Atlantic Ocean by the steamer The Savannah.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, this resolution was introduced in the Senate by Senators GEORGE and RUSSELL, of my State, upon the request of the Georgia Bicentennial Commission. There is now being conducted in Georgia a celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the founding of the colony by Gen. James Oglethorpe and his associates, and in connection therewith it has been desired that proper recognition should be given the fact that the first transoceanic voyage under steam propulsion began at Savannah, Ga., on May 22, 1819, having been made by the steamship The Savannah.

Shipping interests of this country, as well as our citizens generally, are anxious that some appropriate tribute be paid annually to the American merchant marine, and it has seemed appropriate both to representatives of the American shipping industry and of the Georgia Bicentennial Commission that the anniversary of the beginning of The Savannah's voyage should be designated as National Maritime Day.

As indicative of the viewpoint of the American merchant marine toward this movement, I quote a portion of a letter written under date of April 25, 1933, by Mr. A. E. MacKinnon, of the American Steamship Owners' Association, 11 Broadway, New York, to Hon. Pleasant A. Stovall, president Georgia Bicentennial Commission:

We propose that with the cooperation of the commission immediate steps be taken to ask the Governor, and through him the President of the United States, to declare May 22, the anniversary of the sailing of the steamship The Savannah, an annual event to be known as "National Maritime Day".

To insure its success we would undertake, without expense to the commission, to enlist the support of the largest shipping interests in the country to get behind this program and by use of the press, the radio, and every other legitimate and dignified channel solicit the moral support of the country to the end that we would arouse the people of the country to the importance of this contribution to the world of science and industry and the material part Georgia played in it.

We are spurred to do this by reason of the knowledge that Canada is planning to celebrate in August the centennial of the sailing of the steamship Royal William, which they claim to be the first steam vessel to have crossed the Atlantic. The claim is not in harmony with the fact. We will enlist the support of the National Council of Shipbuilders, naval architects, Navy League, and like groups to the end that each will contribute the resources of their several organizations to help make this anniversary a memorable one for all time.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, in these critical hours, when leadership of vision and courage is essential to lead the way to brighter days, President Roosevelt is not only the hope of America, but, indeed, he is the hope of the world.

The woe and misery imposed upon countless millions in recent days by the monied interests, represented by the Four Horsemen of modern times, is not less than that pictured by St. John in his vision upon the isle of Patmos as attendant upon the ravages of the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse.

Now that we have a leader who is marshaling the forces of humanity to prevent further ravages by four modern horsemen, representing the gigantic combinations of money whose greed in times of peace is exceeded only in times of war, those mighty interests are determined to hamstring President Roosevelt in his fight to secure a measure of economic justice for the weak and to promote a permanent peace between all nations. Those interests will not readily surrender the control of commerce and industry—yes, of governments as well—which they have long exercised. They will stop at nothing to thwart the efforts of our President. They work cunningly and in secret. Paying handsomely obedient servants, they readily find able men willing to prostitute their talents in an unholy undertaking, and they control most avenues of information and propaganda.

Mr. Speaker, never was a newly installed President of the United States so violently opposed in his efforts to work the welfare of all the people as President Roosevelt is now opposed by the mightiest organization of wealth the world has ever known. Every move made by this new President to lift the country out of the ditch of depression, into which it was pushed by unholy hands, is denounced by the emissaries of that organized group of money-mad men as calculated to destroy that Republic which Franklin Roosevelt seeks to save. That murderous group—and I weigh my words when I say it is a murderous group—exercising the power of the Federal Government through a long term of years, secured enactment of legislation to make that organization as much the money master in America as Napoleon made himself the military master of Europe. And now, seeing this Roosevelt of ours actually trying, and successfully, to secure legislation to take our Government out of control of the long-time money master, the emissaries of that master have launched against Franklin Roosevelt a campaign of propaganda as violent and as scientific as that propaganda spread by England and France to drag the United States into the horrible World War.

While it is true that this Congress in both branches has been voting loyally for every plan advanced by President Roosevelt for the welfare of the country, it seems to me that the time has arrived when the true friends of our new President should begin putting out a little propaganda of their own to unmask those elements and those individuals so compactly organized in effort to discredit President Roosevelt and to impede his efforts for the commonweal.

What is the name of that murderous organization which has driven thousands of American citizens to suicide graves, and in recent years driven millions of others to the dual doors of poverty and despair? It may be best designated as the Morgan-Mellon group of international bankers.

By the might of its power during the past two decades it has wrested from the Congress of the United States the constitutional right to control the financial policies of the Republic. By master cunning and worse it succeeded in gaining absolute control of our Federal Reserve System, and through that control it has enabled one family in that organization to amass property which, if sold on the market at prevailing low prices, would carry to the coffers of that family an amount of money greater than the assessed value of all the land and all the personal property in two of our once most prosperous farm States. President Roosevelt believes that it is not right that this murderous group should longer control the financial policies of the Republic. He believes he has been called by the people of the Nation to right some of the great wrongs perpetrated against humanity, and if this Congress shall continue in loyalty to his program he will give affirmative answer to the call of the people. [Applause.]

I have said that it is high time lovers of the Republic and true friends of President Roosevelt should be speaking and writing in plain words about that mighty murderous group now so industriously endeavoring to stay the steps of President Roosevelt on the pathway upon which he plans to carry the cause of humanity to the goal of success. And for my own part, I feel in duty bound to banish from my vocabulary every soft word when speaking with reference to the four men more responsible than all others for driving both the Republic and the people of the Republic to their present sad state.

A few days ago a distinguished Senator of the Republic grouped the Nation's master enemies, naming four of them as first among their equals in point of infamy. Oddly enough, the first letter in the name of each of those four master public enemies was the same. Next day on the floor of this House our eloquent colleague from Mississippi joined the Senator from Michigan in naming 2 of the 4 of our public enemies as numbers 1 and 2. No student of public affairs will find any difficulty in attempting to name those four public names in order of their hellish atrocity.

The eloquent Mississippian in trying to describe the enemies of the Republic, prayed that in the moment he might wield the brush of a Rembrandt to carry to canvas a true picture of those enemies and their sins against humanity. I now find myself with paucity of knowledge of word architecture to enable me to portray those public enemies properly. For the moment I shall borrow from the world's master architect, Pythagoras, and from Godwin, a later master in word architecture, as RANKIN borrowed from Rembrandt, and try to carry to the country a truthful word picture of the Nation's four master enemies.

Oh, what a quartette they are—Morgan and Mellon, Meyer and Mills—smart rascals and sleek servants, hand in hand in every plot to filch a nation or to foul the golden name of Roosevelt; back to back to spit on truth and honor and defy the law's stern call. It is meet that while they live they should be joined in every work and walk in life, and when they die the scrolls of their deeds be buried side by side, to lie in putrid poison state, too rank for literary jackals, too noxious for emulating worms. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, these four names, Morgan and Mellon, Meyer and Mills, enrolled among the honorable and the true in the galaxy of financiers and statesmen will forever be names the mention of which will bring to the cheek of America the hot blood of humiliation and shame. Hated by millions of their impoverished victims, loathed by lovers of the right throughout the Nation, the business of banking and the profession of statescraft have been blurred by their past infamy and polluted by their present sin. [Applause.]

Is my word picture of those money-mad elements and their representatives overdrawn? I think not. Indeed, it is beyond the ability of mortals to paint them in words to shrivel, parch, and burn commensurate with their just deserts.

What is the signal duty of an American citizen right now?

It seems to me the finger of duty points every citizen to do all within the limits of his or her ability to stand squarely with our President in his efforts to lead the way from the jungles of War and Want to the plains of Peace and Prosperity.

I am hoping—aye, and believing—that every lover of our Republic will play his or her best part to guard and shield President Roosevelt against every malicious attack upon the man or upon his measures for the promotion of peace and prosperity at home and abroad.

DEGREE OF BACHELOR OF SCIENCE FOR GRADUATES OF NAVAL ACADEMY

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 753) to confer the degree of bachelor of science upon graduates of the Naval Academy, with House amendments, insist on the House amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. VINSON]? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. VINSON of Georgia, DREWRY, and BRITTEN.

WEST VIRGINIA

Mr. RAMSAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAMSAY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to discuss a bill I introduced at this session (H.R. 4109) authorizing the State of West Virginia to bring suit against the United States Government. I believe the bill should be amended so that any of the States of the Union, whenever they deem it necessary, may be empowered to institute suits in the Supreme Court of the United States against the United States Government.

A bill similar to this was passed by the United States Senate some 13 or 14 years ago. It was prepared by the late Senator Lodge and Senator Chilton, of my State.

The State of West Virginia rests its claim upon the bill introduced because by an act of the General Assembly of Virginia, passed at a session commencing on the 20th day of October 1783, for the purpose of expediting the establishment of the proposed confederation, authorized her Delegates in Congress—Thomas Jefferson, Samuel Hardy, Arthur Lee, and James Monroe—to convey all her territory known as the Northwestern Territory by deed to the United States of America, which deed was on the 1st day of March 1784, by said Delegates, and pursuant to the act of the Assembly of Virginia dated October 20, 1783, signed and conveyed to the Congress of the United States, ceding all that vast territory west of the Ohio, comprising now the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, and so much of Minnesota as lies east of the Mississippi River—once the property of the old State or Colony of Virginia, of which, up until 1863, what is now West Virginia was a part.

The Supreme Court allotted to West Virginia a part of Virginia's debt, created prior to the Civil War, and, hence, before the State of West Virginia was admitted into the Union. Since West Virginia was, in the debt case, held liable for a proportionate part of the old debt, as recognized in the West Virginia Constitution, it cannot be doubted that it is entitled to a part of the assets of the State of Virginia up to the time of separation.

WEST VIRGINIA'S RIGHT OF CLAIM

West Virginia has never come to the Federal Government on this question as a supplicant. Whatever rights West Virginia has are protected by the written contract, consisting of the deed which was presented to the Continental Congress by Thomas Jefferson. That deed conveyed to the Federal Government the territory aforesaid west of the Ohio River. However, it was not an absolute deed but vested in the Federal authority the right to sell and dispose of that territory and give to purchasers an absolute deed therefor, but the proceeds were required by the terms of the deed of grant to be held in trust for the use and benefit of the Thirteen Original States, or, as expressed in the deed, to those States which have already become part of the Federal Union—that fought and maintained the Revolutionary cause—and to those which should thereafter become members of that Union. The trust was so expressly stated and guarded that it was provided how the interest of each State in the proceeds of those lands should be ascertained, to wit, that each State should take such proportionate part of the whole proceeds as that State's contribution to the Revolutionary cause should bear to the whole proceeds.

For instance, if the Federal Government should sell or dispose of the property for, say, 200 millions and the old original State of Virginia had contributed to the cause 50 millions, then Virginia would have fifty two-hundredths, or one fourth, of the entire proceeds. The same would be true of the other 12 original States.

To show how earnest Jefferson and the other statesmen of Virginia were in this matter and how carefully they guarded their footsteps, it was provided that this fund should be kept in trust for the purpose aforesaid, "and for no other purpose whatsoever." This was a specific trust in which the beneficiaries were named and the interest of each beneficiary stated with the accuracy of a skilled draftsman. The framers of the present Constitution guarded this trust by providing that all contracts, agreements, and engagements of the Constitutional Congress should be kept and performed by the new Government, the United States.

The claim of West Virginia consists of the following facts:

1. It was a part of Virginia at the time the contract or conveyance was made.
2. The Supreme Court has held that West Virginia is liable to pay its part of the debts contracted when it was a part of Virginia; that is, prior to June 1863.
3. That the United States has never accounted for the proceeds of the western lands, and it is known, by record, that it sold, gave away, and otherwise used the vast trust subject that was embraced in the grant of Virginia. Little of the land is now held by the United States.
4. That by reason of article 6, section 1, of the Constitution of the United States it was provided that "all debts contracted and engagements entered into before the adoption of this Constitution shall be as valid against the United States under this Constitution as under the Confederation."
5. That the deed heretofore referred to which conveyed said territory to the United States Congress explicitly provided a trust that was to be carried out by the United States. (That all the lands within the territory so ceded to the United States, and not reserved for or appropriated to any of the before-mentioned purposes, or disposed of in bounties to the officers and soldiers of the American Army, shall be considered as a common fund for the use and benefit of such of the United States as have become or shall become members of the Confederation or Federal alliance of the said States, Virginia inclusive, according to their usual respective proportions in the general charge and expenditure, and shall be faithfully and bona fide disposed of for that purpose, and for no other use or purpose whatsoever.)
6. Instead of carrying out section 6 of proviso of said deed, the Congress of the United States seems to have donated many of these lands and much of the proceeds thereof to purely local purposes not contemplated by the deed of cession, but actually contrary to its terms. And that out of this vast territory Congress seems to have donated to local uses, contrary to the deed, 38,864,189 acres, valued at $2 per acre, the price fixed by Congress when these lands were offered for sale by the act of May 18, 1796, would amount to $77,728,378, and that in addition to this proceeds of the sales of lands amounting to $2,953,654.70 were likewise donated to local uses, making an aggregate of donations contrary to the deed of $80,682,032.70, and that the aforesaid trust has not even yet been entirely administered, but that there remains on hand undisposed of several thousand acres of these lands, and that the aforesaid trust is still in full force and effect.

West Virginia comes now by this bill not to ask for money or any political settlement, but merely asks the right to sue the United States in the Supreme Court and let that Court settle the rights of Virginia and West Virginia, the part which West Virginia should have in the trust subject and the amount that is owned by the Federal Government under the trust agreement. Certainly the Federal Government should not object that its own Court, the highest Court of the land, should settle the rights of the sovereigns involved in this solemn covenant.

There can be no question of the statute of limitations, for obvious reasons that suggest themselves to a lawyer. To begin with, a trustee cannot, after default, claim the protection of the statute of limitations. In the next place there is no statute of limitations as between sovereigns. Neither the State of Virginia could pass a statute of limitations that would stay the hands or affect the rights of the Federal Government, another sovereign; nor could the Federal Government pass any statute of limitation that would limit the rights of the sovereign State of Virginia or West Virginia, either as the substance of the claim or the time of its enforcement.

These principles seem to us to be fundamental, and, therefore it may be said that limitation, as to time, cannot be taken into consideration. But over and above all this, the trust has not been wound up, because the Federal Government still owns a part of these lands, as we recall the record, in the States of Wisconsin, and probably Minnesota, and Michigan. No lawyer would contend that a trustee could interpose the statute of limitation as against an accounting for his default, at least until the trust has been wound up and the trust related to dissolved.

The great feature of the Constitution of the United States is that it treats each State as a sovereign within its own jurisdiction. The Federal Government has only the powers that were granted to it by the Constitution. Beyond these grants of jurisdiction the States are still sovereigns; and certainly it was in the mind of the framers of the Constitution that the peace and good will of the States, in administering what was left of the sovereignty of each, should not cause friction.

Therefore it was put in the Constitution that, in all matters as to which the United States is a party, the Federal courts should have jurisdiction; and there can be no question that it is within the powers granted to the Federal Government to give its courts jurisdiction of a suit between the Federal Government and any one or more of the States. It has never been questioned that a suit between the State of Virginia, or any one of the Thirteen Original States on the one side, and the United States on the other would be cognizable in the Supreme Court.

However, there still remains the proposition that the United States, being a sovereign, cannot be sued without its consent. It has heretofore given its consent to being sued by Indian tribes, corporations, and even private individuals who have certain classes of claims. But in the class of claims that would be embraced by the claim of West Virginia, there is no statute which gives the consent of the Government.

West Virginia, by this bill, merely asks the Congress to give the consent of the Federal Government to a suit, and thus leave it to the Supreme Court to decide whether or not the claim of West Virginia is sound; and second, how much that claim is. This is a peculiarly fitting time for the Congress to take this action for the following reasons.

The judicial power of the United States as fixed by the Constitution extends—to all cases, in law and equity, arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more States; between a State and citizens of another State; between citizens of different States; between citizens of the same State claiming lands under grants of different States; and between a State, or the citizens thereof, and foreign States, citizens, or subjects.

The Constitution further provides that—

In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls, and those in which a State shall be a party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction. In all the other cases before mentioned the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the Congress shall make (art. 3, sec. 2).

By the eleventh amendment these powers were restricted as follows:

The judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by citizens of another State or by citizens or subjects of any foreign State.

It has been held that the United States can sue a State in an original suit brought in the Supreme Court of the United States (136 U.S. 311; 143 U.S. 621).

In the latter case, on page 643, the Court says:

The words in the Constitution, "in all cases . . . in which a State shall be party the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction", necessarily refer to all cases mentioned in the preceding clause in which a State may be made, of right, a party defendant, or in which a State may, of right, be a party plaintiff.

These cases settle beyond all question the constitutional power of the Supreme Court of the United States to determine any suit in which a State may be a plaintiff or defendant, as well as the proposition that the United States can sue a State in the Supreme Court of the United States. The anomalous rule of allowing the United States to sue a State without the reciprocal right of a State to sue the United States rests upon the doctrine that a sovereign cannot be sued without its consent, and that the States gave their consent to have suits brought against them by a sister State, or by the United States, when they came into the Union and ratified the Constitution (143 U.S. 646). But the United States has not given its consent to be made a defendant, and the purpose of the bills before us and of this substitute bill is to grant that consent.

The question presented is whether or not it is right, just, and expedient to grant that consent. In the above-cited case of the United States against Texas the question at issue was the boundary line between Texas and the Territory of Oklahoma. It seems that the whole of Greer County governed by Texas was involved, Texas claiming that the county was within the boundary of that State and the United States claiming that it was within the Territory of Oklahoma. The Supreme Court decided that a proper running of the boundary line put Greer County within the Territory of Oklahoma, and thereupon the claim of Texas was held to be erroneous, and she was deprived of the jurisdiction which she had theretofore exercised over the county. The effect of the judgment was to transfer the land and people of the whole county from the jurisdiction of the State of Texas to the jurisdiction of the Territory of Oklahoma. If it had happened, by a similar mistake of running the boundary line, that Greer County had been erroneously placed under the jurisdiction of the Territory of Oklahoma, the State of Texas would have been helpless, except by an appeal to Congress, to correct the mistake. No reason has been assigned, and, as we think, no reason can be assigned, why, in this kind of a controversy, the State should not have the right to appeal to the judicial power of the United States and to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court for relief. If the sovereign State of Texas should be compelled to release its jurisdiction of a whole county by virtue of a judgment and a decree of the Supreme Court, then it would seem only fair, if the position of the parties were reversed, that the Federal Government should be compelled, by the exercise of the same judicial power, to submit to a full legal investigation and to the decree and judgment which would follow the ascertainment of the facts.

The Senate has very recently passed an act granting to the State of Nevada a large tract of land for the benefit of its school fund. The same kind of grant has been made to other States. Under the terms of the grant to Nevada the State makes certain selections and locations under a plan set forth in the act. After the State shall make the selection and location it is entirely possible that there may arise a conflict due to one construction by an engineer or other subordinate officer of the Interior Department on the one side and a claim of the State on the other. If the State shall get upon the wrong side of any such controversy, the United States can fix the boundary and recover her rights by a suit in the Supreme Court of the United States against the State of Nevada. But if it should so happen that the United States through its officer should claim and occupy any part of the land granted to the State, the latter is left to the arbitrary judgment of the Department of the Interior, right or wrong, and has no recourse to any court.

But supposed rights are claimed by the State, which rights are, in fact, invaded by the execution of the law of Congress. This might make a controversy between the State and the United States. There would be no trouble for the United States to get relief by a suit in the Supreme Court; but the State, however much its rights might be trampled upon by an executive officer, will be relegated to the tedious processes of Congress for relief.

Instances could be multiplied of the need of this reciprocal right of the States to sue the Federal Government. When we recall that the United States has had dealings with States and that contractual relations exist by virtue of acts of Congress and grants of lands, and that controversies have already arisen over boundaries, trust funds, and mutual obligations arising out of these acts and out of actual contracts, it seems that the question whether or not the Federal Government should be compelled to give the States the right to bring suit against it on the grounds of fairness and justice must be answered in the affirmative.

The Federal Government is a sovereign, but so is each of the States. Except so far as they have by the Constitution granted powers to the Federal Government, the States are supreme. Therefore the same reasons which can be urged against compelling the United States to submit to being made a defendant in the Supreme Court could be urged on behalf of each one of the States.

In the case of United States v. Texas (143 U.S. 648), in a dissenting opinion by Chief Justice Fuller and Mr. Justice Lamar the position is taken that the United States cannot sue a State in an original suit in the Supreme Court. This dissenting opinion makes no reference to the case of United States v. North Carolina (136 U.S. 211), wherein the original jurisdiction of the Supreme Court was exercised without question; and the only significance to this dissenting opinion is that as late as 1891 it was seriously denied that the United States could sue a State without the latter's consent.

But for the eleventh amendment the States would have been compelled to submit to suits brought by individuals, because the original grant of judicial power was broad enough to embrace such controversies. Chisholm v. Georgia (2 Dall. 419). This latter decision, holding that a State may be sued in the Supreme Court by a citizen of another State and that judgment may be rendered in default of an appearance, was made in February 1793. As a direct result of this decision, on the 5th of March 1794, a resolution of Congress was passed submitting the eleventh amendment to the States for ratification. It is hardly worth while to consider to what extent the States then recognized the right of the Federal Government to sue them in an original suit in the Supreme Court of the United States, but it is altogether probable that had the right been then asserted the eleventh amendment would have contained a provision to compel the United States to submit to a suit by a State to the same extent that the State could be sued by the Federal Government. It must be borne in mind that nowhere in the Constitution is there an express consent given by the States to a suit brought by the United States. That consent is inferred from section 3, article 2 (143 U.S. 646).

In the last case cited the Supreme Court held that the States, having adopted the Constitution, "agreed" to the grant of judicial power and original jurisdiction in the Supreme Court in all cases "in which a State shall be a party" without excluding those in which the United States may be the opposite party, and that, therefore, the exercise of original jurisdiction in a suit brought by the United States against a State was not infringing upon the sovereignty of the State but was "with the consent of the State sued."

It is too late to argue that by the grant of judicial power the States did not mean to create the anomalous condition that if there were mutual accounts between them and the United States which could not be adjusted out of court the State must wait for the Federal Government to bring a suit before it could file its set-offs. The thought constantly recurs, however, that the decision leaves the relations between the Federal Government and the States in the position that if the United States should sue a State upon an account the State might file a set-off which would more than avail to defeat the claim of the United States, and yet might not have a judgment over for the difference between the claim of the plaintiff and that of the defendant. The above considerations make it clear that there are no constitutional reasons why this bill should not pass. The grant of judicial power extends to "controversies to which the United States shall be a party." The Supreme Court has held that because original jurisdiction is given in those suits "to which a State shall be a party" the United States may sue a State in the Supreme Court.

Justice is denied when one party can sue and the other cannot. It cannot long obtain that the United States can sue a State, denying the reciprocal right to the State, without engendering a feeling of distrust, suspicion, and envy which is not conducive to patriotism and cordiality. The sovereign dignity of the States is as much their pride as in the sovereign dignity of the United States. The judicial construction which has evolved an actual consent of sovereign States to be sued by the Federal Government by an interpretation of article III, section 2, of the Constitution, has clearly created an anomalous and unfair, if not a dangerous, situation. We hear much these days of the rights of States. All admit that insofar as power has not been granted by the Constitution the States are supreme, but the fear is often expressed that gradually the Federal Government is encroaching upon the rights of the States. Is not this one-sided right to invoke the judicial power, in controversies between the Nation and the States, an instance of such an encroachment, as well as a needless denial of justice?

The suggestion is made that this Republic, composed of 48 sovereign States, each with equal dignity and right, and all, outside of the granted powers in the Constitution, real sovereigns, has so construed the grant of judicial power and of jurisdiction to the Supreme Court as to leave the States, in their contractual relations with the Federal Government, but half sovereigns. A national tribunal has been created which has jurisdiction over all suits to which a State may be a party, and yet the States are in the humiliating position of being compelled to submit to a suit brought by the Federal Government without the reciprocal right of compelling the Government to submit to a suit brought by a State in the same kind of a controversy. In other words, the Federal Government, one sovereign, can compel the State, another sovereign, to keep the latter's obligations; but, no matter how solemn may be the duty and the obligation of the Federal Government, the State is powerless to enforce it. Does not such a condition imply a misconception of the purposes and objects to be attained in giving original jurisdiction to the Supreme Court? How can we expect the States to be satisfied, to feel that security which comes only with the consciousness of justice, when the enforcement of justice is one-sided and arbitrary?

The general grant of judicial power in suits in which the United States may be a party and the grant of original jurisdiction in the Supreme Court in a suit in which a State shall be a party have been so construed as to read that "the judicial power shall extend to suits to which the United States shall be a party plaintiff", whereas the Constitution meant to create a tribunal to try cases in which the United States is a "party."

This bill will put into operation the full judicial power granted by the Constitution.

Upon the grounds of expediency, nothing can be urged against this bill except the possibility of the United States having to defend many suits. Such a claim is an indictment of each one of the 48 States of the Union.

It is unfair to the States and entirely inconsistent with their sovereign dignity to presuppose that any of them will attempt to implead the United States, except in a controversy which has received careful consideration and which cannot be adjusted except by an appeal to the highest court in the land and is of such importance as to demand that judgment.

It might as well be argued that the United States would, upon slight cause, harass the States as it is to contend that the States would, except in the utmost faith, sue the United States. The States act by the authority of their legislative bodies and through their executive departments. There is nothing in the past history of the government of the States to justify the belief that the legislature of a State would authorize a suit to be brought against the Federal Government unless it was concerning a matter of great importance which could be settled in no other way. If the Federal Government has not abused its right of suit against the States, so we may well conclude the States will not abuse the proposed legislation. The 48 sovereigns of the United States may well be trusted to confine their suits, brought under the proposed legislation, to matters which comport with the dignity of the Supreme Court and the high regard which the people of the country have for that tribunal.

The proposed legislation will make for peace, contentment, and good feeling. The Supreme Court of the United States is the national tribunal. It now tries controversies between States involving all sorts of questions of boundary and mutual obligations.

N.J. v. N.Y. (5 Peters, 284); R.I. v. Mass. (12 Peters, 657); Mo. v. Iowa (7 How. 660); Fla. v. Ga. (17 How. 478); Ala. v. Ga. (23 How. 505); Mo. v. Ky. (11 Wall. 395); Va. v. W.Va. (11 Wall. 39); Nebr. v. Iowa (143 U.S. 359).

An investigation of the record in those suits will show that they were not instituted for slight cause, but that the controversies embrace matters which were in good faith in dispute between the parties, and were of such dignity and importance as to demand decision by the Supreme Court of the United States. There is nothing in any of these cases to warrant the suggestion that the States acted hastily in bringing the suits. It is submitted that to legislate upon the assumption that one sovereign State of this Union would abuse the jurisdiction of the United States Court is entirely out of harmony with the history of this country, the conduct of the States in the past, and is almost insulting to the sovereign dignity of the States.

The proposed legislation limits the suits which can be brought under its provisions to those which would be cognizable in a court of justice "between individuals." That clause was intended to exclude any chance of involving a political right or claim as the subject matter of a suit. There was inserted in the bill the right of the United States in any such suit to interpose any counterclaim, set-off, equitable, or other defense, which could be made by the defendant were such suits between individuals. One of the purposes of that clause was to make it perfectly clear that where the questions involved would be the settling of accounts there could be no doubt of the right of the United States to interpose any matter which might make the settlement complete.

In the case of Virginia v. West Virginia (220 U.S. 27) the Supreme Court held that in suits between States:

The case is to be considered in the untechnical spirit proper for dealing with a quasi-international controversy, remembering that there is no municipal code governing the matter and that this court may be called on to adjust differences that cannot be dealt with by Congress or disposed of by the legislature of either State alone.

And in Kansas v. Colorado (206 U.S. 46) the court said:

In a qualified sense and to a limited extent the separate States are sovereign and independent, and the relations between them partake something of the nature of international law.

Inasmuch as the court announced this principle upon the ground that the parties to the suit were sovereigns, the same rule would apply in controversies between the United States and a State.

In the case of Virginia against West Virginia, supra, it was held that in the exercise of its original jurisdiction the Supreme Court is not bound by any special rule or by any particular form of pleading, but that it could exercise its original jurisdiction in its own way. Suits brought under the proposed act would, of course, be governed by this rule.

DEATH OF THEODORE F. SHUEY

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I ask that the Senate, sitting as a court, suspend its proceedings for a brief time in order that tribute may be paid to the memory of a faithful official of the Senate who has passed away.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the proceedings of the Senate, sitting as a Court of Impeachment, will be temporarily suspended.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, last night near the hour of midnight, I think, at 11:40, Mr. Theodore F. Shuey departed this life.

On the 9th of April, when his services were interrupted, he had faithfully and diligently performed his duties as Official Reporter for this body for a period of 65 years without absence for a single day. I doubt if in the history of this country there is a comparable record to that which was made by Mr. Shuey. His record is remarkable not alone for long service but for notable and exceptional efficiency. Every Senator who hears me will recall his diligence, his accuracy, his promptness in recording and transcribing the proceedings of the Senate.

To diligence, promptness, and efficiency he added a measure of good will and of cheerfulness which won for him the admiration and the affection of all with whom he served. During the 65 years of his labors here Senators came and went; revolutions occurred, bringing great changes not only to the institutions of other countries but also influencing those of our own beloved land.

It is fitting and appropriate that reference should be made in this presence and that public note should be taken by the Senate of the passing of this faithful, just man.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, throughout my term in the Senate I have been under the constant inspiration of contact with the late Mr. Shuey, to whom the Senator from Arkansas has so notably referred. I recall that only a few weeks ago it was my pleasure to rise in the Senate and refer to the fact that in no other life within our purview did the gulf stream of youth run so warm and so strong in the Arctic circle of the years. The gulf stream now is the gulf stream of his memory, but it will always be as warm in death as it was in life. Our affections and our respect and our veneration for Mr. Shuey will respond to the roll call of his memory even though he no longer responds to the roll call of our service. Public service never had a more capable and faithful trustee. The Senate never could have greater loyalty and competence and character in those who labor with it for the national welfare.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, if appreciation for service rendered, if gratitude for the courtesies shown, if loving affection of his associates, which covered almost every Senator's activities in his official life for two generations, are bases for happiness, surely Mr. Shuey should now be a happy man.

PORTER J. McCUMBER

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I wish to announce that former Senator Porter J. McCumber, of North Dakota, passed away last night. Those who have been Members of the Senate for some years will remember Senator McCumber very well. He was an able statesman and served with a great deal of ability for a period of 24 years. He was chairman of the powerful Finance Committee for several years, and was the author of important legislation.

I wish to say that the funeral will take place at his residence here in the city tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

RESUMPTION OF IMPEACHMENT TRIAL

The Senate, sitting as a Court of Impeachment, resumed its session.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Are counsel for the respondent ready to proceed?

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, we should like to recall the witness, Mr. Zolinsky, for information requested by a Senator.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The witness will be recalled. The Chair appoints the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY] to preside for the day.

(Thereupon Mr. NEELY took the chair as Presiding Officer for the day.)

Mr. LINFORTH. We ask that the witness Herbert Erskine, partly examined yesterday, resume his testimony.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Please recall Mr. Erskine.

EXAMINATION OF HERBERT W. ERSKINE—RESUMED

Herbert W. Erskine, having been previously sworn, was recalled.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Erskine, are you familiar with the application that was filed for compensation for the attorneys for the receiver?—A. Yes.

Q. I hand you a document and ask you if this is the application?—A. That is it.

Q. Annexed to the application is a detailed statement of the services rendered. Is that correct?—A. Yes; with the exception of the time that I spent on it. That is not in there at all.

Q. This detailed statement embraces 114 pages, does it not?—A. Yes.

Mr. LINFORTH. We offer this application as an exhibit in connection with the testimony of the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be admitted.

(The document was marked "U.S.S. Exhibit C.")

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, may I suggest to counsel for the respondent that the instrument to which he refers has already been printed as an exhibit, as I understand, in connection with the investigation made in San Francisco.

Mr. LINFORTH. And for that reason there will be no need of having it printed in today's proceedings.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. There is no objection to the admission of the document.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The document will be admitted, but not again printed in the record.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. KING. I may transcend the rule: Would it be possible for members of the court to be furnished with copies of the document which Judge SUMNERS stated is printed in the record?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is not informed as to that.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, if I may have the privilege of answering the interrogation propounded to the Chair, there are enough copies already printed to furnish a copy to each of the Senators. They may be had from the room of the Committee on the Judiciary. If it is agreeable to the Chair and Members of the Senate, I will undertake to have enough copies brought to the Senate Chamber for the use of such Senators as may want them.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I hope that course will be pursued. I should like to have a copy of the document.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The documents will be supplied in pursuance of the statement just made by Judge SUMNERS.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Erskine, are you familiar with the petition or application filed on behalf of the receiver for compensation?—A. Yes.

Q. I hand you a document consisting of 62 typewritten pages and ask you if this is that document.—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. LINFORTH. We offer this document as an exhibit in connection with the testimony of the witness; and we ask the honorable manager on the part of the House, Mr. SUMNERS, if that has also been printed in the record that he has referred to.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, it is my understanding that it has also been printed in the record to which reference has been made.

Mr. LINFORTH. And that copies of that may be also furnished to the Senate?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. If I may say so for the information of the Senate and counsel for the respondent, we have just sent for 100 copies of the entire record in which this document and the preceding document have been included. They will be in the office of the Sergeant at Arms within an hour from this time.

Mr. LINFORTH. With that understanding, we state, so far as the respondent is concerned, that there is no need of printing this document in the record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This document also will be received, but not again printed.

(The document was marked "U.S.S. Exhibit D.")

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Erskine, when the application for attorney fees and the application for the fees of the receiver came on to be heard, were you in court presenting the application?—A. Yes.

Q. Can you state from recollection on what day or days those applications were on hearing?—A. As I recollect, on Saturday, Monday, and Tuesday, in the middle of March of 1931. I could not give you the exact dates.

Q. Do you remember what proceedings were had and taken upon the hearing of those applications?—A. Yes; generally.

Q. Was evidence taken as to the value of the services of the receiver and the attorneys?—A. Yes.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, the managers recognize the right, perhaps, to interpose objections to the testimony of this witness to that which is contained in a document; but we waive that right. We do not insist upon the right, but at this point we want to indicate our waiver, and ask the privilege of pursuing the same character of examination in order to avoid an unnecessary consumption of time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the manager on the part of the House mean that the testimony that is now being taken already appears in the record?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. It is a matter of documentary proof.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Why repeat the evidence?

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, it is my understanding that this testimony is not in the record, and I am now laying the foundation for its admission.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. We do not insist upon the point one way or the other. We have no objection to this character of testimony, but are simply asking the privilege of pursuing it ourselves. I say very candidly to the Chair and to counsel for the respondent that I think it is a good thing to do with regard to these voluminous records.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the evidence is not in the record, the counsel will proceed. If it is, of course, the Chair assumes that the court does not want it repeated.

Mr. LINFORTH. It is my understanding, Mr. President, that the testimony is not in the record; and it is my purpose at this time to have the witness briefly indicate the record, and then we will offer the record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Proceed.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Erskine, what witnesses were examined upon that hearing in regard to the question of attorneys' fees?—A. On behalf of the attorneys for the receiver, Mr. John L. McNab, Mr. Albert Rosenshine, Mr. Henry Jacobs, and Mr. Milton Newmark.

Q. In addition to that, was testimony given or were statements made by yourself and your associate and Mr. Short with reference to the services rendered?—A. My brother, Morse Erskine, made a statement with respect to the services our firm and Mr. Short had performed.

Q. Do you recall at this time what value John L. McNab placed upon the services of the attorneys?—A. My recollection is $75,000.

Q. Do you recollect at this time what value was placed upon the services of the attorneys by Mr. Rosenshine?—A. $65,000.

Q. Do you recollect what value was placed upon the services of the attorneys by Mr. Jacobs?—A. My recollection is between $55,000 and $60,000.

Q. Do you recollect what value was placed upon the services of the attorneys by Mr. Ehrmann, called as a witness in opposition to the application?—A. My recollection is $25,000.

Q. Did anyone called upon the hearing testify as to the amount of service so far as the receiver was concerned?—A. The amount of service?

Q. Did anyone fix an amount in testifying as to the value of the services of the receiver?—A. Mr. Newmark did.

Q. What value did Mr. Newmark fix on the services of the receiver?—A. I have not that in mind, Mr. Linforth.

Q. Will you state in a few words whether or not Mr. Newmark made a speciality of any branch of the legal business?—A. Mr. Newmark I have known for many years. He was formerly with Mr. Mansfield, who when I was admitted to practice was the leading bankruptcy lawyer on the Pacific coast. Mr. Newmark since Mr. Mansfield's death has continued on in the same line of practice, and has been in the bankruptcy practice on the Pacific coast practically all of his professional career.

Q. Is he considered an expert in that locality on that subject?—A. There is no question about it.

Q. Who was the attorney who led the opposition as to the allowance of attorney fees?—A. Mr. Scampini.

Q. Whom did he represent upon the hearing of the application?—A. He represented four creditors, one of them—I believe his name was Dr. Isnardi—the largest general creditor.

Q. After the matter had been on hearing for 2 days, did you have a conference with Mr. Scampini on the question of agreeing on the amount of attorney fees?—A. I did.

Q. When and where did you have that conversation with Mr. Scampini?—A. Mr. Scampini came to my office the morning of the third day, around noontime.

Q. Was that due to any appointment or suggestion on your part?—A. No. He called me up and asked if he could come over to see me. I made the appointment, and he came to see me at 12 o'clock, approximately.

Q. Was that about 12 o'clock of the day on which the hearing was to continue at 1 o'clock?—A. Yes.

Q. Briefly, what did he say to you on that subject?—A. He said that he and the attorneys for the other creditors and the creditors had been discussing the matter; they had listened to the testimony for 2 days, and had an opportunity to go through the records and form a better judgment as to the nature and character and amount of services performed, and that they had concluded that the services were worth more than they had originally estimated, and that they would suggest that the matter be concluded, if it could be, for $75,000, to cover the services of all of the attorneys—that is, for the receiver, for the plaintiff, and for the defendant and of the receiver—rendered up to that time, in addition to the amounts that had already been paid the receiver.

Q. Up to that time—

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Just a moment. Mr. President, it is recognized that the testimony just given is hearsay testimony, and it probably should be excluded, under the ordinary rules governing the admission of testimony, under the circumstances; but we are not going to ask that that testimony be stricken out, because we think that the men who constitute this court are quite capable of accepting and analyzing the testimony that is being admitted.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, the object of the testimony—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no objection. It is not necessary to reply. Proceed.

Q. (By Mr. LINFORTH.) Had any compensation been allowed to the attorneys up to that time?—A. None.

Q. Had any compensation been allowed and received by the receiver up to that time?—A. I believe it had.

Q. Can you state what amount?—A. I cannot, Mr. LINFORTH, exactly.

Q. What reply, if any, did you make to the suggestion of compromise of Mr. Scampini?—A. I told him that we would endeavor before 1 o'clock to get in touch with the receiver, and also with the attorneys for the plaintiff and the defendant, to discuss the matter and see what could be done.

Q. Did you state when or where you would see him?—A. I stated that we would meet him at court at 1 o'clock, or shortly before 1 o'clock.

Q. At the courthouse, at the time you stated, was there any further discussion on that subject?—A. Yes.

Q. With whom was the discussion?—A. The discussion was had with three groups, Mr. Hunter and my brother and Mr. Short in one group, and Mr. Scampini and Mr. Shearer and his clients in another, and Mr. Thelen and Mr. De Lancey Smith in another.

Q. What discussion did you have with Mr. Thelen and Mr. Smith at the courthouse on that occasion on that subject?—A. Mr. Thelen, Mr. Smith, and I went into a room to the left of the court-room door, and I told them about Mr. Scampini's suggestion and discussed the division of the amount between the receiver, ourselves, and the attorneys for the plaintiff and the defendant.

Q. What did they say with reference to that proposition?—A. Well, there was some discussion about how much they should receive, and they first, as I recollect it, desired $10,000 out of the amount. I took that matter up then, acting as intermediary, with my brother and Mr. Hunter and Mr. Short, and after discussion came back and said that that was not acceptable; and then we finally arrived at a proposition that they were to get $8,750 out of the amount, and in the event any further fees were allowed to us they were to receive 20 percent of those allowances until they had received $2,500 more. They said that was satisfactory. I went back to my brother and Mr. Short and Mr. Hunter, discussed it, and they finally said that was satisfactory to them, and then we told Mr. Scampini that we felt we had been able to meet his terms, and then we all went into the court.

Q. While talking to Messrs. Thelen and Smith, was it finally agreed as to what amount the attorneys for the receiver should receive out of this sum of $75,000?—A. Yes. It was stated that the fees would be divided, as I recollect, forty thousand and odd to ourselves, twenty thousand to the receiver, and eight thousand seven hundred and fifty to them.

Q. What did they say as to whether or not that was agreeable to them?—A. They stated that it was agreeable to them, and I went back and told my brother and Short and Hunter that it was agreeable to Mr. Smith and Mr. Thelen, and also notified Scampini we had been able to meet his terms, and we went into the court, all of us.

Q. What time on that day did you people come to an agreement with reference to the amount of fees?—A. Approximately 1:30.

Q. Was anything done on that occasion with reference to advising the court that you people were discussing a possible adjustment or settlement of your differences?—A. It is my recollection that either Mr. Scampini or Mr. Short asked the crier or the bailiff to advise the judge that we would like to have the matter continued while we were discussing the matter.

Q. Was that done until after you people had reached that understanding?—A. That was done until after our conclusion had been reached.

Q. About what hour was it that the proceeding was resumed in court?—A. I should say about 1:30.

Q. When the proceeding was resumed in court, what took place?—A. It is my recollection—

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, we believe that at this point we should insist that the record is the best evidence and ought to disclose what did take place. We have been very liberal, but we believe that from this point on the record should be depended on.

Mr. LINFORTH. May I add, Mr. President, that we differ with the learned manager? The reporter's transcript would not be the best evidence. The recollection of the witness is competent evidence, and also, of course, the reporter's transcript is competent evidence. My thought and purpose was to briefly bring out from the witness generally what took place in court in order to save reading to the Senators in this trial the proceedings that were had at that time, but it is my purpose to offer in the record the reporter's transcript of what took place at the time, but on account of it being somewhat lengthy I thought perhaps the matter might be shortened and the time of the Senators saved by not reading it at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the evidence counsel is adducing already in the record that is before the Senate?

Mr. LINFORTH. It is not, Mr. President.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. May I suggest to counsel for the respondent, and to you, Mr. President, that the testimony to which counsel is evidently directing his questions, while not before the Senate, is incorporated in the printed record to which reference has been made two or three times this morning and which is to be supplied to Senators for their examination? I assume that counsel also has a transcription of that record.

Mr. LINFORTH. I have a certified transcription of the record, and if the learned manager for the House prefers that that should be read at this time instead of the witness being interrogated on that subject, we have no objection to following that course.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, we have waived all insistence for a few moments, with the hope that counsel for respondent will be able soon to terminate his oral examination of this witness with regard to what is contained in the record, and for the moment we waive the objection.

Mr. LINFORTH. In reply, we will be very brief.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Proceed.

Mr. LINFORTH. Have you a question, Mr. Reporter?

The reporter read as follows:

Q. When the proceeding was resumed in court, what took place?

The WITNESS. Mr. Scampini, the attorney for the creditors, stated to the court the arrangement that had been arrived at. Thereupon my brother, Morse Erskine, as I recollect it, supplemented Mr. Scampini's statement by stating the arrangement about the 20-percent payment of subsequent fees to the attorney for the receiver, which we had agreed to give to Mr. De Lancey Smith and Mr. Thelen. Thereupon the court asked, as I recollect it, if the arrangement that had been made was satisfactory to everybody there. I believe that there were some answers "yes", but nobody said "no", and thereupon a minute order was made for the amounts, as I recollect it, that had been stipulated.

Q. Do you recall whether at that time the court specifically asked either Mr. Smith or Mr. Brown whether the arrangement was satisfactory to them?—A. I have no recollection of Mr. Brown being present. He may have been, and he may not, but I do not really remember him; but I have a recollection that Mr. Smith was asked if it was satisfactory, and he said "Yes."

Q. That is the Mr. Smith who has already been a witness in this proceeding?—A. I do not know whether he has been a witness here or not.

Q. I beg pardon, I was in error in that, and I withdraw that question. Now, Mr. Erskine, do you know Mr. Newmark?—A. Newmark?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was employed with reference to a bankruptcy proceeding that was commenced after the equity receivership?—A. Yes.

Q. With reference to his compensation, was that paid by the attorneys out of their fees and not out of the Russell-Colvin fees?—A. That is true.

Q. With reference to the fees received by Short and Keyes & Erskine was any part or portion of those fees ever received by the respondent, Judge Louderback?—A. Absolutely no.

Q. Did anyone other than you three ever receive any part or portion of those fees?—A. Nobody.

Q. To your knowledge did W. S. Leake ever receive any part or portion of those fees?—A. No.

Q. Inasmuch as it was for your service, I will not ask you, in your opinion, what was the value of the services. How long have you known Judge Louderback?—A. Casually almost since I was admitted to practice. I knew him when he was associated with the firm of Mastick & Partridge.

Q. And the latter is the gentleman who was afterward judge of the Northern District of California?—A. Yes. Mr. Partridge became Federal judge, either upon the death of Judge Van Fleet or of Judge Dooling, I have forgotten which now.

Q. Have you ever had any close or intimate relations with Judge Louderback?—A. No, none.

Q. What has been the extent of your relationship with Judge Louderback?—A. When he was on the superior court I appeared before him in one or two litigated matters of short duration, and this receivership, so far as I can recollect.

Q. Has your relationship at any time with him been anything more than the ordinary relationship between judge and attorney at the bar?—A. Slighter than that even.

Q. Do you recall in the 8 years that Judge Louderback presided over the superior court of the State of California how often or how infrequently you appeared before him?—A. Only on one occasion, as I recollect; perhaps two.

Q. And during the 5 years that he has occupied the position as judge of the Northern District of California, how frequently have you or your firm appeared before him except in this particular Russell-Colvin case?—A. None at all, so far as I know.

Q. Have you ever been a political friend of Judge Louderback?—A. No.

Q. When he was a candidate for election to the Superior Court of the State of California did you do anything whatever in the way of aiding him politically?—A. Nothing at all.

Q. In the 5 years that Judge Louderback has been judge of the Northern District of California in how many receivership matters has Mr. Short or your firm represented the receiver?—A. This is the only one.

Q. I call your attention to a small matter known as the Sempel-Cooley matter, did your firm appear in that?—A. Yes; that was not a receivership matter; it was a bankruptcy matter.

Q. That was a bankruptcy matter, and do you recall what the compensation was in that case?—A. I think it was $500.

Q. Are these the only two matters in which your firm has appeared or Mr. Short has appeared, to your knowledge, either in bankruptcy receiverships or in equity receiverships during the 13 years that Judge Louderback has been on the superior bench or the Federal bench?—A. Those are the only two.

Q. One further question that I had overlooked: Subsequent to the allowance of the fee of forty-six thousand and odd dollars, was there an additional allowance made to the attorneys for the receiver in the Russell-Colvin matter?—A. Yes; the sum of $5,000.

Q. And out of that sum of $5,000, under the arrangement that you have referred to, was 20 percent of it, or $1,000, sent to the firm of De Lancey Smith & Brown and Thelen & Marrin?—A. A thousand dollars was sent to De Lancey Smith, with a letter, as I recollect it, written by our firm, stating that the thousand dollars was sent to him in accordance with our arrangements.

Q. I hand you a letter dated November 30, 1931. Is that a carbon copy of the letter you have referred to?—A. I believe it is.

Mr. LINFORTH. We offer the letter as a part of the examination of the witness.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Let me see that, please.

Mr. LINFORTH. Certainly. Pardon me for not showing it to you.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. We have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The letter will be submitted.

Mr. LINFORTH. The letter being short, Mr. President, I will read it.

U.S.S. EXHIBIT E

NOVEMBER 30, 1931.

DE LANCEY C. SMITH, Esq.,

Attorney at Law, Baljour Building,
San Francisco, Calif.

MY DEAR DE LANCEY: Enclosed is Keyes & Erskine's check for $1,000 in accordance with our understanding whereby you and Mr. Thelen's office would receive one fifth of all compensation paid us as attorneys for the receiver of Russell-Colvin & Co. subsequent to March 17, 1931, not exceeding in all $2,500.

The court on Saturday signed and filed an order directing payment to the receivers of $7,500 for services to October 15, 1931, and to ourselves in the sum of $5,000 to the same date.

Very truly yours,

KEYES & ERSKINE.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Just one further question, and I am through. How much did your firm and Mr. Short pay Mr. Newmark on account of the services he had rendered in the receivership matter, in round numbers?—A. I think it was $2,460.

Mr. LINFORTH. You may take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. Mr. Erskine, with regard to the amount of your fee, I believe you said Mr. Rosenshine appeared as a witness. At that time he was attorney in a similar case, was he not?—A. In the Gorman Kayser & Co. case?

Q. In the Gorman Kayser & Co. case.—A. Yes. That is now in the course of administration in the Superior Court of San Francisco and has been ever since that time.

Q. At that time he had not received any fee at all in that case, had he?—A. I cannot tell you.

Q. So far as you know, he had not?—A. I cannot tell you.

Q. Mr. Newmark, I believe you said, testified, that your services were worth $75,000?—A. No.

Q. How much?—A. I did not say he testified for us; I said he testified for the receiver.

Q. Did he testify with regard to your services?—A. No.

Q. He received a fee out of your allowance?—A. Yes; for his services in connection with the bankruptcy phase of this matter under agreement approved by the attorneys for the plaintiff and the defendant and ourselves.

Q. Why were you willing to allow a part, a percentage, of the allowance that went to you to go to De Lancey Smith and his associates?—A. Because, in order to settle up the matter, clean it up—

Q. What do you mean exactly "in order to settle up the matter and clean it up"?—A. There was a dispute there. They wanted $10,000 for their services, and there was $75,000 to be disposed of, and we felt for our work that we were entitled to more than we were getting, and Mr. Hunter felt that he was entitled to more than he was getting.

Q. How much did you ask for?—A. Sixty-five thousand dollars.

Q. Had De Lancey Smith rendered any service in connection with the administration of this estate?—A. Yes.

Q. What service had he rendered?—A. Well, generally, at the very outset of the matter, Judge Louderback had suggested that the important proceedings be approved both by the attorneys for the plaintiff and by the attorneys for the defendant, and accordingly the important petitions and the important decisions, were sent over to him and to the attorneys for the plaintiff to be approved, and they approved all those petitions. In addition to that, they were helpful in certain negotiations.

Q. What negotiations, if you do not mind specifying?—A. Well, the ones I have in mind—and you will bear in mind that all the details of this matter were handled by Mr. Morse Erskine—

Q. We do not want you to testify about anything that you do not know about.—A. Generally speaking, the particular transaction that I have in mind was the Consolidated Box transaction.

Q. You sold the Box Co., did you not?—A. The receiver did.

Q. Was there a lawsuit about it?—A. No.

Q. Did you not testify yesterday that that was a matter that went into litigation?—A. No.

Q. There was no lawsuit about it?—A. Not that I recollect.

Q. Did Mr. De Lancey Smith have to do with negotiating the sale?—A. Yes; he took part in it.

Q. What were the principal lawsuits in which you represented the estate—you and your firm?—A. I do not believe there were any lawsuits of any magnitude. I think that one of the reasons that the matter was settled with such great dispatch was because we were able—

Q. You avoided lawsuits, did you not?—A. We avoided lawsuits; yes.

Q. Then, as a matter of fact, there were not any lawsuits to speak of, were there?—A. There were some.

Q. Did you go into court with regard to litigation involving the interests of this estate?—A. Myself personally?

Q. Your firm or Mr. Short either?—A. Yes; in some matters.

Q. What were they?—A. Well, in the first place, there were the 21 exceptions to the general report.

Q. Were they litigated?—A. They were referred to a master, and then, at the instance of the general creditors, who said they wanted a speedy disposition of the matter, they were settled.

Q. But you did not litigate it in that suit?—A. No.

Q. That is what I am trying to find out. What else was litigated?—A. There were certain claims before a special master, six or seven of those.

Q. Did they find their way into the courthouse?—A. They were tried before the special master and either settled or decisions made and referred back to the court.

Q. No appeal was taken from the determination by the master of any of those cases, was there?—A. No.

Q. Let us get it clearly before this court. Did you go into the courthouse and litigate before judge or jury matters arising out of this estate, and if so, please indicate that they were.—A. I cannot say that we did. I have a list of the actual litigation, with the exception of the exceptions to the account which were referred to the master, to which

I just referred. These matters were all settled practically except the subsequent suits that have been commenced by the collection of customers' accounts.

Q. How recently have those suits been commenced?—A. I think some of them were started—it was not possible to sue those customers for the balance due until after the account had been settled.

Q. What I am trying to get at is this: Were these suits instituted before or after the allowance to which you have referred?—A. These suits possibly were instituted after the allowance.

Q. They, as a matter of fact, have been turned over to a collection agency which operates through its own attorney?—A. Not all of them; no, sir.

Q. But they are in litigation which began since the determination of the account?—A. I believe that is correct.

Q. When did Mr. Short first associate himself with your firm?—A. 1928.

Q. At that time will you indicate to the Senate what constituted your office organization, including those persons who were associated with you as lawyers?—A. Do you mean in 1928?

Q. That is right.—A. We had my brother and myself and Mr. Alexander Keyes, three partners. Then there was Mr. Short, a Mr. John Mace, Mr. Hugo Steinmeyer, and another young lawyer, I believe, Mr. Harrington, I think. In addition to that we had, of course, six or seven stenographers and bookkeepers.

Q. When did Mr. Short go on salary with your firm?—A. When he came there in 1928. I think it was in January 1928; I am not sure.

Q. Is he on salary there now?—A. No.

Q. How long has he been off the salary?—A. I think it was in the beginning of 1932, when the depression got acute.

Q. Yes; we know about the depression. Was there any change with reference to relationship with the other persons who had employees of the firm?—A. Yes; Mr. Mace became attorney for the Pacific State Savings & Loan Society. Mr. Harrington became associated with the firm of Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel.

Q. I do not want to go too much into detail.—A. Mr. Steinmeyer became counsel for the Bank of America or one of counsel for the Bank of America in Los Angeles. We took in, shortly after we got this receivership, Charles Joseph Carey into our office—he had been formerly connected with the American Trust Co.—to help us out with the bank work which Mr. Short and my brother had previously performed.

Q. Mr. Short still retained responsibility with regard to your trust matters, did he not?—A. In the bank?

Q. Yes.—A. Some.

Q. Did he not retain primary and major responsibility for handling your trust work in connection with the bank after his employment?—A. I would not put it that way. My brother was the one that was primarily responsible for the trust work at the bank. Mr. Short was under him.

Q. Did Mr. Short continue his relationship with that account in the bank, if I may so put it?—A. I would not say he did. He devoted most of his time or practically all his time, in my opinion, to the receivership proceeding.

Q. You stated, I believe, on yesterday that the arrangement with Mr. Short was that he should come to you with a salary of $200 a month, a division of fees, and that he had also had an independent clientele?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you have any control over that part of his independent clientele with regard to the fees in which you should share?—A. I do not understand the question.

Q. Let me put it another way. With regard to his independent clientele, who determined what his independent clientele was and who determined what should be shared with you?—A. We left that to his own sense of fair dealing.

Q. Did he have a considerable independent clientele?—A. I would not say so. His practice was not as extensive as ours.

Q. You naturally could not afford to furnish stenographers' services and rent and use of library and let a man have all he made. That we understand, of course. Outside of this receivership, how much was the revenue of your firm on the average derived from the fees that Mr. Short shared with the firm of which you are a member?—A. That would be very hard for me to state.

Q. Do you not have a pretty fair idea?—A. No. Some years it amounted to a considerable sum and some years not so much.

Q. With regard to this particular arrangement under which Mr. Short became the attorney for Mr. Hunter as receiver, the first information you had was on the day after Mr. Hunter had been employed receiver in the case?—A. I believe that is correct; yes.

Q. When was the first time you learned of this receivership?—A. I think that was the first time.

Q. You had no discussion with Mr. Short or anybody else with regard to the fact that the receivership was in contemplation?—A. No; not that I recollect.

Q. Was the first intimation that you had with reference to the possibility of Mr. Short being associated as attorney on the morning after the receiver was appointed?—A. That is my recollection.

Q. He did not tell you that Mr. Short had engaged or sought to engage the firm of Keyes & Erskine, did he, when Mr. Short came to you on the morning after appointment to discuss this matter with you?—A. How is that? He did not tell me that Mr. Short had sought—

Q. Possibly I am confused in the names. Let me ask the question again. Mr. Short, when he saw you in the morning, in the conversation indicated by you, indicated to you that Mr. Hunter had indicated to him, Mr. Short, that it was desired by Mr. Hunter to employ the firm of Keyes & Erskine to represent him in the receivership?—A. Yes; he did. He said Mr. Hunter desired to appoint the firm of Keyes & Erskine or to employ the firm of Keyes & Erskine and Mr. Short in this matter.

Q. You are certain about that?—A. Yes; that is my recollection.

Q. I do not mean to press the matter, but your recollection is, in your judgment, clear on that question?—A. I believe it is; yes.

Q. To refresh your recollection, is not this what Mr. Short told you, that on the evening prior to his conversation with you Mr. Hunter called him up and asked him if Mr. Short would serve in the capacity of attorney in the receivership matter, and that he was consulting with you about it and desired to know whether or not it would be an agreeable engagement with you, and whether or not you would participate in the responsibility of the attorneyship for the receiver? Is not that what he told you?—A. No; my recollection is not that. My recollection is that the morning he came into the office and said Mr. Hunter had suggested that he would like to employ him with us in the matter. That is my recollection.

Q. I believe you stated that your acquaintanceship with Judge Louderback was not more than casual prior to the time you were engaged?—A. That is right.

Q. What was the nature of your acquaintanceship with Mr. Hunter?—A. Mr. Hunter had acted with me in several of the bank consolidations in which I had acted for the United Securities Bank and subsequently for the Bank of America of California. I was then the auditor for the branches, and that brought me into contact with him in connection with those consolidations and mergers. You understand that in consolidating a bank you must go into the question of figures more or less. My brother and I were engaged extensively in that practice in the years 1928 and 1929.

Q. Did your acquaintanceship develop into friendship and intimate acquaintanceship with Mr. Hunter during that time?—A. I would say not, although I was quite friendly with him. In addition to that he and I just shortly previous to this receivership matter had been engaged, while he was an employee of Cavalier's, in a litigation involving a stock-brokerage transaction.

Q. You stated, I believe, on yesterday that you represented Cavalier in certain cases?—A. Yes.

Q. Did they have a particular type or character of those cases? How did it happen to be that those cases came to you rather than going to their regular legal representative?—A. I do not know that they have any legal representative. The cases which were given to me were given to me as a regular employment as attorney which arose in the due course of business, and I was asked to represent them, and I did.

Q. When did Mr. Hunter first speak to you with regard to employing your firm as his representative in this matter?—A. I do not believe he ever directly spoke to me on that subject. He came in the office about the same time and we discussed the matter in a general way on the assumption that we were employed.

Q. Did this case come to you and do you recognize that this case came to you through Mr. Short or came to you through the regular course of employment?—A. I considered that it came to me for two reasons, because of Mr. Short and also because Mr. Hunter had been connected with us in business before that time and almost up to that time.

Q. Was this Mr. Short's business or the firm's business?—A. Joint business.

Q. If it was joint business, how did you happen to get half the fee?—A. That was our arrangement.

Q. I thought you said you got half the fee on business that he originated and you helped him to handle.—A. No; I stated we got half the fees on joint business.

Q. What do you mean by joint business?—A. I mean business that we originated and we participated in, that we took part in, or business that we were jointly employed in.

Q. What do you mean by that?—A. Well, I mean if anybody came and asked Mr. Short and our firm to act together in a matter, we were jointly employed, meaning what the words connote.

Q. In other words, if somebody came into your office and said, "Well, now, Mr. Short, we want to employ you; and Keyes & Erskine, we want to employ you", and you were engaged in that way, then that was joint business?—A. Yes; I consider it so.

Q. Can you indicate a case of that sort outside of this matter? When did it ever occur that anybody came into your office, called Mr. Short in and called you in together, and had a conference and said, "Now, we want to appoint you gentlemen together"?—A. Oh, not in that way; no.

Q. It did not happen in that way, did it?—A. No.

Q. Because he was regarded as a part of your firm organization as far as the outside world understood, was he not?—A. Yes.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. That is all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there any further examination?

Mr. LINFORTH. We have no further questions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness may stand aside. Who is your next witness?

Mr. LINFORTH. Judge Kreft.

EXAMINATION OF ARMAND B. KREFT

Armand B. Kreft, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Will you please state your name, your residence, and your occupation?—A. Armand B. Kreft; attorney at law, with offices in San Francisco.

Q. How long have you been an attorney at law?—A. I was admitted in 1897.

Q. Were you at any time referee in bankruptcy for the northern district of California?—A. Yes.

Q. And what counties did your appointment include?—A. San Francisco, San Mateo, and Marin.

Q. Are those three of the larger counties in the State of California?—A. They may be termed the "metropolitan district" surrounding San Francisco, with the exception of the county of Alameda, which is also a part of the metropolitan district.

Q. How long did you serve under your appointment as referee in bankruptcy for that district?—A. Eighteen years.

Q. Continuously?—A. Continuously.

Q. From what period to what period?—A. From 1910 to 1928.

Q. As such referee, was it part of your duty to fix the fees of receivers and trustees and their attorneys?—A. It was.

Q. During your 18 years of service, had you before you on a few or many occasions proceedings relating to the liquidation of stock-brokerage concerns?—A. Several of such cases.

Q. Since 1928, when you ceased to be referee in bankruptcy, what has been your business or occupation?—A. Attorney at law specializing in liquidation matters.

Q. Have you, since you have been practicing, been appointed referee in any stock-brokerage litigation?—A. I am at present referee in the case of Gorman Keyser & Co., under appointment by the Superior Court of San Francisco.

Q. In a word, can you tell the President and the Senators the size or the extent of that liquidation?—A. It is comparable to Russell-Colvin. Customers' securities of approximately $2,000,000 were involved.

Q. From what court did you receive your appointment as referee in that matter?—A. From the superior court, Judge Goodell.

Q. That is the Superior Court of the State of California in and for San Francisco County?—A. Yes.

Q. Are you familiar with the work generally required of receivers and their attorneys in liquidation of stock-brokerage concerns?

Mr. Manager LEWIS. Mr. President, the managers desire to ask what the purpose of this inquiry is. It seems to me we are going far afield.

Mr. LINFORTH. The purpose is to qualify the witness to form and express an opinion as to the value of the services rendered by the attorneys in the Russell-Colvin matter.

Mr. Manager LEWIS. Mr. President, in this proceeding we are not determining the propriety—the extent of these fees. That only comes in collaterally here. I think the time should not be taken to determine whether or not these fees were absolutely correct. Admittedly they were very large. We object to this testimony. We charge that the fees were excessive, but I think it is not necessary to go into expert testimony here on the subject. The record shows what has been charged.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is it material to prove or disprove that the fees were excessive?

Mr. Manager LEWIS. We have charged it; yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Then it seems to the Chair that this is material testimony.

Mr. LINFORTH. May I add just a word further, Mr. President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is overruled. Proceed. Counsel will be as brief as consistent with the performance of their duties.

Mr. LINFORTH. We will, Mr. President.

The WITNESS. May the question be read?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question will be read.

The Official Reporter read the question, as follows:

Q. Are you familiar with the work generally required of receivers and their attorneys in liquidation of stock-brokerage concerns?

The WITNESS. I am.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. And with the law governing such matters?—A. I am.

Q. Did you represent any parties in interest in the Russell-Colvin litigation?—A. I did.

Q. And who were they—creditors?—A. They were customers.

Q. Do you know in a general way the services rendered by Mr. Hunter, the receiver, and by Keyes & Erskine and John Douglas Short, his attorneys?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you present in court when the application for fees came on for hearing?—A. I was.

Q. Did you hear the statements that were made at that time, and the testimony given at that time, as to the services rendered?—A. I did.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, the testimony in this case shows that the fees arrived at in this case were arrived at as a matter of compromise, though, of course, some witnesses testified that they did object to the fees, but they regarded these fees as the best fees that could be arrived at under the circumstances. Is not that true?

Mr. LINFORTH. It is alleged in the articles, Mr. President, that the fees were excessive and that they were allowed for bad and improper purposes. It is our purpose to show not only that the fees were allowed under stipulation—

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. We waive the objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is waived. Counsel will proceed.

Mr. LINFORTH. May the question be read?

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. Did you hear the statements that were made at that time, and the testimony given at that time, as to the services rendered?—A. I did.

Q. Have you examined the report of services made by both receiver and counsel, and the accounts rendered by the receiver?—A. I did. I saw those accounts in advance of filing and very carefully examined all the accounts and reports.

Q. What, in your opinion, was and is the reasonable value of the services rendered by the attorneys for the receiver in that proceeding up to the time of the making of the application for compensation?—A. I would answer that by stating that the amount finally agreed upon by stipulation is, in my opinion, a reasonable amount to have been allowed by the court had there been no stipulation—approximately $50,000 to the attorney for the receiver and $45,000 to the receiver.

Q. If the matter had been pending before you as referee while you were serving in bankruptcy, upon the testimony introduced and the services with which you are familiar, would you have made substantially the same allowance?—A. Yes.

Q. Now I want to call your attention to another proceeding, known as the "Prudential Holding Co. in bankruptcy." Did you appear in that matter on behalf of anyone?—A. On behalf of the petitioning creditors, who had filed a petition against the Prudential Holding Co.

Q. Did you present to Judge Louderback the application or the petition for the appointment of a receiver in that matter?—A. I did.

Q. Was the proceeding assigned to the court presided over by Judge St. Sure?—A. Yes.

Q. What was the reason that you presented the application to Judge Louderback instead of Judge St. Sure?—A. I was informed at the clerk's office that Judge Louderback was attending to Judge St. Sure's cases during Judge St. Sure's absence.

Q. Was it for that reason that you presented the matter to Judge Louderback?—A. It was.

Q. When you presented the matter to Judge Louderback, did you make any suggestion as to who the receiver should be?—A. I did.

Q. Whom did you suggest?—A. The receiver who had been appointed in the equity case.

Q. Do you recall whether that was Mr. G. H. Gilbert?—A. G. H. Gilbert.

Q. What was your reason for suggesting Mr. G. H. Gilbert?—A. I saw no necessity for a change in the officer who was to take charge of the business.

Q. Do you recall that in that proceeding there was a motion made to dismiss the bankruptcy matter?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall about when that matter came on for hearing?—A. The matter was argued before Judge St. Sure on October 26.

Q. Nineteen hundred and thirty-one?—A. Nineteen hundred and thirty-one.

Q. Before that motion had been heard, do you know whether or not a petition or petitions to intervene had been filed?—A. An intervening petition had been set up by one Sheather, setting up new acts of bankruptcy.

Q. By "new acts of bankruptcy" do you mean acts of bankruptcy other than and different from those set up in the original petition?—A. Yes.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. KING. Will the President suggest to the witness that he speak directly to the microphone, because those on this side of the Chamber may not hear?

The WITNESS. Thank you.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Do you recall whether or not before that motion or petition to dismiss was heard an amended petition had been filed setting up still additional acts of bankruptcy?—A. That is correct. The original meeting of creditors filed a petition to amend, setting up new and additional acts of bankruptcy.

Q. Did you appear upon the hearing of the motion to dismiss and resist it?—A. I did.

Q. In making your resistance did you act in the highest good faith?—A. I did.

Q. And, notwithstanding the fact that you may have great respect for the judgment of Judge St. Sure, do you still think there was merit in your opposition?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Unless there is some reason to be pointed out that question will not be answered. This witness is not on trial. Let us proceed.

Mr. LINFORTH. I will be as brief as possible.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. The motion was finally dismissed?—A. The original petitions were finally dismissed, together with the dismissal of the intervening petition and a denial of the application to amend the original petitions.

Q. Did you take an appeal from that order?—A. I prepared applications for appeal and assignment of errors. I was informed by the correspondents at Los Angeles by whom the case was forwarded that they intended to appeal. I was afterward notified not to appeal.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What is the relevancy of that question?

Mr. LINFORTH. I merely want to show there was no appeal taken.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair does not see where that has any place in this investigation. Let us proceed.

Mr. LINFORTH. You may take the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there any cross-examination of this witness?

Mr. Manager LEWIS. No cross-examination.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I have three inquiries I desire to have propounded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the interrogatories.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. What were the three largest fees that you awarded to attorneys for receivers or trustees as a referee in San Francisco, and were these fees approved by the court?

The WITNESS. In the J. C. Wilson & Co. brokerage failure, the fees approximated $75,000, of which a portion was allowed by the District Court of New York in ancillary proceedings, the balance by me. In the case of Sullivan, an importing and exporting business, the attorneys for the trustee were allowed $25,000 by me. I have made some five thousand-odd similar allowances, but I am unable to pick out the particular cases. They have varied from a few hundred dollars to $25,000 to $50,000 in exceptional cases.

Q. In the receiverships conducted by you as referee—

The WITNESS. I failed to answer one portion of the previous question, if I may be permitted. I do not recall that in the 18 years a single allowance was ever appealed from, made by me to attorneys.

Q. In the receiverships conducted by you as referee, concerning stock-brokerage houses, what fees did you allow the attorneys, and what fees did you allow the receivers?

The WITNESS. I have answered that as to the J. C. Wilson case. The other stock-brokerage cases were not large, the fees running into a few thousand dollars only, the volume of business approximating a hundred or two hundred thousand dollars, customers' claims, the volume of stock-brokerage failures that came since this recent panic—and we have had a number of them in San Francisco, and I have been identified with nearly every one of such failures as counsel for the parties.

Q. How many fees of $50,000 or more have you known to be allowed to attorneys in receivership cases in San Francisco? What was the nature of these receiverships, and the amounts involved?

The WITNESS. There have not been many cases where the volume of the estate is so large as in the Russell-Colvin case.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I would like to have the question read again and the witness asked to answer it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question will be restated.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. How many fees of $50,000 or more have you known to be allowed to attorneys in receivership cases in San Francisco?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let the witness answer that part of the interrogatory.

The WITNESS. I do not recall more than two or three approximating that amount, and I will say, in explanation, that there are not more than two or three that involved a volume of assets comparable with the Russell-Colvin Co. case.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, is that all the question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No. The clerk will read the second part of the interrogatory.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. What was the nature of these receiverships, and the amounts involved?

The WITNESS. Importing and exporting business, building and loan associations, stock-brokerage case; I do not recall others of great magnitude.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There was a part of the question also requiring answer, "What were the amounts involved in these particular cases?"

The WITNESS. I would say from $200,000 to $1,000,000.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I send up two other questions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama submits two other interrogatories, which the clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. What were the individual fees allowed attorneys in the J. C. Wilson case?

The WITNESS. Fifty thousand dollars, I believe, was allowed at one time, and subsequent allowances totaling $25,000.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I desire to amend that question so as to read, "What were the fees allowed to each individual attorney in the J. C. Wilson case, and what were their names?"

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the question as amended.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. What were the fees allowed to each individual attorney in the J. C. Wilson case, and what were their names?

The WITNESS. In bankruptcy there is only one fee fixed, no matter how many attorneys may serve for the trustee. The attorney in that case was Mr. Robert Gaylord.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, there is another question I desire to have propounded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the question.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. What fees of $50,000 have you received as an attorney for a receiver, and what is the largest fee received by you as an attorney for a receiver?

The WITNESS. My term of office expired in 1928, and I have been building up a practice since. The largest fee I have received so far in a bankruptcy matter is $3,500. I will add to that one additional fee of $5,000. I have not represented receivers in the cases. It was not any representation for receivers. I have represented a receiver in only one case.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I submit an interrogatory.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the interrogatory.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. Does not the amount of the fee depend on the value of the estate, the extent and number of claims, and whether there are complicated questions involved?

The WITNESS. Yes; the volume of the estate is a very important factor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any further inquiries?

Mr. BLACK. I have one other inquiry.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, I send an inquiry to the desk, and ask that it be propounded.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I have one I desire to send on the same question heretofore asked, in order that I may get it clarified, if possible.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. For the sake of logical sequence, we will withhold the question of the Senator from Ohio for a moment, until the final question of the Senator from Alabama has been propounded. The clerk will read the inquiry of the Senator from Alabama.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

In the J. C. Wilson case how many attorneys received $75,000, and whom did they represent, and who were all the attorneys?

The WITNESS. That case took place about the opening of the World War in 1914. I only knew one attorney, Mr. Robert Gaylord.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will now read the question asked by the Senator from Ohio.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Approximately what portion of the services rendered by an attorney for a receiver consists in trials in court as compared with settlements outside of court?

The WITNESS. Outside litigation is a small factor in liquidation bankruptcy and equity receivership matters. The Russell-Colvin case represented potentially 500 lawsuits in respect to the claims of clients. The same in the Gorman Kayser case, in which I am referee. I attached little importance to the fact, when I fixed the fee at $50,000 as reasonable, that there was a small amount of outside litigation.

Mr. Manager LEWIS. Mr. President, certain inquiries propounded by Senators and statements by the witness have suggested additional inquiries by the managers on the part of the House.

By Mr. Manager LEWIS:

Q. Mr. Kreft, what is the nature of your practice at present?—A. May I ask you to repeat that?

Q. What is the nature of your practice at the present time?—A. I specialize in Federal equity proceedings and bankruptcy.

Q. Are you receiver by appointment at present?—A. I am at present receiver in another stock-brokerage case, that of Myself Moller Co., a $150,000 matter.

Q. Who appointed you in that case?—A. Judge Harris, presiding judge of the superior court.

Q. Of the State court?—A. Of the State court.

Q. How long have you been engaged in that case?—A. The Myself Moller case?

Q. The case you just referred to.—A. I was appointed receiver in January 1932.

Q. Were you appointed attorney for the receiver or receiver?—A. I am receiver in that case.

Q. Have you been appointed attorney for receiver or receiver in any other cases, bankruptcy or receiverships, since you retired from your official position?—A. I have been appointed as attorney for trustees, and in maybe two instances attorney for receivers. Judge Louderback appointed me as attorney for receiver in one case.

Q. In what case was that?—A. An electric company case. I do not recall the first name. My total compensation in the case was $125.

Q. How long ago was that?—A. Oh, a year and half.

Q. And it is within the power of Judge Louderback, if he continues in office, to appoint you to similar receiverships in the future, is it not?—A. He has that power.

Q. You are an old friend of Judge Louderback, are you?—A. No.

Q. How long have you known him?—A. Possibly 10 or 12 years. He had a few matters before me when I was referee.

Q. You referred to the J. C. Wilson case, where, as I understand, there was a fee of $75,000?—A. It is my recollection that that was the total of the fees in that case allowed to the attorney for the trustee.

Q. That includes the attorneys for the receiver and trustees?—A. I do not know that there was a receiver in that case. I think there was no receiver in that case. It was a voluntary case followed shortly thereafter by the appointment of a trustee.

Q. And this was an agreed fee, was it—in the Wilson case?—A. There was no opposition to the fee asked. The larger portion of the fee was allowed by a judge in New York.

Q. Precisely. It was not allowed in California, was it?—A. No; but the case was entirely under my jurisdiction; the proceeding was ancillary in New York.

Q. In New York; but you were very glad to accept the suggestion made by the parties. Is that right?—A. There was no opposition to the fees, and I believed them to be reasonable such as were allowed.

Q. Now, let us investigate this further. In just what other matters have you fixed fees or been familiar with the compensation? What other cases are you familiar with in California, not in New York?—A. As I said, I have made upwards of 5,000 such allowances. It is very difficult for me to remember the particular cases.

Q. In these 5,000 cases how many fees approximately of $50,000 have you allowed?—A. Not more than three.

Q. Let us have those three again.—A. The J. C. Wilson case, the Owen-Sullivan case—

Q. Do you mean the J. C. Wilson case is the case in which there was an agreement in New York and you lived in California?—A. My answer was to the amount of the fees that were allowed to attorneys for services in that case, no matter where they lived.

Q. That is one. Let us have another.—A. The Owen-Sullivan case in the importing and exporting business.

Q. What were the fees allowed in that case?—A. I think they must have been in the neighborhood of $35,000 in all.

Q. You say "they must have been." Have you the clear recollection?—A. I do not recall my allowances specifically in amount in that case, except that the attorneys for the trustee were allowed $25,000. There were allowances to other attorneys in that case.

Q. That was by agreement, was it?—A. There was no particular objection, as I recall.

Q. Let us have one case where there was an allowance even approximating the figures mentioned here.—A. There were several cases.

Q. You spoke of three. Let us have the third.—A. I must answer that I cannot recall the names of the particular cases.

Q. So you now recall only two cases in which fees approximating even half of the amount in this case?—A. That is correct.

Q. But you have had 5,000 cases, as I understand, before you, and, on the basis of that experience, you come before us as an expert? Is that correct?—A. That is correct.

Q. In the Prudential Holding case, Mr. Kreft, in bankruptcy how many amended petitions were filed? You referred, as I recall, to an amended petition in that case.—A. Only one.

Q. When was that, do you recall?—A. With reference to the original petition—there were intervening petitions—but only one application to amend the original petition.

Q. When was it filed?—A. Shortly before the hearing in court on October 26.

Q. The receiver and his attorneys had already been appointed by Judge Louderback, had they not, in this bankruptcy matter when the amended petition was filed?—A. The appointment had been made prior to the filing of the amended petition.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any further questions?

Redirect examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Judge Kreft, do you know Mr. Byington, an attorney of San Francisco?—A. Casually.

Q. May I ask you this, to see if I can refresh your memory—do you recall an allowance by Judge Dooling, the judge of the Ninth District Court of California, to him in an oil case of $120,000 as receiver?—A. I do not recall that.

Mr. LINFORTH. We have no further questions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness will stand aside, and the next witness will be called.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. At this point, with your permission, Mr. President, we desire to present for the record the application for leave to file amended involuntary petition, which is the petition referred to by the witness in his testimony who has just been on the stand.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there any objection?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. It shows it was filed on October 14, 1931.

Mr. LINFORTH. May we ask the manager to submit that to us for a moment?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Yes. [Handing paper to Mr. Linforth.]

Mr. KING. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. KING. Probably there will be a short intermission in a little while. May we not proceed with the case, and counsel will then have a chance to examine the paper and determine whether they wish to object or otherwise?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is a very brief intermission desired?

Mr. LINFORTH. We have no objection to the offer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The document will be admitted.

U.S.S. EXHIBIT 54

The document admitted in evidence on behalf of the managers on the part of the House is marked "U.S.S. Exhibit 54", and is as follows:

U.S.S. EXHIBIT 54

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA, SOUTHERN DIVISION

IN THE MATTER OF THE APPLICATION OF CATHERINE ARMSTRONG, REALTY MORTGAGE INSURANCE CO., A CALIFORNIA CORPORATION, AND PARKER LINTON, FOR THE ADJUDICATION OF PRUDENTIAL HOLDING CO. OF LOS ANGELES, A NEVADA CORPORATION, ALLEGED BANKRUPT. IN BANKRUPTCY NO. 21022-S

Application for leave to file amended involuntary petition

To the honorable judges of the United States District Court in and for the Northern District of California:

The petition of Catherine Armstrong, Realty Mortgage Insurance Co., a California corporation, and Parker Linton, respectfully shows and alleges:

That on or about the 5th day of September 1931 your petitioners filed an involuntary petition in bankruptcy against the above-named alleged bankrupt; that in said petition the act of bankruptcy alleged was the appointment of a receiver while insolvent; that since the filing of said involuntary petition your petitioners have investigated the affairs of said alleged bankrupt and have discovered several new additional acts of bankruptcy committed by the said alleged bankrupt within 4 months from the filing of said involuntary petition and without 4 months from the date that your petitioners propose to file their amended involuntary petition in bankruptcy.

That the claim of one of the petitioners, to wit, Catherine Armstrong, is based upon three promissory notes, and said petitioner in the original involuntary petition set forth only one of the said notes, and said petitioner desires to amend the nature of her claim to set forth all the notes upon which there is an indebtedness due by the said alleged bankrupt.

That petitioners further show to the court that they have just discovered the commission of said additional acts of bankruptcy which are set forth in the proposed amended involuntary petition and have been duly diligent in pleading said acts.

Petitioners further show unto the court that it will be to the interests of justice to permit said amendments.

Wherefore your petitioners pray that an order be made and entered herein granting leave to your petitioners to file an amended involuntary bankruptcy petition herein, containing the amendments above set forth.

Q. Do you know Mr. W. S. Leake?—A. I do.

Q. Was he living there at that time?—A. He was.

Q. Was his wife there at that time?—A. Yes.

Q. What has been your acquaintanceship with Mr. Leake since the time you first met him at the Fairmont Hotel?—

Q. Have your relations at any time been intimate with him?—A. They have not.

Q. Have you ever been a patient of his?—A. I have not.

Q. Or any member of your family?—A. Not any member.

Q. Who first spoke to you about the Russell-Colvin receivership?—A. I think the first mention of the Russell-Colvin receivership came to me from Addison Strong. I was out in Judge Louderback's as a juror. Mr. Strong, a friend of mine, sat down next to me and asked me what I was doing out there.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If Judge Louderback had nothing to do with this, let us pass it over.

Mr. LINFORTH. I think it is important on account of testimony given by Mr. Strong. It is to meet the testimony which he has already given.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair does not want the witness to give long conversations.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Make it as brief as you can.—A. Mr. Strong asked what I was doing. I said I was a juror.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is not necessary to go into particulars in this way unless counsel has some reason for it.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, I am directing the attention of the witness to a particular matter to meet the testimony of a witness for the managers of the House—to wit, Mr. Strong—the testimony being directly responsive.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Very well.

The WITNESS. Mr. Strong asked what I was doing out there. I said I was a juror. He went on to say that he was out there in a receivership matter. I do not recall that he mentioned the Russell-Colvin. He mentioned the receivership matter and said that he had been suggested as receiver. I said to him in a joking way, "Don't you want a good receiver?" We were joshing about it at that meeting.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. In that way the matter of the receivership was mentioned?—A. It was only a facetious remark.

Q. Had anybody up to that time ever spoken to you about your acting or the possibility of your acting as receiver in that matter?—A. No one had.

Q. Did you at any time have any talk with Mr. W. S. Leake on the question of your acting as receiver?—A. I did.

Q. Can you state when and where that conversation took place?—A. I was coming into the lobby of the Fairmont Hotel and Mr. Leake called me. He asked me if I could act in the Russell-Colvin matter in case Mr. Strong would not be able to do so.

Q. What did you say? Give us the entire conversation.—
A. I told him I would have to see my associates and I would let him know.

Q. The following day did you see your associates in regard to the matter?—A. I saw Mr. Cavalier the next noon when he came over from his Oakland office and discussed it with him and also with the other partners.

Q. After discussing the matter with your associates did you have any communication with Mr. Leake in regard to it?—A. Yes. My associates thought that I should act, and I at once, as I recall it, notified Mr. Leake that I would act.

Q. How was your communication with him, by phone or otherwise?—A. By phone.

Q. When you so advised him what did he say?—A. He said he would let me know later.

Q. Did you subsequently that day hear from Mr. Leake?—
A. I did.

Q. Do you recall how you heard from him, by phone or otherwise?—A. He called me up by phone and asked me—

Q. Do you remember at what time you heard from him by phone?—A. It was along about 4 or 4:30—between 4 and 5 o'clock.

Q. What, if anything, did he say to you?—A. He told me to go out to Judge Louderback's court and take someone with me to furnish bond; that I should act in the receivership.

Q. When he made that statement to you what, if anything, did you do on the question of bond?—A. I asked one of the firm of Cavalier if they had some friend that would assist me in this matter, and they called up someone in the Balfour-Guthrie Co., and a representative of that company went out with me to the court. We arrived at court between 4 and 5 o'clock and I told the secretary of Judge Louderback that I was there in this receivership matter. I finally saw Judge Louderback and the man that was there with the bond filled it out and it was filed, as I recall it, and I qualified as receiver.

Q. Will you state what conversation you had with Judge Louderback at that time?—A. All that I can remember that I had was that he said, "Go along. I know you know your business and will take care of things. If at any time I can be helpful and am free I will be glad to consult with you."

Q. When you saw Judge Louderback, was the representative of this bonding company present during all the time?—
A. Yes; he was.

Q. In the same room?—A. Yes; he was. He had to be for the purpose of filling out the bond.

Q. Do you recall about what time it was that you left the courthouse after qualifying as receiver?—A. Sometime after 5 o'clock, as I recall it.

Q. Where did you go from there?—A. I went back to the hotel and went up to my room.

Q. That is, your residence at the Fairmont Hotel?—
A. Yes.

Q. Did you later on that evening see Mr. W. S. Leake?—
A. I did. After dinner was finished I went down to tell him that I had been out to court, and I was qualified as receiver.

Q. Did you go to his room?—A. I did.

Q. What talk did you have with him there that evening in his room?—A. All that I can recall is that I just told him what had happened and that I would have to take charge of the firm the next morning.

Q. Did you state anything to him at that time on the question of attorneys for the receiver?—A. I did.

Q. What did you say to him?—A. I said I wanted to call up Mr. Short at his home as soon as his dinner was finished.

Q. Did you call up Mr. Short?—A. I did. It was then, I think, about 8:15 or something of that kind, and Mr. Leake said, "You can use my phone here." I called up Mr. Short from Mr. Leake's room.

Q. Where did Mr. Short live at that time?—A. Woodside.

Q. You were advised of that fact?—A. Oh, yes; I knew Mr. Short.

Q. You knew where he lived before?—A. Yes.

Q. What was your talk with Mr. Short over the telephone that evening?—A. I told Mr. Short I was going to act in this Russell-Colvin matter, and I wanted to know whether his firm would represent me; that I did not know anything about financial affairs but that I would like to have him meet me at Cavalier's in the morning between 8 and 9, so we could talk it over.

Q. Did you at that time think Mr. Short was a member of that firm?—A. I certainly did.

Q. Did you in that conversation over the phone make an appointment with Mr. Short?—A. I did to meet him at Cavalier & Co. between 8 and 9 next morning. I wanted to go to the Russell-Colvin place at 9 o'clock.

Q. Did you meet Mr. Short at the office of Cavalier & Co. the next morning?—A. I did. I think it was about 8:30.

Q. While you were there did Mr. Erskine come over?—A. He did. After I had made my arrangements with Mr. Short and discussed various questions he called up Mr. Morse Erskine and asked him to meet us at the Russell-Colvin Co.

Q. Whom did you employ as your counsel in the Russell-Colvin matter?—A. Keyes & Erskine, as I thought. I thought Mr. Short was a member of the firm.

Q. You thought that Keyes & Erskine were the two Erskines and Mr. Short?—A. Yes.

Q. How soon did you start to work on the matters of the receivership?—A. I think we were over to the Russell-Colvin office by 9 o'clock.

Q. After you had looked into the affairs of Russell-Colvin & Co. did you ascertain whether or not it owned any bonds of the Consolidated Box Co.?—A. Yes; I did.

Q. How many did you ascertain it owned?—A. It owned about 60 per cent of the issue, or almost 300,000 bonds out of the 500,000.

Q. Did you ascertain whether or not any of those bonds were pledged?—A. Yes.

Q. How many of them did you ascertain were pledged and for what sum?—A. There were around $69,000 or $70,000 pledged.

Q. Did you ascertain whether or not any of them had been sold by Russell-Colvin & Co. under so-called "repurchase agreements"?—A. Yes. They could not sell the bonds, so they induced the banks to take the bonds on a repurchase agreement.

Q. To what amount had they so induced the banks to take the bonds?—A. One hundred and twenty-two thousand five hundred dollars.

Q. At what price had they guaranteed the bank to repurchase them?—A. They guaranteed almost any price from par up to 105, as I recall it.

Q. Were those bonds at that time salable in the market?—A. The only market for those bonds was the Russell-Colvin office. It was their own underwriting. They were the only market, and without their support there would have been no sale.

Q. In other words, they were not listed bonds?—A. No; they were not listed. In fact they tried to sell them, and that is why they had 60 percent of the issue on their hands. They could not sell them.

Q. What was the amount of the issue?—A. Five hundred thousand dollars.

Q. Did you ascertain, after you had been appointed receiver, whether or not Russell-Colvin Co. owned any stock in that Consolidated Box matter?—A. They had the B stock, which gave them control, and some A stock.

Q. After your appointment, did you ascertain whether or not the Russell-Colvin people, a few days before this bankruptcy matter, had made some contract to sell the control in the Consolidated Box Co.?—A. I did. Mr. Blumberg came in to see me the following day after my appointment, Saturday morning; told me that he had a deal on for the control of the company, and that if I wanted to get some money into the estate, he had a deal he would like to put through. I asked him why he was held up. He said he was afraid a receiver would upset the deal, and he would like to get my approval.

Q. Did you upset the deal?—A. I told him we would have a meeting that day. I called up my attorneys, arranged a meeting at 12 o'clock, and we were in discussion for a couple of hours. My attorneys looked over the contract, decided that it was not enforceable—that is, that it was executory—and that we could rescind it whenever we wished.

Q. For what price had this concern, 2 or 3 days before the receivership, agreed to sell the control in that company to Mr. Blumberg?—A. The company was in very dire distress, needed money, and they sold the control of the company for $7,246.

Q. And that was the contract; was it?—A. That was the contract.

Q. Did you find, upon investigation, that the stock had been put up in escrow?—A. It had been put up in escrow.

Q. And who was the escrow holder?—A. Francis C. Brown.

Q. One of the witnesses who have appeared here?—A. Yes.

Q. Without going into details, did you serve or cause your attorneys to serve a notice of disaffirmance of that contract?—A. There is no question but that they received notice, and knew that we were not going to go through with the contract.

Q. Did you subsequently dispose of all of those bonds and that stock?—A. I did.

Q. How long were you negotiating and working on the matter of disposing of that stock, which was under contract for the amount stated, and those bonds, before you effected the sale?—A. At least 3 months. We carried on extensive negotiations. We had a great many legal fights. We appeared in court a great many times. Every obstacle was put in the way of reselling the securities to another man. I finally was unable to induce or urge Mr. Blumberg to get off the board of directors, and certain directors, and I finally sold the plant, the securities I held, to Mr. Blumberg for the same amount that I had already sold it to another gentleman for.

Q. In other words, had you found a purchaser different from Mr. Blumberg for that property?—A. I had.

Q. And who was that person?—A. Mr. Spiegelman.

Q. As a result of the negotiations and what you did, what did you finally get in cash for those bonds?—A. The bonds alone, or the whole transaction? Around $130,000 was the total purchase price.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, we object to that question and the answer because the question and the answer are not calculated to elicit the facts but are calculated to confuse the facts. The first contemplated sale was with regard to stocks. The control of the voting power did not control the physical property, did not control the bonds. The latter sale with regard to which the witness is testifying was in reference to both the stocks, the bonds, and the physical property.

The WITNESS. That is correct.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. We should like to have that appear.

The WITNESS. That is correct.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, if I have not made the matter clear, it has been due to my desire to be as brief as possible in the matter. I will proceed a little further, and see if I can meet the objection of the honorable manager.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Hunter, was the stock of the company, under the contract you have referred to, the control?—A. It was. The total B issue was $56,000. I was selling 28,801 shares of B stock and 7,246 shares of A stock.

Q. Were these bonds that I have called your attention to salable?—A. They were not. Russell-Colvin had tried a long time to sell them, and they could not sell them.

Q. Did you, as receiver, try to sell these bonds?—A. I did. I might enlarge on that.

In our discussion with Mr. Blumberg, I asked him what he would do in regard to something like $84,000 worth of paper-box machinery which Russell-Colvin held in the subsidiary—what it could be sold to him for. He was very evasive; he said maybe $5,000. That is the reason we wanted to rescind the contract. Also, we asked him about the bonds: Would he buy the bonds? Well, he did not know; he might buy the bonds, and he did not know whether he would or not, but he would have to get control first. So we determined and decided, and so stated at that time, that if we lost control of this company by a small payment of $7,200, we would be unable to sell the machinery or sell the bonds; there would be no market, and the estate would suffer by it. I think all the evidence goes to show that that was true.

Q. With those thoughts in mind you brought about the sale to which you have referred; did you?—A. I did. Mr. Blumberg did everything in his power to prevent the sale.

Q. And the amount you realized for the receivership was how much?—A. The sale amounted to something around $130,000. I can give you the accurate figures if you wish them.

Q. That was received in cash; was it?—A. That was received in cash. I might enlarge on that, so that the question will not be brought up. That did not all go into the estate. There were other bonds that were sold to assist in cleaning up the pledges.

Q. You have referred to the fact that $122,500 of these bonds were out on repurchase agreement.—A. I have.

Q. What, if anything, did you do in order to relieve the estate from that obligation?—A. These repurchase bonds naturally had no market, as well as the other bonds. Only by the deal which I consummated, first with Mr. Spiegelman and then finally with Mr. Blumberg and his associates, was it possible to enter into negotiations with the holders of these repurchase bonds. We then entered into negotiations with the holders of those bonds, and, due to the splendid price I received for the bonds in the sale, I was able to get a very splendid settlement with these holders. The average sale of those bonds was, I think, almost $700 a bond.

Q. How did you arrange to relieve the trust estate from the repurchase agreement relating to those $122,000 in bonds?—A. I and my attorney carried on negotiations for months, you might say. We met with these holders of the bonds, and we insisted that the price obtained in the sale to Mr. Blumberg was the controlling price. However, some were settled on the basis of $500 a bond; but the majority were sold on the basis of around $750 a bond. The average price of the bonds sold to Mr. Blumberg was $600.

Q. Did you succeed in getting a release for the bankrupt or receivership estate from the obligation to repurchase those bonds by agreeing that they should have a claim against the estate?—A. Yes. It left a small claim against the estate in the form of a general creditor, due to the fact that the majority of the claims, something like $118,000, was reduced, I think, to about $20,000.

Q. And that obligation was wiped out in that way?—A. It was.

Q. Did you sell the seat owned by the Russell-Colvin people in the San Francisco Stock Exchange?—A. I did.

Q. Did anyone but yourself and your attorneys inaugurate the proceedings and follow the proceedings leading up to the sale of that seat?—A. No. I took the matter up with a great many people, my friends, to try to locate a purchaser. Finally we contacted a man who wanted to buy a seat—it was a partnership of three men—and we sold the seat for $75,000.

Q. After you were appointed receiver, and after you had an opportunity to look into the affairs of Russell-Colvin & Co., did you ascertain whether it owned any stock in a company known as the "Coen Co."?—A. Yes. They had almost the control—not quite the control—of the Coen Co., another underwriting of theirs.

Q. Was the stock that they held the control, or less than the control?—A. Slightly less than the control, which made it very difficult to sell.

Q. Did that stock have any sale value on the market at that time?—A. None whatever.

Q. Did you institute efforts to sell the stock?—A. I interviewed dozens of people. I tried to get brokers to support the market in the stock, principally the A stock. I had people call on the president. The president insisted that the stock was worthless, the company was not doing well, and I had great difficulty in selling.

Q. Did you finally sell it?—A. I did.

Q. For how much?—A. Twenty-five thousand five hundred dollars.

Q. In cash?—A. In cash.

Q. After investigating the affairs of this company, did you ascertain whether or not they owned any stock, common or preferred, and any bonds and notes of the Anchorage Light & Power Co.?—A. They did. That was another one of their underwritings. They built an electric plant in Alaska, at Anchorage, which cost about $700,000. The original estimate was about $350,000. They had been unable to sell a large block of the preferred stock, and had a few bonds, I think something like 39 out of 350, on pledge with a bank. They did not have control of this company either, which made it difficult to sell.

Q. Did you ascertain whether or not the Russell-Colvin Co. had underwritten the bonds and the preferred stock of the Anchorage Light & Power Co.?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any sale for that stock or those bonds at the time you were receiver?—A. None whatever. I suppose you could sell them—

Q. Did you make efforts to sell them?—A. I suppose you could sell anything for a small amount, but I mean a fair price. There was no fair offer anywhere. I could probably have sold the bundle of stock for a cent a share.

Q. Do you recall in amount how many bonds the Russell-Colvin Co. had and owned of the Anchorage Light & Power Co.?—A. They owned 35, and there were 4 other bonds in pledges, as I recall.

Q. Were the 35 that they owned also in pledge?—A. They were pledged with a bank at Anchorage for a loan.

Q. Do you recall, in round numbers, how many shares of the preferred stock of that company they owned?—A. One thousand and fifty-three, of par value of $100, making $105,300 book value.

Q. Do you recall how many shares of the common stock in that company they owned?—A. Eighteen thousand six hundred and twenty-nine, if I remember correctly.

Q. What was the amount of the notes that Russell-Colvin & Co. held of the Anchorage Light & Power Co. at the time you were appointed receiver?—A. The plant, as I stated a few minutes ago, cost a great deal more than they expected. They first came out with a preferred-stock issue, and then they came out with another which they were not able to sell; and finally they had to put up the money themselves to complete the plant. This represented advances to the extent of $63,000, in round numbers.

Q. Did you endeavor, after you were appointed receiver, to collect those notes so aggregating $63,000?—A. I did.

Q. Could you collect any of it?—A. No.

Q. Subsequently what arrangement did you make, if any, to dispose of the notes and the stock and the 39 bonds?—A. I pressed the president of the company, Mr. Reid, to do something. He finally came down to see me in San Francisco with a banker by the name of Rasmussen. We had several days' negotiations. I could not get Mr. Reid or Mr. Rasmussen to make me an offer. We did, however—the banker and I got together at breakfast and decided that we should cut expenses. So I told Mr. Reid that we would have to cut expenses at the plant if I were not to press payment on the notes. We entered into an agreement to take a note for a small balance that had not been so taken care of, and for doing that there was a very extensive legal agreement drawn up which made it incumbent upon Mr. Reid to keep the expenses at not exceeding a thousand dollars a month, that his salary was to be nominal, that anything he ever did was to be approved by me, that he was to put the banker on the board of directors and in charge of the finance committee, and that they should cut down their office expense and the salary of the attorney and the salaries of the accountants, and so forth.

Q. As a result of what you did, did you finally make some kind of a deal over these notes and this stock and these bonds?—A. As in all other deals, I had to work up an outside deal. I could not get any place with Mr. Reid. He temporized. I pressed him. I have written a great many telegrams and a great many letters threatening receivership, and so forth. Finally I got a friend of mine, an investment banker, to take some interest. We outlined a sale that would be agreeable to me for the securities. I asked Mr. Reid if he was willing to enter into the transaction with him, that was, the investment banker. Mr. Reid immediately did not want anybody else in the transaction, and wired me substantially the same offer that this man was supposed to enter into with me. As a consequence, Mr. Reid came down with the attorney for the company and I sold the notes at 100 cents on the dollar as against first-mortgage bonds that were selling at that time at 20 to 25 cents on the dollar. He paid me $7 a share for the preferred stock. The total amount involved was $70,000 and 6 percent interest. As I stated before, I did not have control, so, as a condition to selling this to Mr. Reid and his associates, I made him pledge his stock. This gave me control, so that if Mr. Reid ever fails to complete his bargain, I have control of the company, and can sell it.

Q. According to this agreement—

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. BLACK. I have read the pleadings very carefully, that is, those which appear here, and I do not see where any charge of incompetency is made against this gentleman as receiver. The parliamentary inquiry is, if that is not in issue, and if the managers on the part of the House do not claim that his administration showed incompetency, is it pertinent to go entirely through with the evidence as to his conduct of the estate? Of course, if there were charges against this gentleman as receiver, the evidence would be pertinent. I propound that as a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, may I answer?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will be glad if counsel will, because the Chair has wondered for half an hour what the purpose of this testimony is.

Mr. LINFORTH. The purpose is twofold. While the competency of the receiver is not attacked, in the fifth article, as amended, it is alleged that the fees were excessive, that the judge willfully allowed excessive fees, and the witness is detailing not only the services he rendered but the services which the attorney rendered in connection with these particular matters, which bears upon the question as to whether or not the fees were excessive.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a charge in the article to the effect that the fees paid this receiver were excessive?

Mr. LINFORTH. I do not take it that there is any specific charge that his fees were excessive, but there is a specific charge that the fees of the attorneys were excessive. The witness is relating certain transactions and certain deals which took place which resulted in disposing of certain assets of the concern, in which he had the advice and the cooperation and the assistance of his counsel, and that in so acting, he was acting under the advice of counsel, and that counsel prepared the necessary papers to consummate his case.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In the opinion of the Chair there is not a sufficient showing that this witness had any knowledge as to whether or not the fees allowed the attorney were excessive, and unless there is something more material developed, and promptly developed, than has been developed in regard to that matter, the Chair will be inclined to rule out questions similar to those which have been answered.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, the managers on the part of the House meant to charge and they do insist that the fees to this receiver are excessive.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If that be true, the Chair is of opinion that it is quite pertinent to go into the particulars of the services he rendered.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, as my attention was distracted, may I have the statement made by the honorable manager read?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reporter will read the statement.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Before that is read, we did not make any charge and do not insist on any charge of incompetency, but we do intend to charge and insist that the fees were excessive.

Mr. LINFORTH. That is, the fees to this receiver?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. To this receiver, as well as to his attorney.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Mr. Witness, in describing the services rendered, eliminate as much of the conversation as possible, without suppressing any of the material facts. In other words, be just as brief as you can be, without neglecting to state the material facts of the matter.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, I think there is an unanswered question. Will the reporter please read it?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reporter will repeat the question.

The OFFICIAL REPORTER. The last sentence of the answer of the witness was as follows:

This gave me control, so that if Mr. Reid ever fails to complete his bargain, I have control of the company and can sell it.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. According to this agreement, what amount did the buyer agree to pay for these notes, this stock, and these bonds?—A. Sixty thousand dollars, plus 6 percent on deferred payments.

Q. I do not know whether I got your answer correctly. Did you say 60,000 or 70,000?—A. Sixty—seventy thousand. I beg your pardon.

Q. Seventy thousand dollars. Did that arrangement take the form of a written agreement?—A. It did.

Q. Who prepared the agreement?—A. My attorneys.

Q. During the various proceedings and negotiations that were had on the subject of this stock, these notes, and these bonds, did you advise and consult with your counsel?—A. Always.

Q. Were they present at the times of the holding of the negotiations with the people from Alaska to whom you have referred?—A. Whenever it was necessary.

Q. In this agreement to which you have referred, whereby you sold this property for $70,000, during what period is the payment to be made?—A. Over the next 2 or 3 years.

Q. Has any part of the $70,000 been paid?—A. $12,000. There is a balance due of $58,000.

Q. Did you do anything in the way of taking security for the faithful performance of that agreement on the part of the buyer?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, we do believe, with all fairness to everybody in interest, that that sort of interrogation runs more into detail than is necessary to enlighten the Senate with reference to what took place. For instance, asking the witness, who has made the transaction, whether or not he took security. We assume that the witness did do what common sense would suggest that anybody with ordinary sense ought to have done. Merely for the purpose of shortening the interrogation, we believe that that character of testimony ought to be avoided if it can be done.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, may I add that I want to prove that the witness did what the learned manager says common sense would suggest to anyone that he should do.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. The point is that we do not question that the witness has common sense and exercised it in handling the transactions of the concern.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Inasmuch as there is no charge of incompetency on the part of this receiver, the Chair is of opinion that it is not necessary to indulge in any details as to the manner in which he performed those services. Unless there is some challenge as to the efficiency of those services, all matters pertaining to proof that those services were promptly discharged will be excluded.

Mr. LINFORTH. We bow to the will of the Chair and will not go into further detail on the matter.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Hunter, did you sell any other property belonging to the Russell-Colvin Co.?—A. Yes; I sold many miscellaneous things, one a three-quarters percent interest in the Peerless Paper Box Co., furniture and fixtures to the extent of $10,000, and investment trusts, and many other items.

Q. While you were receiver, during the first year of your term, what were your hours devoted to this business?—A. I hoped to get through in about 3 months, so I worked day and night, and I finally finished my report after 10 months' work, with a large crew of accountants.

Q. What were your working hours devoted to the business of this concern?—A. Every day in the week, Saturdays and Sundays, holidays and nights.

Q. What hours—how many hours a day?—A. We worked all night.

Q. That is a little worse than the Senate, but not much. [Laughter.]—A. No; it is not.

Q. During the time when you were so active, what time did you have of your counsel, what time was devoted to you?—A. This morning I looked over my bill of services. I think that would probably illustrate better than anything else how much I called upon my attorneys. Almost every transaction in a brokerage office has a legal snarl to it. I looked over the first two or three pages of my bill of services, and I think there were dozens of items which were referred to my attorney to consider and answer. The tracing of securities, and so forth, required all the time of Mr. Short. I used Mr. Morse Erskine almost altogether in carrying on the negotiations and sale of the Consolidated Box and other items of that sort. Finally, Mr. Erskine came in toward the end to assist me personally in completing the report, tracing the securities, and that end of it.

Q. During the first year of your receivership, how much of the time of Mr. John Douglas Short and Mr. Morse Erskine was devoted to you?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, we except to that, on the ground that it would be hearsay. The witness does not know how much time they put in.

Mr. LINFORTH. I will ask the question if you know?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the witness knows, he may answer. If he does not, he may not answer.

The WITNESS. My agreement with my attorneys was that they would give me—

Mr. Manager BROWNING. We object, because the answer is not responsive to the question in any way.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is sustained.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Do you know how much of their time you did take which was devoted to you during the first year of the receivership?—A. Practically all of the time of Mr. Short and a large part of Mr. Morse Erskine's time.

RECESS

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I move that the Senate, sitting as a Court of Impeachment, stand in recess for 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Utah.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 1 o'clock and 2 minutes p.m.) the Senate, sitting as a Court of Impeachment, took a recess for 5 minutes. On the expiration of the recess the Senate, sitting as a court, reassembled.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, may I submit some questions at this point? They might be submitted later, but I may not be able to be present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida wishes to submit several interrogatories, which the clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. Before your interview with Mr. Short, before or following your appointment as receiver, had anyone suggested him?

The WITNESS. No. The only reference to Mr. Short was on the occasion when Mr. Leake asked me if I could serve and stated that Judge Louderback had mentioned his name to Mr. Strong.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. Or the firm you supposed he was connected with as attorneys for you as receiver?

The WITNESS. No; I always think of Mr. Short as the firm of Keyes & Erskine.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. Did the respondent suggest or advise you respecting attorneys you should engage?

The WITNESS. He did not.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. What arrangement was made as to fees, if any?

The WITNESS. None whatever.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Counsel will proceed.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Hunter, in view of the services that you have mentioned, will you please go on, in your own way, and state what you did in the liquidation of this company?—A. I will treat of the assets of the firm, and I should like to make this statement, that Russell-Colvin & Co. had a capital stock of around $182,000 at the beginning of 1927, and they made $80,000. The next year they had about the same amount, or $182,000, and they made $785,000. This enormous profit was arrived at by their underwriting. They merged several paper-box companies, at a cost of $890,000, and added over $500,000 water to the sale price. They took over the Coen Co., which is not a merger, and sold those securities and added a quarter of a million. This money went into the profit-and-loss account. That made it very difficult to make sales. I will not go into the details of the sales from now on.

During the very time we were carrying on negotiations for the sale of these assets the various problems connected with the sales arose. We were liquidating the pledges. It was necessary to liquidate the securities owned by Russell-Colvin to be able to liquidate the pledges. A great many of the securities were sold by E. A. Pierce and Russell Miller. Barneson & Co. could not sell the securities because they did not have the margins for them and would have to resort to the procedure required by the Civil Code. We had to prepare orders, and so forth, permitting them to sell without going through a lengthy procedure. We liquidated all the pools and pledges over a period of months.

Next we also had leases on the property, which we rescinded. They had entered into a lease with the Mills Building, calling for a large sum of money over a period of years. We rescinded that contract, and finally had to allow a claim, I think, of something like $6,000, and $2,000 for rent, and eliminated any further payment on the lease. We rescinded other leases. I think that covers the assets of the partnership.

A great problem in the liquidation of a brokerage shop is caused, as I understand, by the right of the owner of securities to search out his property and get it where we can find it. Also, due to the fact that there are many legal complications, such as the problem of agent and principal, bailee and bailor, pledgee and pledgor, and so forth, a great amount of legal work had to be done to determine whose securities they were, under what condition they were in the hands of Russell-Colvin & Co., and what had to be done to make it possible to make delivery of these securities.

Another very serious problem was in that Russell-Colvin had borrowed, or overborrowed, something like $330,000 on the securities of customers. By that I mean that the customers had borrowed, we will say, five or six hundred thousand dollars, and they had borrowed eight or nine hundred thousand dollars. When that happens the customer is put to a great disadvantage. They had used this money in their own affairs, and, naturally, there are no securities, when the assets are liquidated, to deliver to the owners. So then we had the hypothecation and rehypothecation and superior liens and superior rights of individuals to determine. We had various classifications of creditors. There was an enormous number of questions which I had to put up to my attorney and which we had to work out. I studied the law—read the law, rather; I did not study it—and worked out the procedure to delineate the result of our tracing and searching and the distribution of the equities and the dividends in the pools and the final liquidation of the customers' accounts.

Our total claims were something like 679 claims. Many of the claims, I think over 100, did not agree with the books. This offered a difficult situation. We discussed the matter of how to handle them. The majority of brokerage houses employ no accountants. The majority of the customers are forced to hire accountants and attorneys to search out the securities. The majority of the settlements were finally settled on a kind of Peter-to-pay-Paul idea, sort of an average. We agreed that we would not employ accountants at a cost of $20 to $50 a day. We would assist the claimants in every way we could to file their claims; and in the filing of the claims of those 100 or more that did not agree with the books, Mr. Short and I met with those claimants and finally got all, I think, but a few, 7 or 8, to stipulate that the records were correct.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. KING. We are sitting as a Court of Impeachment, a matter of very great importance. I do not want to suggest the absence of a quorum. I express the hope that more of the Members of the court may be in attendance.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hopes that that hope may bear fruit. Does the Senator from Utah wish to suggest the absence of a quorum?

Mr. KING. No; I shall not do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness may proceed.

The WITNESS (continuing). At the end of 10 months, working with a large crew of men, I had my report prepared to submit to the court and get the approval of the claimants. We filed that report and had lengthy sessions with the court, in which certain attorneys representing clients objected to our settlement.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Let me interrupt at this point to ask you with how many banks, brokers, or concerns did you find the stocks and securities of customers placed by the Russell-Colvin Co.?—A. There were 46 different pools, as we call them, in which we had to trace the securities of individuals. Some of those pools were very short, because a man, when he sells a security and does not deliver the security, is a pool. There were 3 large brokerage concerns, about 13 banks, and the balance in various places of a smaller account.

Q. Using the crew that you had and giving the matter your own attention with the aid of your counsel that you have suggested, how long did it take you before you were able to segregate and put in the proper class the six hundred and odd claims?—A. I would say 6 months. The first 3 months the claims were being filed and we started working out the debts of the individual accounts on securities to determine the equities. We carried on other forms of accounting procedure to be ready when the claims were filed. After the claims were all filed, at the end of something like 90 days, we then had to take the claims and reconcile them with the record and meet with the customers and work out an agreement as to stipulations. I think that answers the question.

Q. During these proceedings, who did you have as your bookkeeper?—A. Mr. Joe Zolinsky.

Q. He had formerly been an auditor with Russell-Colvin Co.?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you stated, not fully, but generally, the services that you rendered?—A. No. It is much longer than that. We had to appear in court and get approval of our settlement sheets with the customers. They were finally worked out so that accepting claimants were taken care of, and then we had to make effort with the representatives of the general creditors. We then had to make settlement; in other words, I made demand upon the men who owned the securities to come in and pay the balance due and I would deliver them their securities. A number of claimants, naturally, those who had no equity or those whose securities were below the amount owed against those securities, refused to put up the money or take the securities. This forced me to sell the securities. I carried on this sale. Then I had to do my work all over again. This was simplified, naturally. This affected only, I would say, 70 or 80 accounts. There were a lot of fractional shares that had to go into that sale. Then I notified other customers what they owed. You see, I was collecting money from one customer that owed on securities and paying it to another customer whose securities had been sold to satisfy the superior lien and pay the money out.

The second sale or third sale, you might say, that I had solved the problem, and we prepared a final settlement as to what we would pay the customers. This was about 18 months after receivership started. The legal procedure had been gone through with. We had 90 days for appeal, and we paid out and delivered in securities $400,000 or $500,000.

Q. In that connection, how much was paid out to the customers who had preferred claims?—A. I have not those figures, Mr. Linforth. You mean the general preferred creditors?

Q. Those that had stocks that were fully paid up.—A. As I recall, there was around $375,000.

Q. What percentage was that?—A. 100 percent.

Q. Those that were in the marginal list, what percentage did they get?—A. Pardon me if I mention this: We have three classes of preferred creditors, those who have fully paid securities, those who did not sign margin cards and had no agreement with Russell-Colvin to borrow more money than they were borrowing, so they received 100 percent. Then we had the salary claims, tax claims, and so forth, to satisfy 100 percent. The margin traders who signed a margin card and who authorized Russell-Colvin to borrow more money than they were borrowing were paid, I think, around 50 percent.

Q. And the general creditors received what?—A. To date?

Q. Yes.—A. 28 percent.

Q. How much have you still and what, in your judgment, will it pay in percentage to the general creditors?—A. May I inject just a statement there? The margin traders who received about 50 percent out of the pool became general creditors for the balance of their accounts. This increased the general-creditor item from $152,000 to $500,000. This is all due to the Russell-Colvin Co. overborrowing on those securities. They also received 28 percent. The margin creditors received 50 percent and an additional 28 percent on the 50 percent.

Francis Brown had a company subsidiary in which he was a director called the "Continental Investment." This stock was wholly owned by Russell-Colvin. Over 2 years ago he liquidated that company, and there was in that company $5,000, in round figures, due from the sale I made in the Consolidated Box deal. Mr. Brown has not delivered that money to me yet. It is held up because of a fear that the income-tax people will make a claim against the directors for some income tax. There have been long negotiations. I have written the collector of internal revenue and tried to get the thing settled. I have that $5,000 coming. I have $58,000 coming from the Anchorage deal. I think that is all.

Q. How much in percentage will that pay to the general creditors?—A. It will pay another 12 percent as, if, and when collected.

Q. Have you briefly but generally stated the services rendered by you as receiver?—A. Quite briefly.

Q. Are you still acting as receiver?—A. I am. We have a great many bad accounts that we are trying to collect. Those accounts were turned over to the Retailers' Credit Association. I want to mention this because I want everyone to understand that I was not in the position to know whether a person had assets or not. The Retailers' Credit Association, representing, I think, 12,000 business firms, were in a position to know who had assets and who did not have assets; so we turned these accounts over to them to collect. We have already, though, filed suits against quite a few and have done everything we could to collect money where we could. We billed customers and made demand for payments. The Retailers' Credit Association and their attorney are carrying on the collection of those accounts and when they wish any information or appearance in court I have to go there. My time is now only nominal so far as the receivership is concerned.

Q. What amount have you received in compensation for your services as receiver?—A. $40,500.

Q. That is the full total amount you have received?—A. That is the total amount.

Q. Did Judge Louderback receive one cent of that?—A. Not one cent.

Q. Did Mr. Short or anyone else except yourself receive a cent of it?—A. Not one cent.

Mr. LINFORTH. You may take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Mr. Hunter, what was the first position you held?—A. I was manager of the bank in Bisbee, Ariz.

Q. What was your salary?—A. I think it was $175 a month.

Q. That much per month?—A. That much per month; but the arrangement—may I enlarge upon that?

Q. Yes.—A. But the arrangement with the man for whom I worked gave us a great deal of outside work. I was traveling for him from time to time, and I think my income ran three, four, or five hundred dollars—trips into Mexico and various properties that he owned.

Q. What was the next position you held?—A. I had a position with the First National Bank of Berkeley.

Q. What was your salary there?—A. I do not recall what the salary was. I think it was three or four hundred dollars.

Q. What was the next position you held?—A. I was invited by Mr. Drum to become a vice president of the Mercantile Trust Co. I received, as I recall it, $1,000 a month and bonus.

Q. What did it all amount to?—A. I do not know; we will say $12,000 a year.

Q. What was the next position?—A. The next position I held I was with the Oakland Title & Trust Co., in charge of their investment company, making loans, appraising properties, and so forth.

Q. What was the salary?—A. If I remember correctly, $500.

Q. Per month?—A. Per month.

Q. What was the next position?—A. I took a receivership for the Security Bond & Finance Co. Then I went with the United—

Q. Just a moment. In that receivership you had a specified salary that you received as receiver?—A. Yes.

Q. What was that?—A. I do not know. I think it was around a thousand dollars a month.

Q. Was it not $450 a month? Do you not recollect that?—A. No; a thousand dollars a month, I am quite certain.

Q. How long did it run?—A. It is still running.

Q. Do you still receive a thousand dollars a month?—A. No; I have not received anything for 6 years.

Q. How long did your salary go on at that rate?—A. It only lasted while the receivership was running. I think I operated 14 ranches and various items, and I think—I do not know; 8 or 10 months, maybe 12.

Q. The assets gave out, did they?—A. They were not there, except the operation of the ranches, and getting crops, and so forth, off the ranches.

Q. What was the next position you held?—A. I was with the United Bank & Trust Co.

Q. What was your salary?—A. Five hundred dollars a month.

Q. And the next position you held?—A. With the San Francisco Stock Exchange.

Q. What was your salary there?—A. Seven hundred and fifty dollars a month.

Q. From there you went to Cavalier?—A. I went to Cavalier; yes, sir.

Q. At what salary?—A. At $600 a month, with the invitation to become a partner. Mr. Cavalier, as all brokers, did make an enormous sum of money; and to become a partner in a firm like that meant quite a bit.

Q. You did become a partner in William Cavalier?—A. I did not.

Q. Did you not remain on the building committee of the stock exchange as a partner of this firm?—A. No; I did not, Mr. BROWNING. One of the committee resigned. Mr. Schwartz put me on that committee. I was on the building committee, but I was not a partner of Cavalier at that time. The agreement—do you want me to give you the details?

Q. You need not do that; but Mr. Schwartz did understand at that time that you were a partner of William Cavalier, did he not?—A. I do not think so. I think he understood definitely that in 90 days I was to be considered and become a partner; but Mr. Cavalier did not want to make me a partner.

Q. When did you go with Cavalier?—A. In June 1929, as I recall.

Q. But you say you did not become a partner?—A. No; Mr. Cavalier did not want to put up the partnership papers at the end of 90 days. He had just joined the New York Stock Exchange and it is a very grueling examination, and he did not want to do it again; so he said, "Please do not make me do that at this time." At the end of the year the deal had changed. I was no longer to put up my capital and receive a salary, but all partners had agreed to have only a drawing account; so I decided that I did not want to become a partner, because I could see that my capital would not bring in a very large return; I would soon be eating up my capital.

Q. What was your drawing account then, after that new arrangement was made?—A. I was on salary, as I recall—$600.

Q. And at the time you were appointed receiver you were on that salary?—A. I was.

Q. You were devoting your full time to Cavalier & Co. at that time?—A. Surely.

Q. Cavalier & Co. had one of their partners as a member of the board of governors or directors of the stock exchange?—A. I had forgotten that he was a director until I heard the testimony yesterday, but he must have been.

Q. Mr. Hunter, you state, as I understand you, that the first you heard of the Russell-Colvin case was on the morning of the 11th of March, when you talked to Mr. Strong about it out at the Federal building?—A. I did not remember that he mentioned the case; but if he said he did, why, then, he did.

Q. But you remember it now, do you not?—A. I do not remember that he mentioned the name of the Russell-Colvin Co.

Q. But you so testified a few moments ago, did you not?—A. I testified with that qualification.

Q. Did you qualify it when you testified in chief here?—A. I thought I had.

Q. You also talked to Mr. Lloyd Dinkelspiel about it that day, and asked him the question what he was out there for, and he told you?—A. I do not recall talking to Mr. Lloyd Dinkelspiel, but that is immaterial. If he said I did, he probably remembers it. I do not.

Q. You testified before the committee when it was in San Francisco last September, I believe?—A. I did; yes.

Q. I will ask you if this testimony was given at that time—

Mr. LINFORTH. What page?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. On page 9 (reading):

Q. When you asked him about jury duty did you say that you were available for a receivership?—A. No; I didn't know there was a Russell-Colvin matter up at that time, as a matter of fact.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. You gave that testimony?—A. Perhaps I had better mention whom I talked with. I was talking to Judge Louderback, was I not, at that time? Is not that the conversation you have reference to? I do not recall the statement.

Q. Yes.—A. It was Monday, the 10th, that I was impeached as a juror. I talked to Judge Louderback that night. I do not recall that I knew anything about the Russell-Colvin matter at that time. I think I read it in the papers probably the next morning.

Q. You are certain, now, that it was the 10th instead of the 11th that you talked to Judge Louderback?—A. Absolutely—absolutely. I remember it distinctly.

Q. What has refreshed your memory since you testified in San Francisco about that?—A. What was my testimony in San Francisco?

Q. That it was on the 10th or the 11th.—A. Well, is not that close enough?

Q. No; not close enough for the purposes of this case.—A. I did not think at the time that it was necessarily accurate. If the question had been put to me, "Was it on the 10th or the 11th?" I would have looked up my calendar and stated so. It was the night of the 10th that I talked to Judge Louderback. I remember it distinctly. I came in from the court, and Judge Louderback had stated on the stand that he regretted to force business men to do jury duty, and that if a man wished to get away and was not on duty, he would try to accommodate him.

Q. I have not asked you about the conversation; but I am asking you now if it was on the 9th, the 10th, or the 11th?—A. The 10th—Monday, the 10th.

Q. You have just stated that it was on the 9th or the 10th. Which one is accurate?—A. The 10th.

Q. Why did you say it was the 9th or the 10th just a moment ago?—A. I do not recall that I made the statement that it was "the 9th or the 10th."

Q. Or did you say "the night of the 10th"?—A. "The night of the 10th."

Q. I beg your pardon; I misunderstood you.

The first one that approached you about this matter was Mr. Sam Leake?—A. It was.

Q. Where was this?—A. In the lobby of the hotel.

Q. He came to you about what time of day?—A. Late in the afternoon, when I came home from work, as I recall.

Q. What was said between you and him in that conversation?—A. All that was said was, he asked me if I could act in the Russell-Colvin matter if Mr. Strong could not.

Q. That is all of the conversation?—A. No. He went on to tell me that the judge had told him that Mr. Strong had insisted upon having Heller, Ehrmann & McAuliffe as his attorneys, and that Judge Louderback felt that as long as Mr. Strong was auditor for the exchange and auditor for Russell-Colvin he should employ other counsel. He said that he had mentioned Short and Keyes & Erskine, as I recall.

Q. Did he not tell you then that the trouble arose because he would not select Short as his attorney?—A. I do not think Mr. Leake gave me that specific reason.

Q. Did you not understand from the conversation you had with him that that was the reason for his trouble with Mr. Strong?—A. No. I understood that Judge Louderback wanted him to select other attorneys than Heller, Ehrmann, McAuliffe & White.

Q. You did not testify to that conversation when we asked you about it in San Francisco; did you, Mr. Hunter?—A. I do not think I was asked about it.

Q. You do not think you were asked about it?—A. I do not think so; no.

Q. You were asked what transpired between you and Mr. Leake at that time; were you not?

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment. I submit that if counsel is to interrogate the witness about his testimony in San Francisco, the portion of it should be called to his attention. That investigation took place last September; and I think it is only fair to the witness, if he is to be interrogated about it, that the portion they claim should be called to his attention.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is of opinion that counsel is well within the reasonable rule of cross-examination so far and he may proceed.

Mr. LINFORTH. Will the reporter read the question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question will be read.

The Official Reporter read the question, as follows:

Q. You were asked what transpired between you and Mr. Leake at that time, were you not?

The WITNESS. May I see the record?

(The printed record was exhibited to the witness.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Proceed, gentlemen.

The WITNESS. Can you tell me where the item is that you refer to?

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. On page 7 and on page 9 you were questioned about what transpired in the conversation between you and Mr. Leake.—A. I do not find that reference there. Would it be possible for you to show it?

Q. In any event, after Mr. Leake told you that Judge Louderback had submitted Mr. Short's name to Mr. Strong and that there was difficulty between them over the selection of the attorney, what request, if any, did he make of you?—A. None at all.

Q. What suggestion did he make to you?—A. The only statement he made was that Judge Louderback had told him that he had suggested certain attorneys, among them Short and Keyes & Erskine.

Q. You have testified that he suggested Short, and now you testify that he suggested certain attorneys, and among them Short. Which is correct?—A. I think he mentioned attorneys.

Q. You think he did?—A. Yes. I am not certain about that.

Q. You are not certain about it?—A. Because it would probably not impress me, and it would impress me with Mr. Short or the firm of Keyes & Erskine.

Q. Did not Leake offer you the receivership at that time if you could take it?—A. Yes; he did. He asked me if I could act; in other words, if I could get leave of absence from the firm of Cavalier & Co.

Q. Did he suggest that you call up Cavalier?—A. No. I told him I would have to confer with Mr. Cavalier.

Q. When did you confer with Cavalier about it?—A. The next noon.

Q. You did not call him back the evening that he had mentioned this to you?—A. Yes; I did talk with Mr. Cavalier that evening.

Q. Did you call Mr. Leake back that evening and tell him that you would take it?—A. I did not. I did not tell Mr. Leake until the next afternoon, after 2 o'clock.

Q. Did Mr. Cavalier have any hesitancy about it when you talked to him that evening?—A. Mr. Cavalier is rather deaf, and in talking over the telephone he could not hear very well. He said, "Can't this wait until I come over tomorrow?" He said, "I will be over early, and we will discuss it"; and when he came over we did.

Q. What time that evening did you talk with Mr. Cavalier?—A. After dinner. I did not want to disturb him at dinner time. I think it was about 9 o'clock—8:30 to 9:30.

Q. When did you see Mr. Leake again after he asked you if you would accept this position?—A. I do not know when I saw him again. All I can remember is that I called him up the next afternoon.

Q. Where did you call Cavalier from?—A. A booth in the Fairmont Hotel.

Q. As soon as Mr. Leake had spoken to you about it?—A. No; I waited until after dinner that evening. Mr. Leake had spoken to me about 4 or 5 o'clock in the afternoon, as I recall it.

Q. And then you talked to him again after dinner before you talked to Cavalier?—A. I do not recall; I may have. I do not recall.

Q. Did you call Mr. Sidney Schwartz up that night?—A. I called Mr. Sidney Schwartz the afternoon of the 12th, as I recall it. I think I had told Mr. Leake that I would act, and I talked to Mr. Sidney Schwartz.

Q. What time did you talk to Mr. Sidney Schwartz?—A. I do not know; sometime in the afternoon.

Q. At what time did you get back to the hotel when Mr. Leake mentioned this to you?—A. On the 12th? I am mixed up on my dates again. It was the 13th that I talked to Mr. Schwartz. Your question threw me off. It was the day that I qualified as receiver, which was the 13th. I talked to Mr. Schwartz on that afternoon.

Q. What time in the afternoon?—A. Sometime after I came back from lunch, I assume around 2 o'clock, 2:30, 3 o'clock.

Q. What did you say to him at that time?—A. I said, "Mr. Schwartz, I have been asked to act as receiver in the Russell-Colvin matter. What do you think about it?" He said, "I would certainly take it."

Q. You did not ask him to recommend you?—A. I do not recall that I did. I heard his testimony the other day, and I am willing to grant that I may have talked, but I do not see why I should have asked him to recommend me when Judge Louderback had already asked me to serve. I do not think I needed any recommendation.

Q. Did you need any advice as to whether you should take it?—A. I discussed it with Mr. Schwartz to see what his reaction was. I had worked for him, and I wanted to get his ideas.

Q. Why did you call him?—A. Because I had been with him in the stock exchange.

Q. In fact, the information that was essential with regard to this receivership was that which you had dealt with in connection with the stock exchange largely, was it not?—A. May I have that question?

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. In fact, the information that was essential with regard to this receivership was that which you had dealt with in connection with the stock exchange largely, was it not?

The WITNESS. It was.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. And the position required someone who was familiar with the working of the stock exchange?—A. There is some question but what that experience is of value, but I had already liquidated an investment house, Mr. Browning, which brought up a great many of these problems.

Q. That, I understood, was just a few ranches.—A. No; there were pledges and repledges, but everything was doubly borrowed on.

Q. Did you go to see Schwartz in person?—A. Not that afternoon.

Q. When did you go to see him?—A. I saw him, I think, a day or two after that, probably on Montgomery Street.

Q. Not in his office?—A. I do not recall going to see him in his office. I have been in his office many times, and I may have gone to see him, but I do remember seeing him on Montgomery Street.

Q. Was that the next day after the telephone conversation with him?—A. I would not say that it was the next day, but it was the next day or two.

Q. In your testimony in San Francisco you did not mention the fact that you had gone to Mr. Leake's room on the night of the 13th to do your telephoning, did you?—A. I did not go there to do my telephoning.

Q. I understood you to testify a few moments ago—A. I did telephone from there.

Q. What did you go there for?—A. I went there to tell him that I had been out to the court and qualified as receiver.

Q. At that time you and he discussed the attorneyship, did you not?—A. No.

Q. Did you call Short from there?—A. I did.

Q. It was an out-of-town call?—A. It is.

Q. At 471 Woodside?—A. I do not remember the call number.

Q. Did you talk to Mr. Leake about any attorney there at all at that time?—A. No; except that I was going to call Mr. Short up and ask him to meet me the next morning.

Q. You did not have any conversation with him before you told him what you were going to do?—A. You mean in regard to the attorneys?

Q. Yes; with regard to the attorneys.—A. No.

Q. The first time you talked to Short about employing him as counsel in the case was from Leake's room?—A. Absolutely.

Q. You were not in Leake's room the night of the 11th of March?—A. I think not. I think that night of the 13th was the first time I was ever in Mr. Leake's room.

Q. You did not call Mr. Short from Mr. Leake's room on the night of the 11th?—A. No; I only talked to Mr. Short once.

Q. You employed Mr. Short as your counsel in this case?—A. I employed what I thought was Keyes & Erskine.

Q. I will read to you from your testimony on page 7, as given in San Francisco:

Q. When did you make the selection of your attorney?—A. That night I called him up and asked him if he were willing to handle this case.

Q. To act as your counsel?—A. To act as my counsel, and that I wanted to know if he would be there the next morning at 8:30.

That is correct, is it?

The WITNESS. That is substantially correct.

Mr. LINFORTH. In order to be fair to the witness should not counsel read the next two questions on that page on the same subject?

Mr. BROWNING. Mr. President, we propose to conduct the cross-examination in our own way.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Counsel will proceed.

By Mr. BROWNING:

Q. At that time, Mr. Hunter, you were friendly with Mr. Leake?—A. I would not say friendly; no.

Q. How long had you known him?—A. I had known him in the hotel there for several years, he and his wife.

Q. Did you ever loan him any money?—A. I never have. I thought he was a man that had money. I did not know, until the testimony was given there, that he was in hard straits.

Q. Did he ever make any solicitation from you for contributions or loans?—A. None whatever.

Q. After this receivership appointment, you did get very friendly with him, did you not?—A. I would discuss certain legal fights that we were having at that time; yes. We were having a great many legal fights over the Consolidated Paper Box.

Q. Was Mr. Leake a lawyer?—A. No; he was not a lawyer.

Q. What was his profession or occupation?—A. He has testified that he is a healer.

Q. And you discussed with him, as a healer, the legal phases of your receivership. Is that right?—A. Oh, no; only casual conversations of what was going on in the receivership.

Q. Why do you confine it to the legal phases of the receivership when you say that you discussed with Mr. Leake matters pertaining to it?—A. Because those fights that we had in the court were brought up in the papers. There were a great many articles appearing in the papers as I recall it.

Q. To what fights do you refer?—A. With Mr. Blumberg, to deliver the securities in the Consolidated Box to Mr. Spiegelman.

Q. That was not in court, was it?—A. It was certainly in court.

Q. You mean that you had litigation over it in court?—A. No litigation, no; but I had sold the securities to Mr. Spiegelman. Mr. Blumberg refused to let me go through with the deal. Do you mind if I go into detail?

Q. I do not think it is necessary. We are not asking you for the details of that, but we will get to it in a moment.—A. All right.

Q. I call your attention to your testimony at the bottom of page 8, in which the question was asked:

Q. Are you very friendly?

Referring to you and Mr. Leake. The answer was:

A. We were not, up to the time I was appointed. Since then I have talked to him quite a little bit.

The WITNESS. That is true.

Q. Was Mr. Leake interested in all these receivership matters?—A. Only as perhaps an old man who sits around the lobby with not a great deal to do.

Q. Did you talk to him about anything else except these receiverships?—A. These receiverships?

Q. Yes; these matters in this receivership.—A. I think not.

Q. You testified also about the Consolidated Box matter in San Francisco last September?—A. Yes.

Q. From page 17 I read you this testimony which you gave:

A. Consolidated Box was a merger of many paper box companies of this city. I looked it up the other day, and found the cost of those companies were very much understated, showing they had averaged about $500,000 for their profit.

Q. Water?—A. Water—and sold as securities to the public.

Q. Now, did you work out satisfactory arrangements with those people which were going concerns?—A. The partners, before the receivership was appointed, had sold the control of that company for $7,246.

Q. And you, as receiver, what did you do with it, how much did you get for the estate?—A. I refused to go further with the sale. I worked up a sale with a man by the name of Spiegelman, and got him to make an offer. It represented something like $130,000, against the $7,200 that was the original sale. I felt this, that there was $85,000 in machinery that the original purchaser would not make an offer for, and there were almost $300,000 in bonds that I would never be able to sell, once I forced it into his deal. We worked up that deal, and I had great difficulty. The offer was made subject to the pledge of the purchaser to place four directors on the board. The directors that were on the board, and the president, would not get off, and I held Mr. Spiegelman to it, until I finally forced the deal with the president and all the directors that were on the board.

Q. What is the net of the deal as against the first offer?—A. It netted the estate approximately $125,000 against $7,200.

Q. You felt you earned your commission on that deal, didn't you?—A. I certainly did.

Mr. Hunter, you knew at that time that this $7,200 only represented the stock itself, which was not voting power, and did not represent the assets of that concern, did you not?—A. Mr. Browning—

Q. I ask you to answer whether you did know at that time?—A. I never considered—

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President—

The WITNESS. The stock alone in this deal—

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, I except to his reply, and ask that he answer that "yes" or "no."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He can answer "yes" or "no", and then make any explanation he desires to make.

The WITNESS. May the question be read?

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. Mr. Hunter, you knew at that time that this $7,200 only represented the stock itself, which was not voting power, and did not represent the assets of that concern, did you not?

The WITNESS. Yes; that is true.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. And yet you stated in that, that instead of $7,200, you received $130,000 for it?—A. For the machinery and for the bonds which I detailed above.

Q. But at that time you did not make the difference between the two. You said that instead of $7,200, you received $130,000 for it, did you not?—A. I do not think the record is correct in that statement.

Q. You do not think it is correct?—A. No; I do not think it is correct. I must have put in there—I qualified my remark in the beginning that the deal was for the control, that it did not include the machinery, which was worth $85,000, and it did not include the $300,000 bonds.

Q. Do you say that the stenographer left that out of the original testimony?—A. I would say he did. He misunderstood my testimony.

Q. Is it your opinion that the report is not correct at that time?—A. The testimony as recorded is not correct.

Q. But you at that time were undertaking to show to the committee that you made your salary in that transaction, were you not?—A. I certainly did.

Q. You tried to leave that impression at that time?—A. Absolutely, and I think I did.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, I understood the Senate desired to suspend at 2 o'clock. I beg to ask if that is the program.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has no official information to that effect.

RECESS

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I think it is desired that the Senate, sitting as a Court of Impeachment, take a recess until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning in order that the Senate may proceed to the consideration of legislative business.

Mr. McNARY. That is the understanding we had yesterday with the Senator from Arkansas, that at this hour we would take up the Glass banking bill, which is the unfinished business, and would return to legislative session.

Mr. KING. In view of that understanding, I ask the managers representing the House and counsel representing the respondent, whether it would be agreeable for the Court of Impeachment to take a recess until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That would be entirely satisfactory to us.

Mr. KING. I, therefore, move that the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment take a recess until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 2 o'clock p.m.) the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment took a recess until tomorrow, Saturday, May 20, 1933, at 10 o'clock a.m.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The Senate, pursuant to the order for a recess entered yesterday, resumed legislative session.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed, without amendment, the joint resolution (S.J.Res. 50) designating May 22 as National Maritime Day.

The message also announced that the House had insisted upon its amendments to the bill (S. 753) to confer the degree of bachelor of science upon graduates of the Naval Academy, disagreed to by the Senate, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. VINSON of Georgia, Mr. DREWRY, and Mr. BRITTON were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

The message further announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled joint resolution (S.J. Res. 50) designating May 22 as National Maritime Day, and it was signed by the Vice President.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT—APPROVAL OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also announced that the President had approved and signed the following joint resolution and acts:

On May 3, 1933:

S.J.Res. 13. Joint resolution authorizing the Attorney General, with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Navy, to release claims of the United States upon certain assets of the Pan American Petroleum Co. and the Richfield Oil Co. of California and others in connection with collections upon a certain judgment in favor of the United States against the Pan American Petroleum Co. heretofore duly entered.

On May 18, 1933:

S. 1582. An act to amend section 1025 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

REGULATION OF BANKING

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 1631) to provide for the safe and more effective use of the assets of Federal Reserve banks and of national banking associations, to regulate interbank control, to prevent the undue diversion of funds into speculative operations, and for other purposes.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, by agreement we are to proceed with the consideration of Senate bill 1631, known as the "banking reform bill." This bill, Mr. President, with certain modifications is the bill which was presented at the last session of the Senate by an almost unanimous vote of the Banking and Currency Committee and which passed this body by a vote of 54 to 9. I apprehend that there is no great need for me to traverse the major provisions of that bill, which, I take it, are rather familiar to the Senate. Therefore, I shall confine myself today chiefly to a brief exposition of those major alterations in the bill which are of large importance to the banking community and to the country.

There is one omission in Senate bill 1631 which appeared conspicuously in the bill passed by the Senate at the last session. The Senate will recall that we omitted the Secretary of the Treasury from membership on the Federal Reserve Board. The reasons then given for that action may be in a few sentences repeated today. The Federal Reserve Banking System was set up for the purpose of responding to the business, industrial, and agricultural requirements of this country. It is owned exclusively by the member banks, frequently spoken of as the "stock-holding banks." In short, the individual banks of the Federal Reserve System own the 12 Federal Reserve banks in substantially the same sense that the stockholders own the individual banks.

It was never intended that the Federal Reserve Banking System should be used as an adjunct of the Treasury Department, and particularly was it never contemplated that it should be so used to such an extent as recently has been done as very materially to curtail the abilities of the Federal Reserve banks to serve the business interests of the country. There has not been a bond issue floated by the Government of the United States since the beginning of the World War up to within 2 weeks ago that was not floated through the agencies of the Federal Reserve Banking System. Of that the friends of the System do not complain, because its agencies were so widespread and complete that it would have been difficult to float a Federal bond issue without the immediate and active assistance of the Federal Reserve Banking System. But in latter years the Federal Reserve banks notably and the member banks of the System substantively have been compelled to subscribe to the issues of United States bonds. I say "compelled" in the sense that it was regarded as dangerous for a member bank or for a Federal Reserve bank to decline to take its allotment of Federal Reserve securities, whether long-time bonds or Treasury notes, as apportioned by the Secretary of the Treasury.

I think I speak accurately and advisedly when I say that no issue of Federal Reserve securities for 2 years has been placed with private industries or estates. The major part of those issues has been taken by the Federal Reserve banks or the member banks. That largely means in time of stress that these banks just in that measure are disqualified from responding generously and liberally to the requirements of commerce, industry, and agriculture.

That has largely been done, your committee think, through the dominating influence of the Secretary of the Treasury as a member of the Federal Reserve Board. I know from actual experience and intimate observation that the Secretary of the Treasury does exercise a dominating influence in that Board. The distinguished junior Senator from California [Mr. McAdoo] knows that, because he was once Secretary of the Treasury. I know it because I was once Secretary of the Treasury. But he was there and I was there in times of great stress. He was there during the war, and I was there in the post-war period when the problems were not less grave than during the war. It was essential, it was imperative, that the Federal Reserve Banking System should coordinate its activities with the activities of the Treasury Department. The life of the Nation depended upon it. But that is not so 15 years after the war terminated. The Federal Reserve Banking System should not have been made the foot mat of the Treasury Department in all those years.

That statement of the reasons why we eliminated the Secretary of the Treasury from the Board in the bill passed by the Senate 54 to 9 will cause Senators to wonder why we did not persist in that action, as we have not done it in S. 1631. It was the unanimous judgment of your subcommittee that that official should be eliminated. We had not one single dissent from that view in the general committee. That provision of the previous bill is not included in this bill only by reason of the fact that the Secretary of the Treasury seemed to regard it as a personal affront to him and as a curtailment of his power which ought not to be made at this particular time. Therefore, we have omitted that provision of the bill. There may be a proposal to restore it, in which event I could not conscientiously oppose.

The main purpose of the bill as passed by the Senate last spring, as Senators will recall, was to prevent, under penalty, the use of Federal Reserve banking facilities for stock-gambling purposes. I use that term in its harshest sense, realizing that it touches the sensibilities of a great many people who persist in calling it "stock-investment purposes." But it is not stock-investment purposes because no man ever yet invested his money and found it necessary to keep his ear to the ticker to find out what was going to be the price of stocks the next hour or day or week or month. It is nothing in the world but pure gambling just as much as that at Monte Carlo. The New York Times, priding itself as an organ of the interests, or a spokesman of the interests, stated that 90 percent of the activities of the stock exchange in 1928 and 1929 consisted just as much in gambling as betting on the arrow of the roulette table. The bill as passed by the Senate undertook, under moderate penalty, but I think effective penalty, to put a stop to that sort of thing, and so does this bill.

The bill as passed by the Senate last spring required the separation of investment affiliates from member banks of the Federal Reserve Banking System, investment affiliates that were the largest contributors, next to the gambling on the stock exchange, to the disaster which was precipitated upon the country in 1929. They never had a day of legal existence. It will be recalled that I resurrected here from a 20 years' sleep the opinion of Solicitor General Lehman, one of the greatest lawyers who ever honored that position, pointing out to the Attorney General and to the President with the approval of the Attorney General that they had no legal existence and ought not to be continued in operation. That opinion in a mysterious way lay disregarded in some official archive and was only resurrected by me at the last session of the Senate. We include that provision in the bill.

Another important provision of the bill last spring related to a separation, in a sense, perhaps I should more properly say a moderation, of the practice of commercial banks underwriting investment securities.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McKellar in the chair). Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. GLASS. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. Before the Senator leaves the question of affiliates, unless he expects to return to it, I should like to ask him a question in regard to it.

Mr. GLASS. Yes; I should be glad to have the Senator do so.

Mr. NORRIS. Under the present bill, how much time is allowed for the separation of affiliates from the banks?

Mr. GLASS. The Senator will recall that in the previous bill, yielding somewhat to the persistent and pestiferous activities of lobbyists, we permitted 5 years for the separation. In this bill we permit only 2 years, and some of us think that 1 year is ample.

Mr. NORRIS. That brings me to the question that I want to ask the Senator. Why is not 1 year long enough? It seems to me even that is too long. I cannot understand why they should be given a longer time. There may be some reason for it. I remember the discussion that took place last year. I was sorry that the Senator yielded.

Mr. GLASS. The Senator can get that answer only from those lobbyists who sought to wreck the bank bill at the last session of Congress by pretending to be hostile to a provision that had no relation to the affiliates.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GLASS. Certainly.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Is it true that some of those institutions which opposed the 3-year limitation for the separation of affiliates from the parent institution subsequently took steps to bring about the separation of their own initiative?

Mr. GLASS. Several of them have separated from their affiliates. Right on that point, while it comes to my mind, I will say to the Senator from Arkansas, in verification of my prediction last spring that if there were profits in that business there would be no trouble in organizing separate and exclusive investment banks, that I note from the New York papers of day before yesterday that the Chase National Bank, having discarded its affiliates, many of the capitalists which had been associated with the activities of the affiliates immediately proposed to organize a separate investment house; and that will be so if this bank bill is passed.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, the Senator mentions the Chase National Bank, and the separation of its affiliates. As I remember, getting my information from the newspapers, they required no time whatever. I wish the Senator would discuss that proposition. What is the reason given for time to separate an affiliate from the parent bank? The Chase National Bank, as I understand, did it without any time whatever.

Mr. GLASS. The only reason given the Banking and Currency Committee, both publicly and privately—and very persistently privately—was that it would require that length of time to readjust their affairs. I do not think that is so. The fact that the Chase National Bank—the largest commercial bank in the world, I think—has discarded its affiliate, indicates that it does not require that length of time. We have modified that provision of the bill, however, changing it from 5 years to 2 years, rather with the expectation, if not the confident hope, that the other branch of Congress or the Senate may reduce it to 1 year. But these affiliates, I repeat, were the most unscrupulous contributors, next to the debauch of the New York Stock Exchange, to the financial catastrophe which visited this country and was mainly responsible for the depression under which we have been suffering since. They ought to be separated, and they ought speedily to be separated, from the parent banks; and in this bill we have done that.

There was another more or less important provision of the bill passed last spring which is retained in text in this bill, relating to branch banking. It will be recalled that, as reported from your Banking and Currency Committee, the provision authorized national banks to engage in branch banking in the respective States, regardless of State law. The Senate so amended that provision as to authorize national banks to engage in branch banking in those States which by law permit branch banking to State banks. It went even farther under the amendment of the distinguished Senator from New Mexico, and required that the establishment of branch banks by national banks in States which by law permit branch banking should be under the regulations required by State law of State banks.

How any fair person may properly object to a provision of that sort, I do not understand. We here in the Congress created the national banking system in the emergency of the Civil War. We here restrict it and regulate it. We here legislate for the national banking system; and why anybody should object to putting national banks on a plane of competitive equality with State banks in the respective States we have been unable to understand. Therefore, we have included that provision in this bill just as it passed the Senate.

There was an exceedingly important and, we thought, an imperative provision of the bill passed last spring, known as the "liquidating provision", creating a liquidating corporation for the speedy settlement of the affairs of closed banks. Had that bill become law there would have been released hundreds of millions of dollars that were then, and are now, tied up in closed banks. We provided for quick receiverships, and for either the purchase of the assets of a closed bank or loans to receivers to facilitate and determine the affairs of the banks, so that the depositors might receive their money. The bill did not become law, and there are still hundreds of millions of dollars—more than a billion dollars—tied up in closed banks.

We have embraced in S. 1631 a part of that provision which authorizes quick receiverships and prompt liquidation of closed banks; but we have greatly elaborated that provision of the bill, and the elaboration occupies about 34 pages of this bill, running from page 16 to page 48. We have elaborated it by providing for the insurance of deposits in the member banks of the System. Just as in the provision relating to the liquidating corporation in the last bill, we set up a capital structure of approximately a half-billion dollars, derived in part from a subscription of $150,000,000 from the Federal Treasury, which some of us wanted to regard as a recapture of funds which we did not think ever should have gone to the Federal Treasury from the earnings of the Federal Reserve banks; but the Senate modified that provision so as to require that it should be a subscription to the stock of this liquidating corporation, and we have so regarded it in the structure here.

We take about $175,000,000 from the surplus fund of the Federal Reserve banks. That, of course, encountered some remonstrance from the Federal Reserve authorities, with which, I must confess, I have little patience; for a banking system that could choke itself up with nearly $2,000,000,000 of United States securities, not one dollar of which it had any use for, could well afford to subscribe to a capital structure of this kind in order to insure the quick liquidation of closed banks, and in order, as under this bill, further to insure the deposits in member banks of the System.

Then it is computed that we will provide another $175,000,000 by an assessment of one half of 1 percent upon the demand and time deposits of the member banks of the System. Of course, that encountered remonstrance. In the 32 years that I have been dealing with banking matters I have dealt chiefly with remonstrances, and particularly from bankers. I think that is a fair assessment. The Senate should distinguish it from the proposed guaranty by the Government of bank deposits, because it is not that at all. It is merely an insurance of deposits, I think framed in a very cautious and effective way.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. GLASS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. COSTIGAN. It was my misfortune, for unavoidable reasons, not to be in attendance on the Banking and Currency Committee when the sections now being discussed were under consideration. I rise, therefore, to request information.

I have before me an editorial of the Philadelphia Record of May 15 of this year, in which the following sentence appears:

The Glass Bill would limit the guaranty to members of the Federal Reserve System, and would undoubtedly result in the closing of all nonmember banks.

Will the Senator from Virginia, at the appropriate place in his remarks, be good enough to comment on that statement?

Mr. GLASS. No place could be more appropriate than this. In answer to the Senator's question, I will say that it simply is not true.

Mr. KING. That is not a comment. It is a denial.

Mr. GLASS. The comment will follow the denial.

The Senator will note, on page 22 of the bill, subsection (f), as follows:

(f) Any State bank or trust company which has applied for membership in the Federal Reserve System or for conversion into a national banking association may, with the consent of the Corporation, obtain the benefits of this section, pending action on such application, by subscribing and paying for the same amount of stock of the Corporation as it would be required to subscribe and pay for upon becoming a member bank. Thereupon the provisions of this section applicable to member banks shall be applicable to such State bank or trust company to the same extent as if it were already a member bank: Provided, That if the application of such State bank or trust company for membership in the Federal Reserve System or for conversion into a national banking association be approved and it shall not complete its membership in the Federal Reserve System or its conversion into a national banking association within a reasonable time, or if such application shall be disapproved, then the amount paid by such bank or trust company on account of its subscription to the capital stock of the Corporation shall be repaid to it and it shall no longer be subject to the provisions or entitled to the privileges of this section.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. GLASS. I yield.

Mr. COUZENS. I was going to ask what the effect would be upon the community or the bank itself should an application be denied? The application would have to be approved, of course, by the Federal Reserve System.

Mr. GLASS. Very likely the effect would be disastrous to that particular bank. But if a bank of that description should be permitted to continue in business, and to receive deposits of innocent people, what would be the effect upon the community when inevitably it would fail?

Mr. COUZENS. Does the Senator ask me that question?

Mr. GLASS. Yes.

Mr. COUZENS. The answer to that question is that the bank should not have been operating at the time the application was made, because the application and rejection thereafter has a worse effect than if no application had been made or if the bank had been closed under normal conditions.

Mr. GLASS. But the Congress cannot control that situation. Congress cannot control the operation of State banks. Certainly the Senator would not want to take the funds of the Federal Reserve Banking System and guarantee the deposits of nonmember banks without such an examination as is required for membership in the Federal Reserve Banking System.

Mr. COUZENS. The Senator is quite right, but I raise the question whether or not it is advisable to permit even a temporary guaranty during the examination, but should we not rather require the examination before the application is made? In other words there is an interim between the application and the rejection which I think is a dangerous period.

Mr. GLASS. How would we proceed to make an examination of a State bank which does not apply for membership in the Federal Reserve System? We have no authority to do that whatsoever.

Mr. COUZENS. I quite agree, but a reading of the section clearly indicates that there is an interim between the time of the application and the decision when the public has a right to assume that the deposits are guaranteed.

Mr. GLASS. That is also so in the ordinary process of applying for and either granting or rejecting applications for membership in the Federal Reserve Banking System. The Federal Reserve authorities could not know what banks to examine unless they should apply for membership.

Mr. COUZENS. If the Senator will yield further, I may point out that the average depositor is not much concerned about whether a bank is a member of the Federal Reserve System or not, but I submit that the depositor is very much concerned about whether his deposits are guaranteed, and I submit that language in the measure provides for a period when the depositor believes that his deposits are guaranteed, and afterwards upon examination by the Federal Reserve System he finds they are not guaranteed, which makes the system worse confounded.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I think a great service will have been done to the business community if a bank is in such bad shape that, after being put upon a year's notice or preparation, it applies for membership in the Federal Reserve System, and it is in such a rotten shape that it cannot come into the System. I think it ought to be closed up.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GLASS. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. What would be wrong in providing by law that the deposits in this State bank which applies for membership should not be guaranteed, or insured, rather, by the corporation until after they had been admitted; and let the action of admitting them or rejecting them follow the examination, rather than to have them included arbitrarily under this insurance?

Mr. GLASS. There would not be anything on earth wrong about it. It is a sound suggestion, and I would vote for that without the slightest hesitation. We provided it this way because so many bankers—I would not say so many bankers, but so many politicians—insisted.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I cannot understand why a bank applying for membership should by its application be entitled to the benefit of this insurance fund, when banks which are in, which have been examined and admitted, would, in case of the failure of a weak bank or a bank that was corrupt, or something of that kind, see the money contributed by them going to make up the losses.

Mr. GLASS. Those who are insistent upon this provision would answer the Senate in this way: They would say that any bank that remained for any length of time from under the protection of this provision by applying for membership in the Federal Reserve System would lose all of its deposits.

Mr. NORRIS. That would be true in either case, if that reason is good, which I would not want to agree to a hundred percent. Assuming there is a bank which it might be known in advance it was not going to get into the System, a bank with which there was something wrong, which was insolvent, as a matter of fact, why should that bank, by simply making an application, get the benefit of this insurance fund and thus pay its liabilities out of a fund set up for honest banking?

Mr. GLASS. I proceed with the answer of those who advocate particularly this provision of the bill.

Mr. COUZENS and Mr. McADOO rose.

Mr. GLASS. Let me answer one Senator.

Mr. COUZENS. I did not ask the Senator to yield yet.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Virginia yield, and if so to whom?

Mr. GLASS. Just let me answer the Senator from Nebraska. There are thousands of sound State banks which we think would apply immediately for membership in the Federal Reserve Banking System, and that would not involve any separation from their charter rights as a State institution. There has been some nonsensical talk about our trying to destroy the State banking system, which is not true. There are thousands of sound State banks which would want to apply immediately for membership in the Federal Reserve Banking System. They could not come in without examination and attestation, which would take a considerable period of time. Some have estimated it as 6 months, some have estimated it as long as a year, to make these examinations and attestations. The answer of the proponents of this proposition is that those sound, solvent State banks, desirable as members of the Federal Reserve System, or desiring to become members of the Federal Reserve System, ought not to have their deposits jeopardized in the interim.

Now I yield to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. COUZENS. I was going to ask the Senator, then, as long as this insurance is to be postponed for some 13 months or more, is there any reason why these sound State banks should not get under cover before July 1, 1934?

Mr. GLASS. None in the world, in my view of it.

Mr. COUZENS. Then we ought to change that provision in the measure, making that effective, rather than giving this interim between the application and the examination and admittance.

Mr. GLASS. My own judgment is that it would require that length of time, not to prepare these sound, solvent State banks, but it would require that length of time for many weak banks which could not now become members of the Federal Reserve Banking System, to so alter their establishments as that they could eventually become members of the Federal Reserve Banking System and come under the provisions of this insurance.

I think I violate no confidence when I say that the President who, at the beginning, was very much opposed to any insurance of bank deposits at all, very earnestly advocated that provision of the bill, and I do not think I reveal any secret in saying that the Secretary of the Treasury, who was and is utterly opposed to any insurance of deposits, was very insistent upon that provision. I must repeat that my own judgment is that there should be that lapse of time to give these weaker banks, not only the weaker State banks but the weaker member banks of the Federal Reserve Banking System, an opportunity to prepare to avail themselves of this insurance clause of the bill.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GLASS. I yield.

Mr. KING. Before the Senator leaves the insurance features of the bill, I hope he will be tolerant of some of us who have not had the opportunity of becoming fully acquainted with the bill—speaking for myself, anyway—if a question is asked which may not be very intelligent.

Mr. GLASS. I have boasted recently of being the most tolerant Member of the Senate.

Mr. KING. I had that in mind when I made the observation. I ask the Senator if there is not rather a shadowy difference between this insurance provision, so denominated, in the bill and the Oklahoma provision when they had the guaranty banking system. Here it is called "insurance"; there it was called "a guaranty." But from my very hasty examination of the bill—I have had only a few moments to examine this provision—it seems to me that the strong banks, the sound banks, are to carry the weak banks. If a fund were put up which would be available, and when exhausted that ended it, and no further liabilities would attach to the solvent and sound and well-managed banks so that they would not be called upon for assessments to handle the weak banks, it seems to me that there would be perhaps more reason for this provision. Yet I am very anxious to get the Senator's views.

Mr. GLASS. Is it not a fact that in matters of life insurance the strong and healthy men carry those who die? I think they do.

Mr. KING. May I say that, of course, in life we all die, but the presumption is that all bankers do not die, particularly as we give immortality to the Federal Reserve banks by changing the time when their charters were to expire and give them an eternal charter.

Mr. GLASS. We not only have not given immortality to the Federal Reserve banks, but I took occasion to tell the Secretary of the Treasury the other day that if they pursue present policies much longer they will literally wreck the Federal Reserve System; that Woodrow Wilson in history will enjoy the distinction of having set up a banking system that fought the war for us and saved the Nation in the post-war period, and if they keep on making a doormat of it this Congress will enjoy the distinction of having wrecked it.

Mr. KING. I agree with what the Senator says in his criticism of the administration of the Federal Reserve System, but what I had reference to when I spoke about immortality was the fact that we had repealed the old provision with respect to their charter and made them an immortal corporation.

Mr. GLASS. That is not any advantage particularly to the corporation and certainly no disadvantage to the Congress of the United States, because it is textually provided in the law that Congress may at any time amend, modify, or repeal the act.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me further?

Mr. GLASS. Yes.

Mr. KING. I agree entirely with the Senator; but I alluded to immortality in order to show that there was a distinction between individuals who do die and banks, which are presumed, if they are managed properly, to have a very long duration of life.

Mr. GLASS. Let me say to the Senator that this is not a provision altogether for the weak banks; not by any means. It is an insurance to the entire banking community of the United States, because when weak banks begin to topple there takes place a disastrous psychology in the whole country that precipitates runs on strong banks that break them down.

Moreover, it has been suggested, right on this line, that this thing of strong banks having to stand for weak banks will lead to loose banking. On the contrary, in my opinion it will lead to the severest espionage upon the rotten banks of this country that we have ever had, because for the last 12 or 14 years we have not had any espionage upon them. What a spectacle is presented when the Comptroller of the Currency, under oath and obligation to enforce the law of inspection, of examination, comes before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee and tells us that if he had enforced the law, as was done now nearly 2 years ago, he would have closed half of the national banks in the United States. What does that mean? It is not an implication; it is an unavoidable and ascertainable fact. It means the Comptroller's office has not done its duty—its sworn duty—and has permitted this great number of banks to engage in irregular and illicit practices, with the result that they have endangered the whole banking community, and not only the whole banking community but have pretty nearly paralyzed the whole business community of this country.

If the Senator from Utah is a strong banker in Salt Lake City and I am a weak banker, engaging in illicit and irregular practices, and the Senator from Utah knows that he has got to bear a part of the burden of my irregular banking, he is going to report me to the Comptroller of the Currency and is going to insist that his examiners come there and do their duty; so that, so far from leading to loose banking, in my judgment, this proposition, if enacted, is going to lead to better banking.

Mr. McADOO. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. GLASS. I yield.

Mr. McADOO. May I suggest to my distinguished colleague from Virginia that there has been no insurance of bank deposits in this country ever, and if there has been loose banking or objectionable banking in the United States during the past 10 years without insurance, then can we not expect that we may have better and improved conditions if we alter the system to this extent?

Mr. GLASS. I think that better banking is inevitable if we provide this insurance.

I am not standing here as an advocate. For 35 years in the other House, and up to this time in the Senate, I have opposed guaranteeing deposits, but this is not a Government guaranty of deposits. The Government is only initially involved to the extent of $150,000,000, to which it was never entitled except by law. It never earned a dollar of it. The Federal Reserve Banking System does nearly a million and a half dollars worth of free work for the Treasury Department for which it does not receive a thrip; and that does not include any contributions to the great buildings they have had to construct or to the overhead charges necessitated by the construction of those buildings. The Government is only involved in an initial subscription to the capital of a corporation that we think will pay a dividend to the Government on its investment. It is not a Government guaranty.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. GLASS. I yield.

Mr. COUZENS. Will the Senator explain at that point that this insurance plan is not to be operated by the Government?

Mr. GLASS. No. It is to be operated by the Federal Reserve Banking System with no additional overhead charge.

Mr. COUZENS. That is the point I want to make plain, because there is a real and genuine difference between the operation of this insurance fund by the Government and by a private organization, known as the Federal Reserve System.

Mr. GLASS. A private organization in a large sense, and yet an organization that ought to be under the strict supervision of an altruistic Federal Reserve Board; and I say "ought to be" advisedly.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator permit another inquiry?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Virginia yield further to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. GLASS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. KING. In view of the question last propounded by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. COUZENS], I want to inquire of the Senator—and I apologize again for not having carefully read the bill—whether there is any language in this provision from which private persons may justly derive the impression that the Government is backing deposits in any way?

Mr. GLASS. There is no language in the bill that ought to cause any man of ordinary intelligence to think that the Government has anything further to do with it than its initial subscription of $150,000,000, which members of the committee regard as a recapture fund, something like the railroad funds that are not going to be recaptured.

Mr. KING. That question in part is prompted by reason of the fact that I have received, perhaps, hundreds of letters from persons who have invested in bonds issued by joint-stock land banks, and they insist that there is a moral, if not a legal, obligation upon the part of the Government to make good mistakes and defaults and delinquencies of those banks. I would not want anything to appear in the language of this provision from which it might be inferred that there was any Federal guaranty.

Mr. GLASS. No; the Government does not guarantee anything and the Government does not operate it; it is operated without cost within the Federal Reserve System.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. GLASS. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I thank the Senator. Of course the Government does not guarantee either Federal land-bank or joint-stock land-bank bonds. The misapprehension to which the Senator from Utah has referred arises out of the fact that in connection with the tax-exempt provision in the land-bank bonds there is a declaration that the bonds are instrumentalities of the Federal Government. The framer of the act evidently thought that that would help to sustain the validity of the provision making the bonds tax-exempt; but the Government has never been liable under that provision.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, there is another major modification or addition to the Senate bill, in that we authorize mutual savings banks under certain regulations, clearly set forth in the bill, and what are known as "Morris Plan banks" to become members of the Federal Reserve Banking System and to come under this insurance clause.

Then another provision of the bill in which I should like to enlist the interest of the Senate particularly is a prohibition against the payment of interest on demand deposits by commercial banks. There are various reasons for that, some of them I think compelling. The payment of interest on demand deposits has resulted for years and years in stripping the country banks of all their spare funds, which have been sent to the money centers for stock speculative purposes. When we adopted the Federal Reserve Act and rescued the reserve funds or trust funds of the national banking system from the stock gamblers we had hoped that that would be a salutary lesson to all member banks of the system. We had hoped that they would be impressed by the fact that they were no longer in involuntary servitude to their correspondent banks and that they would deal with the regional reserve banks rather than with the banks in the money centers. But we have been disappointed in that respect. Bankers all over the country in every State I venture to say—I speak definitely of my own State—have what they call a "standard rate of interest", which is the limit of the law in the respective States; and they never depart from it, except in special cases and for large purposes. In other words, if the standard rate is 6 percent, as it is in Virginia, one never finds a bank in days of prosperity and one never finds a member bank of the system that ever lends the merchant or the manufacturer or an industry of any kind or the farmer at a less than a 6-percent discount rate. They give the foolish reason for that that if they ever once depart from the standard rate they cannot get back. Well, they can get back, and they can get back for exactly the same reason which induced them to depart. If they have abundant funds and credits they can lower the rate of interest in order to stimulate business and industry and farming activities.

If the demand is great and money is tight, they can go back to their standard rate just for the same reason or a like reason that actuated them in departing from it. But they do not do that. Bankers are the only people on earth that utterly disregard the law of supply and demand. They have their standard rates and stick to them, and would rather send their surplus funds to New York to be used for stock-gambling purposes at a wonderful rate of 2 percent, reduced now, I think, to 1½ percent, than to loan to their merchants and business men at less than their standard rates. So that this payment of interest, particularly on bank-demand deposits, has resulted in drawing the funds from the country banks to the money centers for speculative purposes, to be polite about the matter.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. GLASS. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. Does the insurance provided for in the bill apply to time deposits the same as to demand or checking deposits?

Mr. GLASS. Oh, yes; it applies to all deposits.

We confide to the Federal Reserve Board authority which it does not now possess in this connection to regulate interest on time deposits in order to put a stop to the competition between banks in payment of interest, which frequently induces banks to pay excessive interest on time deposits and has many times over again brought banks into serious trouble. But that is a matter purely for regulation of the Federal Reserve Board.

We made a modification in the Postal Savings bank law under which practically a Postal Savings bank is not permitted to take a demand deposit. In other words, it has to be a time deposit. The deposit has to stay there for 60 days, and it may not be drawn out in less time if interest is to be collected.

We have embodied in the bill another rather controversial question. We did it in the original so-called "Glass bill" but we—I started to say we yielded to the importunities of the lobbyists from New York, but we did not exactly do that. [Laughter.] We regarded the bill without that of so much importance as that we thought it should pass and become a law, and we feared if we should retain that provision it would encounter—in fact we knew because it had already encountered—the bitter hostility of large private banking institutions of the country. Here we prohibit the large private banks, whose chief business is an investment business, from receiving deposits. We separate them from the deposit banking business.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. GLASS. Certainly.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. That means if they wish to receive deposits they must have separate institutions for that purpose?

Mr. GLASS. Yes.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GLASS. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. What was the reason for changing the law in relation to deposits in Postal Savings banks to require the deposits to remain at least 60 days? Does the objection to the old law come from the Post Office Department, or the Government, or from the bankers?

Mr. GLASS. It is conceived, inasmuch as we had a prohibition upon the payment of interest on demand deposits by banks, that that would divert a considerable amount of funds from the commercial banks to the Postal Savings banks. It is proposed—in fact an amendment to the bill has already been printed, offered I believe by the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY]—to prohibit the payment of interest by Postal Savings banks. There can be no doubt in the world, certainly there is none in my mind, that the Postal Savings System has largely undermined commercial banking.

In putting restrictions upon commercial banks from underwriting and engaging in industrial business and in order to meet the contention that there was something of a deflationary nature about that provision in the bill, we inserted subsection (b), on page 73, providing that "the amendment made by this section shall not apply to such obligations of subsidiaries held by such association on the date this section takes effect", so it is not deflationary in any respect.

Being so unused to speaking after the fashion of lawyers and tolerating, as the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] would say, so many interruptions, I do not know that I have given the Senate as comprehensive a view of the bill as it is entitled to have. But in any event, when we come to consider the bill for amendment, I shall hold myself in readiness to give any further explanation that I may and to answer any questions that may be propounded.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GLASS. I yield.

Mr. COSTIGAN. The able Senator from Virginia referred a moment ago to the effect of Postal Savings deposits on commercial banking, indicating that to some extent those deposits have undermined commercial banking. May I ask whether the reason for the Senator's conclusion is that Postal Savings deposits are regarded by the public as guaranteed by the Government, and whether, if so, the Senator from Virginia feels that the insurance provision of his bill will tend to offset, so far as member banks are concerned, the public interest in Postal Savings deposits?

Mr. GLASS. I think in some measure that may result. The Senator will be astonished to know how many people there are in this world who think that a Government dollar is sort of a sanctified thing. We have that illustrated in what we call Federal aid through various agencies. It is not Federal aid at all. The Federal Government has not a dollar in its Treasury that it does not pick out of the pockets of the American taxpayers. That is where the Government gets its funds, and that is the only place that it can get its funds. But there are many people who think, for example, when the Federal Government took last year $109,000,000 in direct taxes out of the State of Virginia and brought that immense sum here and impounded it in the Federal Treasury, and then gave us two or three pitiful millions of dollars in aid of good roads and agricultural colleges, that Virginia is getting aid from the Federal Government, when the fact of the matter is that the Federal Government is first robbing Virginia. We have the only staple agricultural product on earth that is taxed to death by the Federal Government. The State of North Carolina, second to the great State of New York, as I recall, pays more than any other State in the Union in direct internal-revenue taxes—nearly $400,000,000, if not in excess of $400,000,000. Virginia last year paid $109,000,000 in Federal taxes, yet there are many foolish people who think, when we get a million or so dollars back to make a boulevard out of a hog path that we are getting aid from the Federal Government. [Laughter.]

We put a limitation upon the number of directors that a national bank may have. Heretofore these great banks have accumulated the names of great financiers, not one fifth of whom ever attend a meeting of the board of directors, but who are on the board just for the prestige it gives the bank. One bank in New York had 73 directors. It voluntarily reduced the number to 36, week before last, and we voluntarily propose to reduce it further to 25. We provide that no national bank may have more than 25 members on its board of directors nor less than 5.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. GLASS. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I missed part of the Senator's speech, and if he has already commented on the point, I hope he will not comment on it further, because I shall read his remarks in the RECORD. But in case he has not already commented on it, may I ask if there is any relationship between the capital and surplus which a bank may have in comparison to its total deposits?

Mr. GLASS. No; there is nothing in the bill that touches that, though it is an important problem.

Mr. TYDINGS. May I also ask the Senator if there is any provision in the bill which would prohibit the holder of bank stocks from transferring his ownership therein to holding companies, and thereby escaping his double liability?

Mr. GLASS. I do not think any holder of national-bank stock may escape his liability. We deal with holding companies, and we deal with them so severely—but, I am frank to say, with their consent—that they expect to dissolve within the 5-year period given them; and if the branch-bank feature of the bill, attenuated as it is, passes the Senate, we hope to make them branches of national banks.

Mr. TYDINGS. Will the Senator yield further?

Mr. GLASS. Yes.

Mr. TYDINGS. I am not enough of an expert on banking to pass with any degree of definiteness upon the worth of a proposal that a bank should be limited in the extent of its deposits with reference to its capital and surplus. A great many thoughtful persons who have gone into the matter have suggested that bank deposits should not be more than 15 times the amount of capital and surplus. I was wondering whether or not the Senator at this time would care to express himself in favor or disfavor of an amendment designed to carry out that provision.

Mr. GLASS. I am not prepared to say that I would either support or oppose the amendment suggested by the Senator. I may say to the Senator that many thoughtful people have said to me that the ratio should be 10 to 1. In fact, unless I am greatly mistaken, the Comptroller of the Currency once told me that. I will say further to the Senator, however, that we tried, as far as it was possible to do it, to omit highly controversial problems from the bill; and I rather think we have succeeded in doing that, except that I am told there is to be a good deal of discussion of the insurance-of-deposits provision of the bill.

There is one other feature of the bill of which I was about to speak, put in at the suggestion of the junior Senator from California [Mr. McAdoo], relating to cumulative voting in boards of directors of national banks, designed to give, in case of controversy or division of interests, some representation to minority interests.

I think that about completes my exposition of the bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator permit a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from Vermont?

Mr. GLASS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. AUSTIN. I should like to ask about the part of the bill which refers to branch banking in States whose laws permit branch banking. I observe that there is a proviso to this effect:

Provided, That in States with a population of less than 1,000,000, and which have no cities located therein with a population exceeding 100,000, the capital shall be not less than $250,000.

I should like to ask the learned Senator whether it would be within the spirit and purpose of this measure if there could be added another proviso to extend the benefits of this feature of the bill to smaller States; for example, a proviso that in States with a population of less than one half million, and which have no cities located therein with a population exceeding 50,000, the capital shall be not less than $100,000.

Mr. GLASS. Is that Delaware?

Mr. AUSTIN. I have in mind my own State—the State of Vermont.

Mr. GLASS. I should raise no objection to a proposition of that sort. I may say to the Senator that that proviso was incorporated in the bill by the former chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK], who seemed to be opposed to branch banking, but wanted it if South Dakota might obtain it in that way. [Laughter.] The distinguished Senator from South Dakota is such a serious man that I almost regret that I said that in his absence, because I am afraid he might not take it in the vein in which I have stated the matter; but I will say to the Senator that I would have no objection to that.

Mr. President, I think I have about reached my limit in the explanation of the bill, but as we proceed with its consideration, I shall be glad to answer any questions that I can, reminding the Senate, if you please, that I am not a banking expert. Although people say I am, I am not; and I hope the questions will be as simple as possible.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I think perhaps the chief controversy respecting the unfinished business will rotate around the question whether it may not be possible to create at least a temporary formula for the temporary insurance of bank deposits immediately, pending the creation of the permanent structure as proposed in the bill on July 1, 1934.

I happen to be one of those who hold firmly to the view that there is no remote possibility of adequate and competent economic recuperation in the United States during the next 12 months, regardless of all the other splendid undertakings which may be under way, until confidence in normal banking is restored; and in the face of the existing circumstances I am perfectly sure that the insurance of bank deposits immediately is the paramount and fundamental necessity of the moment. Therefore I submit an amendment to the pending bill dealing with the creation of a temporary insurance formula immediately, expiring July 1, 1934, when the regular structure proposed by the pending bill becomes effective; and I ask that that amendment be pending when the unfinished business is again resumed for consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection it is so ordered. The amendment will be printed.

THIRD DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, I send forward a conference report on the third deficiency appropriation bill, and ask for its immediate consideration without prejudice to the unfinished business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico presents a conference report which will be read.

The legislative clerk read the report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 5390) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1933, and June 30, 1934, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 10, 11, and 19.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 12, 15, 16, 17, 18, 21, 22, 23, and 25, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 13: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 13, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Transpose the matter inserted by said amendment to precede line 1 on page 3 of the bill, amended to read as follows:

"BUREAU OF RECLAMATION

"Palo Verde Valley, Calif.: The unexpended balance of the appropriation of $50,000 for the protection of Palo Verde Valley, Calif., contained in the Second Deficiency Act, fiscal year 1932, approved July 1, 1932, shall remain available for the same purposes during the fiscal year 1934."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 20: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 20, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 1 of the matter inserted by said amendment strike out the words "War Department", and in line 5, after the figures "$3,632.14", insert the following: "in all, under the Treasury Department, $15,792.58"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 24: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 24, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: in lieu of the last five lines of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "Total, audited claims, section 4, $110,030.92."; and the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference report in disagreement amendments numbered 1, 2, 7, and 14.

INVESTIGATION OF COTTONSEED INDUSTRY—FINAL REPORT

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McKELLAR in the chair) laid before the Senate a letter from the chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, transmitting, pursuant to Senate Resolutions 136 and 147, Seventy-first Congress, first session, the final report of the Commission relative to an investigation of the charges that certain corporations, operating cottonseed-oil mills, are violating the antitrust laws with respect to prices for cottonseed and acquiring the ownership or control of cotton gins, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC UTILITIES IN THE DISTRICT

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate a letter from the Chairman of the Public Utilities Commission of the District of Columbia, transmitting a proposed draft of legislation to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the expenses of the Government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes, approved March 4, 1913", and for other purposes, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate a resolution of the National Society of the Daughters of the Revolution, New York City, N.Y., opposing any reductions, temporary or permanent, in the active strength of the Regular Army or any curtailment in the training of the National Guard or in the support now extended to the organized reserves, R.O.T.C., or C.M.T.C., and also opposing every policy designed to weaken the national defense, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, if there be no further legislative business, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

FEDERAL EMERGENCY RELIEF ADMINISTRATOR

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McKELLAR in the chair). The Chair laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States transmitting the nomination of Harry L. Hopkins, of New York, to be Federal Emergency Relief Administrator.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, this is an important nomination. I think it will have to go to the committee, but I trust that the committee may take prompt action. The organization for the administration of the act to which the appointment relates is dependent upon the confirmation of this nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair assumes that the nomination should be referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. That is my understanding. I see that the chairman of that committee is not here, but I trust the committee may hold a meeting in the morning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill came from that committee, and the nomination is referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, in confirmation of what the able Senator from Arkansas has just stated, I am advised that there are some six States of the Union in which the relief funds appropriated by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will be exhausted today. The relief situation in those States may, therefore, be fairly regarded as constituting an emergency, and there is urgent need for the immediate organization of the administration for Federal relief under the new act.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Reports of committees are in order.

Mr. SHEPPARD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported favorably the nomination of Brig. Gen. George Sherwin Simonds to be a major general in the Regular Army from February 11, 1933, vice Maj. Gen. Edgar T. Collins, died February 10, 1933, and also the nominations of sundry other officers in the Regular Army and in the Reserve.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The nominations will be placed on the calendar.

Mr. TRAMMELL, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported favorably the nomination of Commander Randall Jacobs to be a captain in the Navy from the 5th day of April 1933 and also the nominations of sundry other officers in the Navy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The nominations will be placed on the calendar.

CHARLES E. JACKSON

Mr. STEPHENS. Mr. President, I report favorably from the Committee on Commerce the nomination of Charles E.

Jackson, of South Carolina, to be Deputy Commissioner in the Bureau of Fisheries.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate confirmation of this nomination.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will allow this nomination to go to the calendar, and let us act on it tomorrow.

Mr. SMITH. My only reason for making the request is that it is very necessary to have this nomination confirmed soon, because the Commissioner in the Bureau of Fisheries will leave in 3 or 4 days for an extended trip, and he wanted to break this new man in thoroughly, so that he might function while the Commissioner was absent. The nominee is my secretary, the report is unanimous, and every day is important, so that he may become familiar with the routine of the office as early as possible. That is my reason for making the request.

Mr. FESS. I withdraw the objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

IN THE NAVY

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I have reported favorably from the Committee on Naval Affairs sundry nominations in the Navy and Marine Corps. If we do not take action on the nominations today of the midshipmen who are graduating this week at the Naval Academy who have been recommended for commissions, these young men will not be able to get their commissions at the time of their graduation. It is a routine matter, and I ask that the nominations be considered and acted upon at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida asks unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of certain Navy nominations. Is there objection?

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, may I make the suggestion that we are getting in the habit of approving these nominations without them going to the calendar, and while I am not objecting to this particular request, I am sure that we do not want to get into that practice.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, this is an emergency matter. It relates to routine nominations.

Mr. FESS. I think the Senator from Arkansas is correct, and I do not object in this instance.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the President may be notified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the President will be notified. If there be no further reports of committees, the calendar is in order.

THE CALENDAR

Executive C (72d Cong., 2d sess.), a treaty between the United States and the Dominion of Canada for the completion of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence deep waterway, signed on July 18, 1932, was announced as the first matter on the calendar.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The treaty will be passed over.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of William Alexander Julian, of Ohio, to be Treasurer of the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination?

The nomination was confirmed.

PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

The Chief Clerk read the nominations of Walter L. Treadway, Lionel E. Hooper, and Francis A. Carmelia to be senior surgeons in the Public Health Service.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to these nominations?

The nominations were confirmed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That completes the calendar.

RECESS

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, as in legislative session I move that the Senate take a recess until immediately following the conclusion of its proceedings sitting as a Court of Impeachment on tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 3 o'clock and 50 minutes p.m.) the Senate, as in legislative session, took a recess until the conclusion of the proceedings of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment on tomorrow, Saturday, May 20, 1933, the hour of meeting of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment being 10 o'clock a.m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

FRIDAY, MAY 19, 1933

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Spera Montgomery, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Ever blessed Father in Heaven, Thy goodness faileth never. We thank Thee and call upon Thy excellent name. Through all earthly vicissitudes Thy love abides. Teach us always to walk with gratitude in Thy light, and strengthen us to be invincible in Thy spirit and purpose. Awaken in us the sense of a fine opportunity of sharing the distress and the hardships of our fellows, and crown our souls with the courage and the pride that can endure these with dignity and without fear. Forgetting ourselves and fronting forward to the right, in counsel and in deliberation may we do our best, that rich blessings of relief may come to our whole country. Put into all hearts, Heavenly Father, the love, the laughter, and the exultant song of a happy life. In the name of our Savior. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 10 minutes and read two letters by former distinguished Members of the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. SNELL. Reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, I should like to ask the gentleman from Tennessee, the majority leader, what is the program for today?

Mr. BYRNS. It is necessary for the Senate to act first on the conference report on the deficiency bill before the House acts. My information is that the Senate has not acted upon it, and it may not act upon it today, so there will be nothing of legislative importance today, but we will have to meet tomorrow.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. BYRNS. Will the gentleman from New York withhold his request until I make a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. BOYLAN. I will yield.

COMMITTEE ON RULES

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Rules may have until midnight tonight to file any report that they wish to file.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York to address the House for 10 minutes?

There was no objection.

LONGWORTH-CAREW CORRESPONDENCE

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I have requested this time in order to read to the House the epistles to and from two distinguished former Members of the House, together with a communication to the distinguished Vice President of the United States.

In passing, I might say that the traditions of this noble, historic, and patriotic society (the oldest patriotic society in the United States) are at this time in the city of Washington in the custody of and being carried on by our distinguished assistant leader of the House, the Hon. THOMAS HENRY CULLEN, M.C., from the State of New York.

The epistles are entitled "To and From Two Bulgarians."

Before reading the letters I have a little note to read, addressed to the Honorable John N. Garner, Vice President of the United States, Washington, D.C.

DEAR JOHN: You will remember this correspondence between myself and Nick Longworth. It seems to me you might put it in the RECORD before you leave the House as a memorial of the happy days we spent with you. May God love you as much as I do.

Sincerely yours,

JOHN F. CAREW.

The correspondence is as follows:

EPISTLES TO AND FROM TWO BULGARIANS

THE SPEAKER'S ROOMS,
UNITED STATES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D.C., June 26, 1926.

HON. JOHN F. CAREW,

House of Representatives, Washington, D.C.

MY DEAR COLLEAGUE: I am addressing you as the recognized and distinguished leader of the Tammany delegation in the House of Representatives to seek your kindly advices with regard to the enclosed invitation which I have lately received.

I was not previously aware of the existence of the Tammany Club, of Columbus, Ohio, which on its face would appear to be a branch of that great society which you so worthily represent in Washington. I know of no one to whom I can so logically appeal as yourself to be advised as to whether the Tammany Club, of Columbus, Ohio, is a branch of the mother chapter or parent organization of the Tammany Society in the great city of New York. As you are aware, I am an admirer of your great organization, which in cohesiveness and efficiency is not equaled by any similar organization in the world, in my judgment; and, while I know the other speakers upon the occasion to which I am invited are men of some prominence in public life, I should not care to be associated even with them if the organization which is sponsoring this event should happen to be a spurious one masquerading under that great name, and I shall be greatly obliged if you will give me such information as you have upon this question. Believe me to be,

Very sincerely yours,

NICHOLAS LONGWORTH.

Eloquentissimus, Parliamentarius Expertissimus, etc., etc.

TRUSTY AND WELL BELOVED: We greet you well. Anxious always to foster and increase the comity which has existed between all of the illuminati throughout the territories septentrionales et occidentales since the institution of our ancient society, we have caused investigation to be made in the archives of our archiveorium and among the traditions of our tradition barrel to ascertain of the Middle West Tammany Club, which has invited your most excellent self along with divers and several other most eminent and worthy barbecuists to its barbecue to be held on July 4, 1926, at 476 South Seventh Street, Columbus, Ohio, and in particular whether such club had been duly regularly and orthodoxically instituted in accordance with the constitution and bylaws of our Ancient Society of Tammany or Columbian Order as originally laid down in 1789 and since amended.

Greatly do we rejoice, beloved son, that you were wise enough to submit this invitation to us. Providentially we are thus enabled to keep you from straying among evil companions to turn your feet from paths wherein they should not. This club which has thus invited you and others of the faithful, and proclaimed your anticipated attendance at its orgies, is entirely heretic, heterodox, and anathema. It exists only for the temptation of the unwary and the destruction of the unwise. It has never at any time been instituted, authorized, accepted, or affiliated with our ancient and honorable society. It originated in 1902 A.D. in a schism from our order conducted by the ancient heresiarch, Richard Croker, who fleeing from the wrath to come found refuge and sanctuary in the Kingdom of Ireland in the suburbs of the city of Dublin on the banks of the River Liffey. Living there in exile and splendor, among other pastimes he followed the turf and thus became acquainted with a Celto-Ethiopian jockey and horse trainer, who not having any family patronymic of his own, adopted the surname Tammany because of his association with Bishop Croker, and raising up unto himself in due time a numerous progeny Senegambian, proceeded to America under passports obtained from the then Turkish Government, entered as Turks, proceeded to Ohio, and there becoming Republicans, protectionists, and primary workers prospered; and from time to time hearing of the prestige and renown of our original orthodox society, with the aid of a colored lawyer, incorporated himself and his posterity under the ancient name of Tammany, making, however, une faux pas as at once appears to the instructed, for our organization is The Society of Tammany or Columbia Order, whereas the impostor has vulgarly incorporated a Tammany Club.

We are also given to understand by the police that this club of Ethiopians and Senegambians is devoted to the cultivation of various games of chance and probability known as "craps", "faro", "soo loo", "high, low, jack", and "red dog", and that they also conduct a blasphemous sacrilegious ceremony of rushing a can around in a cellar, shouting "Volstead! Volstead!" under the impression that they are university men and members of φBK.

THEY ARE ANATHEMA

Needless to enlarge upon this, most excellent and eminent sir. We shall at once see to it that a properly organized, authenticated, affiliated, and orthodox institution of our society is introduced into your city and State. We shall see to it that our ancient traditions, laws, bylaws, constitutions, and ceremonies are communicated to you and your fellow citizens of Ohio. It has been asked, "Can anything good come out of Ohio?" This, however, at this present time only refers to your junior Senator. In your worthy self you have brought fame and glory to Ohio and, as our astrologers advise us, your future is still more distinguished and resplendent. In preparation, therefore, for your approaching exaltation we do hereby authorize, empower, and commission you as the first and finest gentleman in Ohio, to select a council of 13 sachems, a grand sachem, a wiskinkie, a sagamore, and 20 braves as the original officers and charter members of the Ohio Society of Tammany or Columbian Order. When you have submitted the names of yourself and your friends in this behalf, we will invite you and them to our great wigwam on the Rue de Quatorze in the Ville-du-Manhattan-sur-Mere, there to inhale the aroma of the peace pipe, to pledge faith and friendship on the handle of the tomahawk, to quaff deep from the stein of Pilsen and the chalice of Moet & Chambrun, and, as the sachems and braves of the old and the new institution, recline on the golden sands of Coney Island and listen to Homer's Poluphloisboio Thallasse—the much-resounding sea—each with his Minnehaha by his side, we will all join in the chorus of "The Banks of the Ohio."

Given at our tepee in the Domus Aeneas on Mons Capitolinus the day, month, and year above written.

Sealed with our seal, thumbd with our thumb, socked with our socerodotulum.

Imprimatur CAREW, Cancellarius.

RREREFERENCE—THE DALLES BRIDGE CO.

Mr. MILLIGAN. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, I ask unanimous consent that the bill S. 804, to authorize the Secretary of War to grant a right of way to The Dalles Bridge Co., be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

SALARIES OF FEDERAL JUDGES—VOLUNTARY REDUCTIONS

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 3 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, on May 4 my colleague, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. YOUNG], whom I highly respect, made a very bitter denunciation in condemnation of the Federal judges in Ohio upon the ground that they had not accepted the salary reduction under the Economy Act. Among other things he said:

I denounce the Federal judges of my State and will name names and tell facts. They have refused to heed the demands of the times.

Later on in the same speech he went on to say:

Here, Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, is the list of dishonor. I now read the names of the Federal judges from Ohio who have refused to take pay cuts from their salaries: United States Judges Samuel H. West, Paul Jones, John H. Kil-lits, George P. Hahn, Benson W. Hough, and Robert R. Nevin, salary $10,000 each; and United States Circuit Judge Smith Hick-enlooper, salary $12,500.

It has been my good fortune and pleasure to have had a personal acquaintance with Judge Paul Jones for many years. He was born and reared in the city in which I live, and in 1922 I recommended that he be appointed Federal judge for the district court in Cleveland, Ohio. I was not satisfied that the statement of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Young] was justified, on the ground that the Federal judges he mentioned from Ohio had not paid into the Treasury 15 percent of their salary. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Young] spoke of the economy bill of 1933 and of the judges not accepting any reduction under this act. We all are aware that the reductions in the Economy Act took place May 1, and the Department of Justice informed me that a check was received, dated May 1, from Judge Paul Jones as a refund of $125, payable into the Treasury, which represented the 15 percent reduction of his salary. [Applause.]

The Department of Justice also informed me that Judge West sent a check dated May 1, 1933, as a refund to the Treasury Department representing 15 percent reduction in his salary. I am sure my colleague would not have made that statement regarding the Federal judges of Ohio had he acquainted himself with the facts.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. Can the gentleman inform the House how many Federal judges in the United States have made that refund?

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. I cannot, but I know that these two men have. I did not check up on the other men in Ohio.

Mr. SNELL. I think it would be of interest to the House if the gentleman could get that information.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

PRINTING OF REPORT, UNITED STATES ARMY ENGINEERS

Mr. LAMBETH. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Printing, I call up House Resolution 140, which I send to the desk and ask to have read, and ask its adoption. The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 140

Resolved, That the communications from the Secretary of War transmitting letters of the Chief of Engineers submitting reports on the examination and survey of Ashtabula Harbor, Ohio; Bakers (Baker) Bay, Columbia River, Wash.; Bayou Lafourche, La.; Buffalo Harbor, Buffalo River, and Buffalo Ship Canal, N.Y.; Chickasaw Creek, Mobile County, Ala.; Conneaut Harbor, Ohio; Connecticut River below Hartford, Conn.; Cutoff Channel off Perth Amboy, N.J., to connect the Raritan River Channel with the southerly end of the channel in Arthur Kill; Egegik River, Alaska; Erie Harbor, Pa.; Grays Harbor and Chehalis River, Wash.; Honolulu Harbor, Hawaii; Keweenaw Waterway, Mich., and south shore of Lake Superior, in the vicinity of Keweenaw Point, Mich.; and the Warrior and Tombigbee Rivers and tributaries, Ala. and Miss., which were laid before the House of Representatives and referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors during the second session of the Seventy-second Congress, be printed, with illustrations, as separate House documents.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBETH. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. Is this the usual resolution and in exactly the same form that has been presented to the House to take care of these surveys, and so forth?

Mr. LAMBETH. This provides for the printing of certain reports and surveys under the River and Harbor Act of 1927 and 1930. Heretofore it has been the practice to have the surveys and reports sent to the Speaker from the Secretary of War, and to have them simply referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered printed. At the last session of Congress an amendment was placed in the War Department appropriation bill providing that instead of their automatically being printed, as had been the custom, which often resulted in a deficiency, the reports should be referred to the Committee on Printing. We have held up many of those reports which were not needed.

The reports covered in this resolution, introduced by the chairman of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, cover projects which are in the pending river and harbor bill. We have eliminated a great many charts and superfluous data so as to reduce the cost. The cost of printing these reports will be approximately $6,000 and, of course, will come out of the appropriation of the War Department for that purpose. It does not involve any new expenditure.

Mr. SNELL. How much has the committee saved already by taking this course?

Mr. LAMBETH. We have saved over $100,000. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted as a part of my remarks a brief report from the Committee on Printing covering the resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The report is as follows:

Mr. LAMBETH, from the Committee on Printing submitted the following report (to accompany House Resolution 140):

The Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the resolution (H.Res. 140) to authorize the printing of certain communications from the Secretary of War transmitting letters of the Chief of Engineers submitting reports on the examination and survey of certain rivers and harbors, made pursuant to section 1 of the River and Harbor Act approved January 21, 1927, and the act of July 3, 1930, having considered the same, report favorably thereon without amendment.

The River and Harbor Act approved January 21, 1927, and the act of July 3, 1930, authorized the Chief of Engineers to make examinations and surveys of certain rivers and harbors and report thereon to the Congress. Pursuant to these acts many reports have been received, and this resolution proposes to authorize the printing of some of the reports transmitted to the House of Representatives by the Secretary of War at the last session of Congress, all of which pertain to projects contained in the pending river and harbor bill.

In the past, upon receipt of these engineer reports in the Speaker's office, it has been the custom to refer them to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors with an order to print; but in each letter of transmittal accompanying these reports the Secretary of War stated that the "funds available for printing and binding, War Department, fiscal year 1933, are insufficient to provide for the printing of the report", therefore the Parliamentarian of the House directed their reference to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors without printing.

During the last session of Congress an examination of some of these reports disclosed that they contained many charts and diagrams which could be readily eliminated without interfering with a correct understanding of the report, whereupon your committee directed that only such charts as were absolutely essential should be printed. The omitted charts, however, were to remain in their proper position with the original manuscript and be retained in the files of the House.

The Public Printer, in his last report, states that this modification of House orders resulted in a saving of $107,000 of unnecessary printing.

As a result of this saving the Committee on Appropriations of the House inserted, in the last War Department appropriation act, approved March 4, 1933, a provision for the printing of only such survey reports as may be authorized by the Committee on Printing of the House of Representatives. Pursuant to this law, the Parliamentarian has submitted to this committee for consideration all engineer reports received this session, and many of them have been ordered referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors without printing.

During the present session of Congress representatives of the office of the Chief of Engineers, the House Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and your committee have conferred, and the text and charts of the manuscript of each report enumerated in this resolution have been carefully examined. All unnecessary bulk and such charts and maps as were not deemed essential have been omitted. Since these reports were sent to the House, the Chief of Engineers has made available sufficient funds from current appropriations to defray the cost of printing the reports contained in this resolution; therefore, the committee recommended its adoption.

The Public Printer estimates that the cost will be approximately $6,342.88.

A letter from the Chairman of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors urging the printing of these reports is appended hereto.

COMMITTEE ON RIVERS AND HARBORS,
UNITED STATES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
May 11, 1933.

Hon. WALTER LAMBETH,
Chairman Committee on Printing,
United States House of Representatives.

DEAR MR. LAMBETH: With reference to House Resolution 140, introduced by me, and which provides for the printing of a number of survey reports on rivers and harbors, I beg to say that these reports have been adopted by this committee; provision has been made for them in the omnibus river and harbor bill reported to the House on Tuesday last, and that it is essential that they should be printed so that the information they contain shall be available for the Members of the House and Senate when the reports are before those bodies for consideration. I trust your committee will act favorably on my resolution.

Yours sincerely,

J. J. MANSFIELD, Chairman.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

SALARIES OF FEDERAL JUDGES

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of personal privilege.

Mr. Speaker, Members of the House, I wish to say to the distinguished minority leader that I will in just a moment make answer to his question.

Mr. Speaker, it would appear that in the opinion of my long-time friend the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. COOPER, like Moses on Mount Horeb, I was treading on holy ground when I criticized the Federal judiciary.

On May 4, at about 1 o'clock in the afternoon—

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me the gentleman should state the question of personal privilege, if he has arisen on that. I think perhaps the gentleman should ask unanimous consent to address the House.

Mr. YOUNG. I am raising a question of personal privilege because my friend the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. COOPER, said that I made a misstatement and was inaccurate and reckless with the facts in my speech of May 4. I wish to correct that before the House.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. YOUNG]?

There was no objection.

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. Speaker, on May 4, at about 1 o'clock in the afternoon, I denounced on the floor of the House Federal judges of my State and other States who had refused and failed to voluntarily repay into the Treasury of the United States that percentage of their salaries which United States Senators, Congressmen, all Federal officials from the highest to the lowest, and all Federal employees repaid. What I stated on that occasion was true and correct. What I stated was the result of my investigation in the Department of Justice, office of Attorney General of the United States, and in the United States Treasury Department. Two hours before making that speech on the floor of the House I again rechecked my investigation under the Economy Act of 1932. Section 109 of the Economy Act of 1932, that, for the information of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. COOPER], was in effect from July 1, 1932, there was in effect a provision, section 108, that the judges and Federal officials exempt by reason of the constitutional inhibition, could pay into the Treasury that same percentage of their salaries, and I found that President Hoover had voluntarily repaid into the Treasury of the United States 10 per cent of his salary. The Economy Act of 1932 provided for a 10-percent cut on all salaries of $10,000 and more, and a lesser percentage on salaries below $10,000. There is a constitutional inhibition preventing the Congress from cutting the salary of the President of the United States. Unfortunately, also, article III of the Constitution provides that the compensation of United States judges shall not be diminished during their continuance in office. As Congressman at large from Ohio, representing nearly 7,000,000 citizens, all of whom, except the 7 Federal judges of my State, were compelled to make personal and financial sacrifices by reason of the economic disaster affecting all of us except those 7, I felt it my duty to state on this floor of this House the facts as shown by my investigation. No Ohio Federal judge paid any money whatever into the United States Treasury under the Economy Act of 1932, notwithstanding that section 109 of this act made provision for such payment. [Applause.]

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. YOUNG. I yield.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. The gentleman in making his statement did not make any reference at all to the Economy Act of 1932.

Mr. YOUNG. I am coming to the Economy Act.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Answer the question. Did the gentleman make any statement in his speech with reference to the Economy Act of 1932?

Mr. YOUNG. I spoke on the Economy Act of 1933.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Of course the gentleman did, and that is what I had reference to.

Mr. YOUNG. In pursuing my investigation I will say to the gentleman from Ohio and to all of you that I did make a thorough investigation early in May. I had made inquiry of John W. Gardner, general agent in the office of the Attorney General of the United States. I made inquiry in the Department of Justice. I made inquiry of Mr. Burke, of the Treasury Department.

On the 4th of May, 2 hours before I made that address to the Members of the House, I checked the records of the Division of Booking and Warrants in the Treasury Department. This is the Department where remittances made by Federal judges, when any are made, are accepted. I say again on my responsibility as a representative of all of the people of Ohio in the Congress that on May 4, 1933, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, the time I addressed the House, there was no record of any remittance from any Ohio Federal judge. It is true that directly after I made this address widespread publicity was given to it in Ohio. The Cleveland Plain Dealer of the following day—

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Well, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. YOUNG. I yield.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. I must take exception to what the gentleman has said. The Department of Justice informed me just 2 days ago, and I would not have made the statement on this floor if it were not the fact, that the Department had received the checks of Judge Jones and Judge West, dated May 1, for $125 remittance.

Mr. YOUNG. I am coming to that now.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer of the following day in its newspaper article concerning my speech carried this very significant statement:

The Ohio Federal judges named by Young as not having reduced their own salaries * * * are Federal District Judges Samuel H. West and Paul Jones of Cleveland, John H. Killits and George P. Hahn of Toledo, Benson W. Hough of Columbus, and Robert R. Nevin of Dayton, receiving salaries of $10,000 a year, and Federal Circuit Judge Smith Hickenlooper of Cincinnati, receiving $12,000 a year. Judge West said last night that he did not think the question was a matter for discussion and declined to make further comment.

Is it not significant that this judge took this untenable position? Had he in fact voluntarily remitted to the United States Treasury, would he not have been glad to tell the reporter that fact?

It was written:

While the lamp holds out to burn,
The vilest sinner may return.

In the Bible reference is made in chapter 62 of Isaiah to the "lamp that burneth." Thomas Scott, in his great hymn wrote:

Hasten, sinner, to return!
Stay not for the morrow's sun,
Lest thy lamp should cease to burn,
Ere salvation's work is done.

It is gratifying that Judges West and Jones, even at this late date, made some remittance into the United States Treasury. The lamp still "burneth." They are probably as familiar as I with the Scriptures. As a lawyer, I have tried cases in the Federal courts of Ohio and Pennsylvania and have come in contact with various Federal judges. I never met nor heard of one who would dare challenge the inspiration of that Book of all Books, nor the divine character of Him who was born in a manger and crucified between two thieves.

I am happy that, though Judges Jones and West and all Federal judges except those I shall name failed to take voluntarily salary cuts under the Economy Acts of 1932 and 1933, these two judges and others are now making remittances into the United States Treasury.

I am glad now to report that by a certificate dated May 9 on the remittance from Judge West, of Cleveland, $125 was paid into the Treasury of the United States, and by a certificate dated May 8 a payment of $125 from Judge Paul Jones, of Cleveland, was paid into the Treasury. The check of Judge Paul Jones, of Cleveland, was dated May 3, but this payment, as I have said, was not in the Treasury, and the Division of Booking and Warrants in the Treasury Department, where remittances are accepted, had no record of any such payment from Judge Jones or any Ohio judge on May 4.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Will the gentleman yield? I know the gentleman desires to be fair.

Mr. YOUNG. I will yield if the gentleman will get me further time.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. The gentleman knows that notwithstanding the fact that the checks were made out by Judges Jones and West on May 1 and sent to the Department of Justice, it required several days before they were recorded in the Treasury. It is a matter of bookkeeping that caused the delay, and Judges Jones and West are not responsible for what delay there was in remitting their check into the Treasury.

Mr. YOUNG. I will answer the gentleman. Is it not significant that on May 5—and, by the way, the address I made on May 4, although I am an humble Member of the Congress, was given wide publicity in Ohio—President Herbert Hoover voluntarily turned back 10 percent of his salary in compliance with the letter and spirit of the Economy Act of 1932. Three United States judges, honorable, unselfish, and patriotic men, paid money into the Treasury of the United States in 1932 following the passage of the Economy Act of 1932. Not one of these judges was from Ohio. Neither Judge West nor Judge Jones can claim to be included in this group of honorable, patriotic, and unselfish judges. I am happy to name the three: Judges Elliott Northcott, United States circuit judge of West Virginia; Alfred C. Coxe, of New York; and E. Y. Webb, of North Carolina.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. The checks had to be sent by them to the Department of Justice, not to the Treasury Department.

Mr. YOUNG. According to my information, the check of Judge Jones is dated May 3. I do not know the date of the other check.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. The Department of Justice informs me it was made out on May 1.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. YOUNG. I yield.

Mr. DIES. Is it not within the realm of possibility that the checks had been dated back?

Mr. YOUNG. I did not want to say that, but the gentleman from Texas has suggested a possibility.

I did say on that occasion that judges, Federal judges particularly, who did not take the same salary cut that was taken by everyone, from the highest to the lowest, belonged on the roll of dishonor. I am glad that some of these judges have now voluntarily made payments into the Treasury Department so they may be taken from that roll of dishonor.

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I should like to ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 minutes to reply to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Young].

Mr. YOUNG. I hope the gentleman will be given that time.

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I object. I should like to be heard for 10 minutes before the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Cooper] is heard.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. I think the gentleman ought not to object to my having an opportunity to reply to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, under the circumstances, I shall be very glad to have the gentleman precede me.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Young].

There was no objection.

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. Speaker, on the afternoon of May 4, after my speech, Attorney General Cummings made public the names of four Federal judges who had made some remittances to the United States Treasury. None from Ohio. The four Federal judges whose names were announced by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings as the only Federal judges who had voluntarily offered to accept pay cuts are: Judges Elliott Northcott, Alfred C. Coxe, E. Y. Webb, and William S. Kenyon. John W. Gardner, of the Attorney General's office, informed me that the law relating to remittances of salaries of Federal judges had been in effect since July 1, 1932. On May 4 the records of the Division of Booking and Warrants in the Treasury Department showed that in September of 1932, $250 had been paid by Judge Elliott Northcott. No payments subsequent to that time. The records showed that Judge Alfred C. Coxe paid $83.33 September 10, 1932, and a like payment on October 7, 1932; no payments since that time. And that Judge E. Y. Webb, of North Carolina, had paid $200 in December 1932 and $100 additional in February of 1933. On May 5, 1933, there was a certificate received from Judge William S. Kenyon, of Iowa, for $156.25, and on the same date $125 from Judge Mortimer W. Byers, of New York.

Mr. WOODRUM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. YOUNG. I yield.

Mr. WOODRUM. Mr. Speaker, there seems to be a little controversy between the two gentlemen from Ohio as to whether these payments were made on May 1 or May 4. May I direct the gentleman's attention to the fact that on April 26 I addressed the House on the subject and introduced a constitutional amendment (H.J.Res. 164) to give Congress the power to reduce the salaries of Federal judges. The Associated Press carried the information over the country. It may be it had some influence on causing these gentlemen to have an awakening of their patriotic spirit.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will permit, as I remember, Congress raised the salaries of the Federal judges 5 or 6 years ago.

Mr. WOODRUM. That is correct.

Mr. SNELL. By the same token has not Congress the power to reduce their salaries?

Mr. WOODRUM. We cannot reduce their salaries. We can raise them but not reduce them.

Mr. SNELL. Then they are beyond us now.

Mr. WOODRUM. Congress can do this. Congress can reduce the retirement pay of Federal judges. We retire them now on full pay and Congress can reduce this and can also make them pay income tax on their retirement pay. These are two points where we have the right to reach them.

Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman permit just one more question?

Mr. YOUNG. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. Just how many United States judges up to the present time have willingly given up a part of their salary?

Mr. YOUNG. Seven.

Mr. WOODRUM. Up to the time of this resolution three Federal judges had sent in checks, each of them for 1 month, and then quit. This was up to April 26.

Mr. GREEN. In that connection, it seems to me it would be well for the rest of them to be sent over to the Senate like the one from California, if they do not voluntarily reduce their salaries.

Mr. YOUNG. All Federal judges who refuse to take voluntarily a pay cut along with the court bailiff and scrubwoman and all Federal officials and employees, from the highest to the lowest, belong permanently on my roll of dishonor.

It pleases me to be able to say that an official of the Treasury Department telephoned to congratulate me and stated that as the result of the publicity given to my speech of May 4 exposing and denouncing Federal judges for failure to take the same pay cut other Federal employees, from President to scrubwoman, had taken, thousands of dollars would be returned to the United States Treasury that would not otherwise have been paid by these Federal judges.

United States judges who arbitrarily refuse to reduce voluntarily their salaries until this country safely emerges from this unparalleled condition of national distress are blind to the demands of the times. Like the Bourbons of old, they cannot forget and do not learn. They show themselves to be greedy and avaricious. Such judges not only belong permanently on my roll of dishonor but the Congress, under the constitutional authority given in the preamble of the Constitution "to insure domestic tranquility" should properly vote a reduced amount of money for the maintenance of such courts.

The bailiffs who refer to them as the honorable court, and the scrubwomen who on hands and knees in the darkness of night clean their judicial offices so that they may in all dignity and smugness at 9:30 o'clock in the morning commence their judicial duties in immaculate surroundings, have had their pay cut. The scrubwoman, the bailiff, the elevator boy, all employees, have been paying and will pay each month from now on as long as the need exists, regularly out of the small wage our Government pays them, make their contribution of 15 percent to bring contentment and economic security to all our people.

Edmund Vance Cooke, the poet, wrote:

But to be a scrubwoman, with four
Babies or more,
Every day, every day setting your back
On the rack,
And all your reward forever not quite
A full bite
Of bread for your babies. Say!
In the heat of the day
You might be a hero to head a brigade.
But a hero like her? I'm afraid! I'm afraid!

[Applause.]

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

SALARIES OF FEDERAL JUDGES

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, it was not my purpose to stand here this morning and defend any Federal judge who refuses to accept a 15-percent reduction under the Economy Act which we recently passed. What I referred to was the speech that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. YOUNG] had made on May 4, in which he accused Judge Paul Jones and Judge West, of Cleveland, of refusing to contribute 15 percent of their salary to the Federal Treasury.

I conferred with the Department of Justice and this is the information they gave me. The gentleman made his speech on May 4 and the information they gave me was that Judge Jones' check for $125, dated May 1, was received at the Department of Justice. Judge West's check for $125, dated May 1, 1933, was received at the Department of Justice. It took until May 13 for these checks to be credited in the United States Treasury. There is a matter of book-keeping involved, and my purpose this morning was to defend Judges Jones and West against the accusation that these men had not, on May 1, refunded 15 percent of their salary to the Treasury Department. This is all I have to say.

Mr. WOODRUM. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Certainly.

Mr. WOODRUM. What does the gentleman have to say about the failure of the Federal judges, not only in Ohio but elsewhere, to accept the invitation of Congress extended in June 1932, to take the same 8 $\frac{2}{3}$ -percent cut that we had put on all the rest of the Federal employees?

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. I may say in reply to the gentleman from Virginia that I believe the Federal judges should take their 15-percent reduction the same as every other public official or employee of the United States.

Mr. WOODRUM. What is the difference between that cut and the 8 $\frac{2}{3}$ -percent cut? Are they not the same?

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. I believe they should have taken that also, but my purpose in rising this morning was to defend these two men who had sent in their checks May 1 for a 15-percent reduction of their salary as provided in the Economy Act. If the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. YOUNG] was fair and just he would not stand on this floor today and try to leave the impression that Judges Jones and West did not return 15 percent of their salary into the Federal Treasury the first month that the Economy Act was in effect. Today there is far too much willful attack made upon public officials from the floor of this House. Of course, I admit that some public-office holders are deserving of condemnation, but it is my opinion there are only a few in this class. The two Federal judges whom the Member from Ohio so bitterly attacked and condemned, are citizens of integrity and ability, honored and respected by the people of the State of Ohio, and I know that they are just as much interested in the welfare of our Nation as the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. YOUNG].

[Applause.]

STATISTICS ON WORLD WAR ADJUSTED-SERVICE CERTIFICATES COST OF ADMINISTRATION

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on House Joint Resolution 182, introduced by me on Tuesday, by including some figures on the bonus question.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the consent granted, I beg to submit my correspondence with Gen. Frank T. Hines, Director of the Veterans' Administration, on the cost of administration of the laws Congress has passed for the issuance of World War compensation certificates, the amount of loans made, and the present status of the subject.

MAY 10, 1933.

Gen. FRANK T. HINES,
Director Veterans' Administration, Washington, D.C.

MY DEAR GENERAL: Is it possible for you to furnish a breakdown of the expenses of your office so as to show roughly the amounts expended annually in the handling of adjusted-service certificates from the date of the passage of the law?

When the law was passed the following items of expense naturally developed:

- (a) Preparation of blanks.
- (b) Clerks to send out the blanks.
- (c) Clerks to receive them.
- (d) Researches to verify the service claimed.
- (e) Auditors to compute the amounts due.
- (f) Clerks to handle the correspondence.
- (g) Clerks to forward the checks.

Then when the veterans were permitted to borrow on their certificates a large part of the above work was duplicated, and additional labors imposed on your office. You stated last year that up to January 1, 1932, nearly half of the 3,440,634 holders of adjusted-service certificates had secured loans. I presume this figure has been augmented since. Will you kindly let me have the following information:

1. Present total of holders of certificates;
2. Number of holders borrowing, and the total amount;
3. The increased expense imposed on your office by the loan legislation, which I presume will come under the heads a, b, c, d, e, f, and g, above enumerated.

Can you approximate the number of employees assigned to the original issuance of certificates and to loan service and their approximate pay?

Have you any record of the total pieces of correspondence handled?

I realize that this is something of a job, but it will be interesting and even valuable in the consideration of certain legislation now pending, as well as in the consideration of certain legislation contemplated.

With best wishes, sincerely yours,

ANTHONY J. GRIFFIN.

MAY 18, 1933.

HON. ANTHONY J. GRIFFIN,

House of Representatives, Washington, D.C.

MY DEAR MR. GRIFFIN: Further reference is made to your letter of May 10, 1933, requesting certain data in connection with the handling of adjusted-service certificates.

You are advised that it is impossible to give the detailed information enumerated in your letter, due to the fact that, except for the initial efforts, the administration of the World War Adjusted Compensation Act was merged, for economy and efficiency, with the other varied activities of this office.

For the purpose of covering the initial expense referred to, an appropriation was made under the title "Administration expenses, adjusted compensation, 1924-25", in the amount of $1,188,500. There was expended from this appropriation $835,069.73, the balance being covered into the surplus funds of the Treasury.

There is attached for your information the complete statistics available as of April 30, 1933, involving the number of veterans estimated to be entitled under that law; the number of applications received, classified by service in the War and Navy Departments and Marine Corps; number of certificates issued and their face value; number of matured certificates and certificates in force, with their respective values; detailed data with reference to loans made and outstanding, and the source from which payment of these loans was made, and the condition of the adjusted-service certificate fund.

Although it is regretted the detailed information which you desire cannot be furnished, I am sure you will realize that the cost of maintaining a cost and statistics system permitting the assembling of such data would have been prohibitive in comparison with its actual value, and I trust that the information which is being furnished will be of some value and assistance to you.

Very truly yours,

FRANK T. HINES, Administrator.

THE CURRENCY

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

NEW MONEY INSTEAD OF SALES TAX

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen of the House. I met in the corridor a few minutes ago a gentleman from New York, Mr. Robert Harris, of Harris & Vose. Mr. Harris was formerly from Dallas, Tex. He is now one of the largest commission merchants on earth, and he has been for the past 3 years interested in expansion of the currency. He has rendered our cause valuable assistance.

He gave me a thought that I feel should be communicated to the Members of this House. I am not going to spend all my time on this, but I want to tell you what he said.

He said that we cannot tax the country back into prosperity.

That fits in exactly with the school of thought I happen to be a member of, which is somewhat at variance with the proposals now pending before the committees of the House of Representatives.

We have before the Ways and Means Committee the $3,300,000,000 reconstruction bill. The committee is endeavoring to find, this week, some way to raise the money to finance that $3,300,000,000 proposal.

Regardless of how the money is raised, I expect to vote for the bill, and I expect to go along with the administration. I expect to support the administration in the proposal, although it may contain many objectionable features.

I realize that legislation is all a matter of compromise—that we must give and take—but before I yield and vote for certain provisions of the bill that is now before the Ways and Means Committee, and certain proposals pending before that committee, I humbly want to submit for your consideration some changes that should be made.

In the first place, I feel, like Mr. Harris, that we cannot tax ourselves back into prosperity; that if you take the money away from the poor people of the country in the form of a sales tax and deliver it to another class to spend, you are not increasing the buying power of the people. You are diverting it from one class to another class.

RAISE MONEY DIFFERENT WAY

So I feel the money should be raised in a different way. The way I would do it probably you have already decided, but I want to insist that if there ever was a time when the Congress of the United States should return to the Constitution, it is now. The Constitution provides that the Congress shall issue money and regulate its value. We have a fine opportunity now to make a long step in that direction, help the general welfare, and save two or three hundred million dollars annually in taxes.

The question will be raised if you issue money to pay the $3,300,000,000 proposal the money will be fiat money—it will be inferior money. The answer to that is it will be exactly the same kind of money that we have already authorized the President of the United States to issue to the extent of $3,000,000,000.

Such money is not backed by gold necessarily, but each year there is set aside 4 percent as a sinking fund or retirement fund, which will cause the money to be retired over a period of 25 years. The Congress of the United States has already endorsed the principle of issuing that kind of money. If we issue it for this proposal it is no more fiat money than the money we have already authorized. We have endorsed and placed our stamp of approval upon the issuance of that kind of money.

MORE LIBERAL HOUSE RULES

Mr. BROWN of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. Yes.

Mr. BROWN of Kentucky. Will the gentleman offer an amendment to that effect to this bill when it comes out?

Mr. PATMAN. If I have an opportunity. I do not know whether the bill will come out under the general rules of the House or not, and right here I want to commend the Rules Committee. I appeared before that committee this morning in favor of a liberal rule for the consideration of the Steagall bill. After consideration the committee decided that the bill should be presented under the general rules of the House and that there should be free and liberal discussion allowed, and that amendments may be offered. [Applause.]

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. Yes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The gentleman should make it clear that the Banking and Currency Committee requested a strict, closed rule, and that it was the action of the Rules Committee which brought the open rule.

Mr. PATMAN. I am very glad that the gentleman has made that statement. I did not feel like making the statement myself. Three gentlemen representing the Banking and Currency Committee made such a request. I represented the other side. The Rules Committee has endorsed the proposition by adopting this rule of bringing out these bills so as to allow consideration under the general rules of the House, and I hope wherever that is possible and consistent that course will be continued in the future.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. Yes.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. Will the gentleman join with the Members on this side of the House and oppose any rule that is brought in by the Committee on Rules preventing proper amendment on this bill when it comes before the House?

Mr. PATMAN. I am going along with the administration in power. The Democrats are charged with responsibility. The minority party is not charged with responsibility. I am going along with the party in power, and if it is necessary, absolutely necessary, to bring in a strict and rigid rule for the consideration of an administration measure, I shall yield my convictions and vote for that special rule, but it must be an administration measure and it must be of an emergency nature.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. Does the gentleman mean to say that he will surrender his own independent judgment?

Mr. PATMAN. I have already done that.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. And vote for the party in power, no matter what sort of proposal is made?

Mr. PATMAN. Oh, no. I say if it is an administration proposal and it is necessary to get quick action on the bill, which otherwise would be unnecessarily delayed without a special rule. In such a case I shall vote for the rule. I have done it in the past, but I am against gag rules, as my votes will indicate.

I shall not undertake to discuss the Steagall bill at this time, but will get back to the proposition of issuing these $3,300,000,000 in money.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. Yes.

Mr. McFADDEN. I want to know whether this proposal is in addition to the authority already given to the President in the farm bill?

PRINCIPLE HERETOFORE ENDORSED BY CONGRESS

Mr. PATMAN. It is my understanding that it is in addition. I am not at all sure about that, however, but if it is in addition, it is the same money that the President is now authorized to issue and it can be issued to pay the $3,300,000,000 of this reconstruction program. If you issue $3,300,000,000 in money and put it out to the people of the country, that is a circulating medium. It will cause an increase in commodity prices. What is the difference between a circulating medium and a noncirculating medium issued by the Government? One is a Government bond which draws interest and does not circulate, and the other does not draw interest and does circulate. They are backed by exactly the same property and exactly the same security. Every bond that is issued is a mortgage upon all of the homes and other property of the people of the Nation as well as upon the incomes of the people. Every dollar of money that is issued is backed in identically the same way. If the bond is good, the money is good.

Some will say that there will be too much money, $3,300,000,000, that it allows too much to go into the banks, which they may use as reserves and upon which they may issue additional credit. In answer to that, as you issue the money raise the reserve requirements of the banks. That is one thing which is wrong with our banking situation today. A banker can issue $10 of credit for every $1 that he has on deposit in his bank. Consequently we have a situation where we have $40,000,000,000 owing to the people of America on their deposits, and if all of the banks in the country were closed today and a representative were sent to the vaults to gather all of the money they possess, he would find much less than a billion dollars. It is true that they would have some additional money in the Federal Reserve banks, but it does not amount to a great deal. If you were to issue gradually, not quickly, a sufficient amount of money to absolutely retire the national debt of $21,000,000,000, the people would take the $21,000,000,000 and place it in the banks, and then we would have deposits aggregating $61,000,000,000, instead of $40,000,000,000; and instead of having $1,000,000,000 in cash to pay those deposits, we would have $22,000,000,000 in cash to pay those deposits. So if you will increase your reserve requirements of the banks, you can issue a large amount of money.

Then the banks would be safe. They would have one dollar actual money for every three credit dollars. There would be no danger of runs. There would be no danger of banks breaking; but as long as you have about two cents in the bank to back up every dollar, there is always danger of a loss of confidence and runs on banks. So there is a good argument to support the theory that you could absolutely pay off the national debt, gradually, not quickly, with new money, by at the same time gradually raising the reserve requirements of the banks of this Nation. There would be no difference. There would be no upsetting of our system in the least. Would it not be preferable if this money could be issued just like all other money, to pay for this reconstruction program, rather than to levy a sales tax upon the barest necessities of life?

Mr. BEEDY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. BEEDY. Does the gentleman think paper money is used as a reserve for other issues of money in the banks of this country?

Mr. PATMAN. What does the gentleman say is used?

Mr. BEEDY. Why, gold is the reserve.

Mr. PATMAN. Entirely?

Mr. BEEDY. Absolutely. You cannot print paper money and use it as a reserve for other issues of money.

Mr. PATMAN. We can use it if we say so by legislative act. We only have $4,300,000,000 in gold, and we have more than $40,000,000,000 in deposit dollars.

Mr. BEEDY. Yes; and if you raise the reserve requirements you cut down the possibilities of outstanding circulation.

Mr. PATMAN. We can raise them and regulate them any way we want to. Just as they can regulate the issuance of deposit currency, we can regulate the reserves any way we want to. A gold certificate is paper money, and it is used as reserve. Other paper money is also used as a reserve by banks.

Mr. BEEDY. Gold certificates are used as reserve when there is a gold dollar for every gold certificate outstanding.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. There is no gold, necessarily, behind national-bank notes.

Mr. BEEDY. Not at all, and they cannot be used as reserves for further issues.

Mr. PATMAN. Now, I want to talk about the difference in the issuance of this money and the sales tax.

Mr. BUSBY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

SAME BUNCH HUMBUGGING US

Mr. BUSBY. I was asked this question this morning: If we can issue $3,000,000,000 of currency, why can we not issue ten? I said, "We could." "If you can issue ten, why can you not issue a hundred billion?" I said, "You could." Then I said, "If you can sell $2,000,000,000 worth of bonds, why can you not sell ten?" He said, "You could." I said, "If you can sell ten, why can you not sell a hundred billion?" He said, "You could." Currency is a non-interest-bearing debt, as has been pointed out. Bonds are an interest-bearing debt. It is a matter of common-sense administration with either one of them, and nothing more nor less.

Now, if the gentleman will permit, gold is not back of our currency now, and you cannot get your currency redeemed in gold. If you take a gold certificate down there they will take it away from you and give you something else, but it will not be gold. Now, the only thing that is back of currency is the future earnings of the people of this country and the properties of the people of this country, as the President pointed out. The only thing that is back of the bonds, and the only thing that makes them valuable, is the future earnings of the people of this country and the properties of the people of this country. There is more profound ignorance on this question than any other one I know of, and I do not mean that is confined at all to the country generally. We ought to study it and ought to understand what we are doing, and as long as we do not do that we will be humbugged by the same bunch who has been humbugging us. [Applause.]

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD SHOULD BE WIDELY READ

Mr. PATMAN. I thank the gentleman for his contribution. I wish more people would read the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and read the speeches of the distinguished gentleman from Mississippi, who has just addressed you. People generally do not know that they can get the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD except through their Congressman. They do not know that they can subscribe for it by paying $1.50 a month or $8 a session. I wish Members of the House would encourage their constituents to subscribe for it, if for no other reason that they be permitted to read discussions by such gentlemen as the distinguished gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. BUSBY] and become informed on these matters. It is the only uncensored publication in America. There is not any other publication in America that is not censored. The CONGRESSIONAL RECORD is the only one. The CONGRESSIONAL RECORD is the only publication that does not carry colored news, colored information, or subsidized information in some way, shape, form, or fashion, either representing an organization or special interests in some manner. I do not mean to say that all publications are corrupt, but every publication has someone to censor the news that goes into that publication, someone to color that news if they want to, but the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD is the only publication in America that carries uncensored and uncolored news, and instead of restricting its distribution I wish it were possible for each Member to send out several times as many as he is allowed today.

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the gentleman yield for a suggestion?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. BRITTEN. I am convinced the gentleman is just 100-percent wrong and that there is more colored news carried in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD than in any other paper in the United States.

Mr. PATMAN. But he will be able to read a discussion on both sides of every question. Each side has an opportunity to present in the way and manner that they want to present it, their side. That is not true as to every other publication.

It is the only publication in America where one person or a committee does not have the right to say what goes in and what does not go in.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. I think perhaps the gentleman from Illinois referred to times when he does the speaking.

Mr. BRITTEN. Oh, no. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I cannot yield.

Mr. BRITTEN. I did not mean to be discourteous to the gentleman, but we talk on the floor of the House about the bonus, about the sales tax, about the veterans, about legislation in which we are interested. I myself talk about the Navy. Is not that colored in the interest of the Navy as I see it? Of course, it is. Therefore, I say the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD carries more colored news in it than any newspaper in the United States.

Mr. PATMAN. But the Member representing opposing views to those held by the one who has the floor can present those views and the other Member cannot censor them. Each side of every question is fairly presented.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. COLMER. I hope the gentleman from Texas will not be led astray from the purpose of his speech, that of discussing the revenue.

Mr. PATMAN. My time is rapidly escaping. I think I shall address myself to the Steagall bill.

HOW PRESENT PROGRAM CAN BE FINANCED

Mr. COLMER. Does the gentleman know any good reason why the public-works program cannot be financed in the manner he has indicated?

Mr. PATMAN. There is no reason in the world why it cannot, and I believe the majority of the Members in this House would favor such a proposal. [Applause.] If you really favor it, I hope you will make your wishes known, for you can render some very effective service at this time if you will contact the Ways and Means Committee and ask that we be given a hearing on this proposition. Let your wishes be known that that method of financing may be considered along with others.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield before he reaches this question of the public-works program?

Mr. PATMAN. For a question.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. In the event the Government does not issue money but levies taxes, would the gentleman prefer taxing the Federal Reserve System and getting its $280,000,000 surplus and a certain percentage of the money they now have?

Mr. PATMAN. Absolutely. I am getting to that right now.

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for an observation?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. PARSONS. I do not agree with what the gentleman has said with reference to the issue of $22,000,000,000 of currency.

Mr. PATMAN. We are talking about $3,300,000,000 now.

Mr. PARSONS. I see. I do agree with the gentleman for an issue of $3,000,000,000. The public works bill is being proposed as a charity measure. It has for its purpose the giving of employment to labor, to restore buying power. After all, it is a bonus to business and to the individual workman. The $500,000,000 relief is to be included as part of the $3,300,000,000. The country has already spent probably $3,000,000,000 in this depression for charity.

Is it fair, it is right, is it honest, is it just, when everybody else is giving for charity, to tack on a bond issue bearing interest at rates from 3 percent to 5 percent, when the money is to go to charity and when we can issue $3,000,000,000 in currency to take care of the matter without the issuance of interest-bearing bonds? [Applause.]

Mr. PATMAN. I thoroughly agree with the gentleman. A bond issue if it is ever justified is only justified for projects out of which money is to be made. Certainly it is not justified where charity is to be extended or for non-self-liquidating projects as in this case.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

WHO WILL MANAGE NEW CURRENCY

Mr. McFADDEN. The gentleman refers to new issues of Government money. This money will go to the Federal Reserve. Who is going to manage this increased money that will be put into circulation?

Mr. PATMAN. We hoped the money would go into every section of the Nation and that it would take some time for it to get back to the Federal Reserve. When it does get back there it will be used as a reserve by banks and will serve the same purpose as though it were placed in the vaults of the banks.

Mr. McFADDEN. But the credit which is based on this money when it gets into the Federal Reserve will be under the management of the Federal Reserve.

Mr. PATMAN. Yes; I agree with what the gentleman has said, but I am hoping and trusting the Federal Reserve System will be conducted in a better manner than it has been the last 12 years.

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a further question?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. PARSONS. I may say to the gentleman that if this $3,000,000,000 of new currency were issued the Government no doubt would place it to its credit in the Federal Reserve System and checks would be drawn against it for payment of contracts, labor, and so forth. This currency would not go out into circulation, but it would start the velocity of the currency that is now locked up in the banks.

Mr. PATMAN. That is a good suggestion. Of course, velocity is a greater factor than volume, always, but when there is no velocity there is only one way to stimulate velocity and that is by adding volume.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Speaker will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. McFADDEN. If the course suggested by the gentleman from Illinois is pursued, the Federal Reserve System would immediately be given control over this credit.

If under the gentleman's policy money is put out in payment of its bills by the Treasury only, that which is sought to be accomplished by the gentleman will be more nearly accomplished than to place under the control of the Federal Reserve all the money and credit which is to be issued. [Applause.]

BLESSING OR A CURSE

Mr. PATMAN. As to whether or not the Federal Reserve System is a blessing or a curse depends upon whether or not the ones administering it are angels or devils.

I hope we will have better people administering it during the next few years, because I feel that during the past few years it has been administered in a way that has been detrimental to the general welfare, and I know the gentleman agrees with me.

Mr. DONDERO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. For a question; yes.

Mr. DONDERO. Will the gentleman discuss in connection with the issuance of this money what he thinks is the best method of getting this money back into the pockets of the laboring man who needs it?

PAY ADJUSTED-SERVICE CERTIFICATES

Mr. PATMAN. Of course, the gentleman knows very well that the proposal I have had in mind to get money back to every nook and corner of the Nation is to pay the adjusted-service certificates. I believe this is the best way, but at the same time this other proposal can be used as another very effective way, and as an effective vehicle to convey money into every section of this Nation. When you go to spending money on highways, the highways lead into every section, remote as well as other sections of the country. So the money will get all over the country.

In the Steagall bill there is a provision that I especially want to invite your attention to. It is in no way related to any other section of the bill.

SOP TO BIG BANKERS

I feel that the big bankers of this country are displeased with some of the major provisions of this bill, but there is one provision in the bill, whether it is intended as a sop to the big bankers or not, it certainly will have a tendency to cause them not to oppose it as much as they would otherwise oppose it. This is section 3, which says that after the Federal Reserve banks have paid their operating expenses they shall then pay 6 percent dividend on the stock that is held by the private banks of the country and then the remainder goes into the surplus fund of the Federal Reserve banks.

I want to explain to you how this section is absolutely destroying the great principle that this Congress invoked in 1913, when the Federal Reserve Act was pending before the Congress. It is changing the policy of our Government entirely. It will amount to a franchise that will be worth billions and billions of dollars for the Federal Reserve banks. The Federal Reserve banks are private institutions with every dollar of stock owned by private bankers. It is a bank for bankers only.

When these proposals were up in 1912 the monetary commission made a report and that report made the recommendation that in the event a central banking system or a semi-central banking system, like the Federal Reserve System is today, should be adopted, the Government would issue the money. It would be printed over here at the Government Bureau of Engraving and Printing as it is being printed by the millions and millions of dollars every day.

A while back they were printing $30,000,000 a day over there. When this money was to be sent to the private banks, this Monetary Commission said that every one of these bills will represent a mortgage upon all the homes and other property of all the people of this Nation and a mortgage upon all the incomes of the people. Therefore, when these bills are delivered to the private banks they shall pay a 2-percent interest charge for the use of this Government's credit.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 10 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. AYRES of Kansas). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. BEEDY. Mr. Speaker, I do not care to object, but may I ask the gentleman a question? I have no objection to his request.

There was no objection.

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman is too late.

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. Very well.

Mr. BEEDY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. Yes.

WHY NOT PRINT MONEY FOR ALL GOVERNMENTAL EXPENSES?

Mr. BEEDY. This thought occurs to me. The gentleman is opposed to the sales tax, and the gentleman says that the way to meet the expense of this public-works program is to print money. What is the necessity of the Government's collecting any taxes? If this is an economical and a wise method of procedure, why does not the Government pay its running expenses by printing money?

Mr. PATMAN. I know that is the argument that gentlemen who represent the gentleman's school of thought always make.

Mr. BEEDY. What is the answer to it?

Mr. PATMAN. You cannot issue an unlimited amount of money. You can only issue money in proportion or in relation to your national wealth and your national income. Certainly these factors must be taken into consideration as well as your ability to redeem this money. We can redeem this money in gold up to about $4,252,000,000, and in addition to this we can redeem money in services rendered by the United States Government. This money can be used at the post offices to buy stamps or to pay for transportation, or it can be used at the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to pay back the money that has been borrowed by the banks or to pay taxes. It can be used for all kinds of Government services; and may I suggest to my good friend that we must keep in mind the ability of our Nation at all times, in some way or manner, to be able to redeem money that is issued. Therefore an unlimited amount cannot be issued.

Mr. DUNN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. Yes.

WEALTH OF NATION

Mr. DUNN. Can the gentleman state what is the wealth of the Nation?

Mr. PATMAN. A short time ago the Twentieth Century Fund Committee reported that the wealth of the Nation is about $300,000,000,000. May I add that much has been said about the amount of money the Government of the United States has been expending for veterans of wars of different kinds, and comparing it with the amount expended in other countries. If you take the ability of the United States to pay according to its wealth and the national income and apply the same rule to other countries, you will find that France and England, even Germany, has been expending from four to eight times as much on their World War veterans as has the United States.

Mr. PARSONS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. PARSONS. In answer to my good friend from Maine, I should like to say that no one—or at least I myself have not made any pretense at issuing currency without control or without any provision for the retirement of that currency in the future. My idea is to issue the currency—save the interest during the depression—and when the revenue begins rolling into the Treasury retire the currency.

Mr. BEEDY. I want to ask the gentleman one question more.

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. BEEDY. The gentleman's logic is that you issue within the limit this amount of money and so long as we stay within the limit represented by the gold we hold, plus the property of the United States, that is safe, is it not, according to your reasoning?

Mr. PATMAN. According to the rule I laid down national income and ability to redeem either in gold or services must be taken into consideration.

Mr. BEEDY. Within the limit?

Mr. PATMAN. Yes. Since 1850 the national wealth, income, and bank deposits have increased from 10 to 25 times. One trouble has been that the volume of money has not increased along with the increase in the bank deposits, national wealth, national income, and monetary gold stock.

Now, I hope gentlemen will excuse me and not interrupt, for there are other gentlemen who want to speak, and I do not think it is fair to ask for any further extension.

GOVERNMENT CREDIT SHOULD BE PAID FOR

I do think that you will be interested in what I am going to say about the Steagall bill.

When this monetary commission made its report that the credit of the United States should be paid for, the Aldrich bill was introduced. Mr. Aldrich proposed that when the Government Bureau of Engraving and Printing delivered the money to the private banks they should pay 2 percent interest. They called it a tax, I believe, but it was 2 percent interest. When the Federal Reserve Act was up, it was argued that there ought not to be any limit but it ought to be left to the Federal Reserve Board to say, and so section 16 of the Federal Reserve Act provides, that when this money is delivered by the Government the Federal Reserve bank shall pay the rate of interest that may be assessed by the Federal Reserve Board. And the Federal Reserve Board set a zero limit—not anything. It let the credit of this Nation be used free of charge upon the theory, of course, that when the Federal Reserve banks made their operating expenses and paid their 6-percent dividends, the remainder would go over into the Treasury anyway, and so why assess an interest charge in the beginning? Well, they were determined to capture that money before it ever reached the Treasury, and so they got an amendment inserted in the bill which provided that the money, instead of going into the Treasury, should remain as a surplus fund in the Reserve banks until the surplus fund was 40 percent of the paid-in capital stock.

That was reached in 1918, and they were about to have to pay $100,000,000 into the Treasury of the United States in 1919, but in some way, in some manner, an amendment went through to the bill which provided that the surplus fund would not go into the Treasury until after the Federal Reserve surplus fund had been increased to 100 percent, not of the paid-in capital stock but of the subscribed capital stock. The capital stock of the Federal Reserve banks is about $320,000,000. They have paid in only $160,000,000, so if they made it 100 percent of the paid-in capital stock it would not amount to but $160,000,000 for the surplus, but making it the subscribed capital stock it amounted to $320,000,000. They now have $280,000,000 in the surplus fund. They were determined to capture that money before it got into the Treasury of the United States, and thereby refused to pay for this most valuable franchise ever given to a private corporation on earth. It pays no income taxes in any way, shape, or form. And now this bill comes along and provides that they will not only pay their current expenses but we dare them to spend all they can, pay high salaries—$30,000 to $50,000—build fine buildings, though, of course, Congress must authorize that under the present legislation, and then pay 6 percent of the capital stock; and instead that this surplus go into the Treasury, as the framers of the act contemplated, this bill provides that all of it shall go into the Federal Reserve banks' surplus fund, and it will not be long until they will be declaring big dividends to themselves and paying higher salaries through being permitted to use the credit of this Nation free of charge.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman's time be extended for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Cannon] has been trying for an hour to get the floor. When the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Patman] is through—and he always makes a valuable and interesting speech—I think the gentleman from Wisconsin should be recognized. I have no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. Yes.

DELEGATION OF POWER

Mr. MAY. Is it not a fact that the manipulations of the Federal Reserve Board in the handling of the authority conferred to it by the Congress is one of the strong illustrations of the mistakes of this Congress in delegating its powers here, there, and yonder, to boards and bureaus, and is not this the outstanding one that has done detriment to this country?

Mr. PATMAN. I think I can answer that by stating what I said a while ago. As to whether this law or any other law that is administered by a board, a bureau, a commission is a blessing or a curse will depend upon whether those who are administering it are angels or devils. If they are good, it will be all right; if they are bad, it will be all wrong. We have to depend upon somebody to administer every law that we pass.

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. Yes.

Mr. PARSONS. What does the gentleman think the Federal Reserve Board anticipate doing with this money in the future if this bill should pass? What will they use it for?

Mr. PATMAN. The board, if it goes to them, will put it in their vaults, and it will possibly result in retiring some of the Federal Reserve notes, and I hope it will, because every day a Federal Reserve note is outstanding somebody is paying interest upon it, somebody is paying for the use of it every day it is outstanding; but this money that we are talking about, just like the Civil War money, $346,000,000 outstanding on which the people have saved a half billion dollars of interest during the last 60 years, nobody will be paying interest upon while it is outstanding.

Mr. McFADDEN. And let me call attention of the gentleman to this fact. When this money goes into the Federal Reserve bank, it becomes a credit which is subject to multiplication under certain conditions up to 20 times, and that the Federal Reserve and its member banks will sell that money to the public and make its usual profit.

Mr. PATMAN. They have so much power now in respect to credit that certainly we need not object from that standpoint.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. If this 1-percent tax were put upon the Federal Reserve bank, would there be any necessity for a sales tax?

HOW MONEY CAN BE RAISED

Mr. PATMAN. If we were to put one half of 1 percent interest charge on Federal Reserve notes, as they are issued by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and one half of 1 percent interest charge on all the credit that is used by the Federal Reserve banks each year, and they should issue as much as in 1928 and 1929, we would raise from $200,000,000 to $300,000,000 a year. If we had collected this money as the law requires, we would not have any deficit in the Treasury. We would have a surplus. If we were to go back and collect it now, we would not be suffering, because we could not raise revenue. We would have plenty of money, if we had carried out the mandatory provisions of the original and existing Federal Reserve Act.

Mr. McFADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

VIOLATION OF LAW

Mr. McFADDEN. Is it not a fact, in view of what the gentleman has said, that by avoidance of the payment of this franchise tax, which is collectible under the law, the Federal Reserve Board and banks have deliberately violated the law?

Mr. PATMAN. I think they have violated the law, and I think they should be compelled to carry out the mandatory provisions of that law. I should like to see the Ways and Means Committee write into this bill, if necessary, that whenever those bankers are permitted to use our credit, if we permit them to use it at all, that they certainly shall pay a reasonable compensation for its use.

Mr. EAGLE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to my colleague.

HOW MUCH MONEY IN CIRCULATION

Mr. EAGLE. Referring to the intelligent questions asked by the gentleman from Maine of the gentleman from Texas, may I ask whether the following facts are not substantially correct: First, that of all outstanding paper money of every sort, national-bank notes, Treasury bills, the old greenbacks, silver certificates, gold certificates, Federal Reserve bank notes, Federal Reserve notes, the records show a total outstanding of substantially $6,000,000,000; secondly, is it not substantially true that it is estimated and practically proven that of that $6,000,000,000, $500,000,000 have been destroyed, burned, or lost, so that there is actually only five billion five hundred million of paper money; and is it not substantially true; third, that if to that five and one half billion were now added three billion additional paper money, making a total of between nine and ten billion dollars in paper money, we now have in the Treasury of the United States and the mints and the subtreasuries and the treasuries of the 12 Federal Reserve banks enough gold to make $47 in gold for each $100 of paper money outstanding, so that we can issue that $3,000,000,000 and have it as good as the present paper, or on the gold standard?

Mr. PATMAN. I want to thank the gentleman for his suggestions and the information. His statement is substantially correct. We have sufficient idle gold to authorize the issuance of $5,000,000,000 additional money without lowering the gold reserve below 40 percent.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Patman] has again expired.

SECURITIES LEGISLATION

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have until midnight tonight to file a conference report on the securities bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Rayburn]?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Cannon]?

There was no objection.

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say a few words this afternoon on a subject that I consider very, very important, a subject that I consider rather important to Members of this House.

A short time ago I introduced a resolution that is now before the Committee on Printing. That resolution provided that we should abolish the right and privilege hereafter of extending and revising remarks in the Record. I am going to insist, as a Member of this House, that from now on we shall not have any extensions of remarks in the Record and that we shall have no revision of remarks in the Record. I know how you feel about it, and I am not making this argument because of the fact that I was not given recognition this morning, but I came here for the purpose of making this argument. I think it is a big joke, if you want to know it; I think it is a colossal fraud upon the people of this country for a man to stand on this floor and speak for a period of 2 minutes and go back to his office, and on a great many occasions go back with some ghostwriter, and write a big, beautiful speech of 15 or 20 pages. I think it is wrong. I think it is a fraud upon your constituents; and if you had any nerve about you, you would agree with me on the subject. You resent it. Well, let me tell you why. Do you know what the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD is costing the taxpayers of this country? Close to $5,000 a day. I have introduced a bill that is before the Committee on Ways and Means to cut the production of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD from 31,000 or 32,000 down to 5,000; to cut it down to 5 copies for each Member of this House and 8 for each Member of the Senate. That is enough.

Why should they be permitted to send out any more than 5 or 8 copies of this CONGRESSIONAL RECORD? What need have you for them? The only other need you have for the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD is to use it as a political tool at the expense of the taxpayers, and if that bill is passed it will save close to $4,000 a day for each day the Congress is in session.

Mr. KELLER and Mr. HOEPEL rose.

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. I will yield for any question after I finish my statement, but I prefer to finish first.

Now, my friends, I have no quarrel with any Member of this House. I have got along fine with everybody. I do not have an enemy here unless it is somebody who is keeping under cover that I do not know anything about. Every man has been friendly and congenial with me. The older men have been very friendly and kind toward me. Therefore my position in this matter is not taken to be directed against any Member of this House. That is not my purpose. But my purpose is this: Not only from the standpoint of the money that can be saved, that the Printing Office can save by doing away with extension of remarks, but from the standpoint that the Members come onto this floor, stay here and argue for 5 or 10 minutes upon a bill, and the minute their argument is over—I do not say that they all do it, but the greater portion of them do it—their whole mind is set upon getting a copy of that speech, and they send a page boy out, and the first minute they are out there in the other room making revision of their remarks. Another thing that they do if they ask permission to extend their remarks: They sit here for a while and then go back to their office. Sometimes they take a ghostwriter back there with them, and the ghostwriter takes care of the speech that appears in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD the following day. That is true, and every Member of this House knows it.

If you think that is not a fraud upon the American people, then I misunderstand the meaning of the word "fraud."

Understand, I am not in politics, and I am here under somewhat of a financial sacrifice [applause], but I believe in my heart, honestly and sincerely, that this is an abuse and it is a fraud upon the American people. If the Members of this House have not got the intelligence and the ability to come down here in the well and stand up and make a logical argument, a sensible argument that we all can understand, either pro or con on any bill that comes up before this House, I say they should not be permitted to go out into the other room and revise their speeches to such an extent that you cannot recognize them 2 hours later. Nor should they be permitted to go back to their offices and there have somebody else write speeches for them or they themselves add to their speeches probably 10 times what they said here on the floor and then have them franked out to the American people.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. I yield.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Is the gentleman going to revise his own remarks this afternoon?

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. I am not going to revise my remarks.

Mr. KELLER. Why not?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. What if the stenographer got some of your remarks wrong?

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. I say that if any man stands upon this floor—

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Just a minute; will not the gentleman answer my question?

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. If the gentleman will permit me to, I shall be pleased to answer it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. Yes; I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota and to any other Member who wishes to ask a question.

Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota. What would happen if a farmer like myself made a speech here? I am not a silver-tongued orator and, of course, I have to revise my remarks. However, the people of the country who happen to read them know very well I did not deliver that speech. [Applause.]

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. I yield.

Mr. BOILEAU. As I understand, the gentleman's objection is not directed toward a Member making slight corrections, corrections of grammar, and so forth, to make his remarks appear as he intended to express them.

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. No.

Mr. BOILEAU. But rather to an extension of the material of his remarks?

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. When a man takes the floor and makes a speech and later discovers there are errors in it, grammatical errors, and we have heard a lot of them here, he should be permitted to correct them in order that the speech may go back to his constituents correctly.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. I yield.

Mr. DONDERO. Is it not true that the real reason we are permitted to extend our remarks in the RECORD—and I admire the gentleman's earnestness—that with 435 Members in this body it is absolutely and physically impossible for every Member to take the well of the House and express his opinion on pending matters? There is no other way for the Members to do it in many instances than by an extension of remarks. And is it not further the truth that the gentleman's constituents desire and demand the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD? I cannot get half enough copies to supply the demands from my constituents.

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. The gentleman's constituents may desire it, but the gentleman knows that many of the 32,000 copies of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD that are sent out daily into rural districts take the place of the Sears-Roebuck catalog. The gentleman knows this is true.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. May I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that there are 19 big counties in my district, and several high schools in each county, and there is a university of the first class and seven big colleges in my district, and all these schools maintain a library. Many of them want these RECORDS. They demand them. With my limited allotment, I cannot furnish a third of the schools in my district that ask me for them. I cannot get enough to furnish daily newspapers and large school libraries in my district that demand copies.

Does not the gentleman think they are a great help to the boys and girls in all these schools?

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. I agree with the gentleman's statement. If the gentleman will read my bill, he will find they are taken care of.

Mr. HOEPEL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. I yield.

Mr. HOEPEL. May I ask the gentleman if he voted for any of the gag rules?

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. Yes; I have voted for them.

Mr. HOEPEL. Then may I not remark that the gentleman is running true to form when he wants to gag the RECORD.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. I yield.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. If the gentleman persists in his attitude, will he have any objection if the Democratic Rules Committee brings in a rule to override him?

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. If the Democratic side of this House wants to bring in a rule to override my position, they are at liberty to do so.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. I yield.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Is the gentleman at this time campaigning against his predecessor who took up so much of the RECORD?

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. To whom does the gentleman refer?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. To the former Member from Wisconsin, Mr. Stafford.

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. Am I campaigning against him?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Yes.

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. I am not campaigning against anybody at the present time.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. He used to take up a lot of the RECORD, and I was wondering whether the gentleman was referring to him.

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. Mr. Stafford was not my opponent.

Mr. BLANTON. Since his name has been mentioned, will the gentleman allow me to say that Mr. Stafford was one of the most valuable Members this House ever had. [Applause.]

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Schafer was the gentleman's opponent, was he not?

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. Yes; Schafer was my opponent.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOODRUM. Mr. Speaker, I shall join any gentleman of the House in any movement that means real economy, but I want to say to my young friend who is serving the people of the Nation at a financial sacrifice [laughter], that it would be false economy to undertake to limit the number of the issues of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

I agree with the gentleman in saying that the privilege of the RECORD is often abused. It is not abused as much at this end of the Capitol as it is at the other end of the Capitol, but it is abused, and I do think that a great deal of good could be accomplished, the size of the RECORD could be reduced, and its value as a document of information could be increased if there could be some sensible and logical understanding between the two bodies and among ourselves as to what we put in the RECORD.

But let me say to you, my colleagues, that it will be a sad day in this country whenever the people of the country do not have full and ready and accurate information as to what we are doing or what we are not doing in this body. [Applause.]

Under existing law each Member is allowed 59 copies of the daily RECORD for distribution. The gentleman would limit the number of copies to 5 to each Member.

Five copies of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD would not supply your libraries, or your newspapers, or your debating societies. By the time we take one copy at our office and one copy at our residence, as most of us like to do, if we read the RECORD at night—as you probably have to do—you would not have enough copies to go around, and I think my experience and your experience has been that the vice of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD is not in the number of copies, but in the liberality with which articles are extended in the RECORD.

Mr. PARSONS. At the other end of the Capitol.

Mr. WOODRUM. As my friend suggests, at the other end of the Capitol. Of course, I cannot say to what body I am referring, but I shall leave that to your fertile imagination.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM. I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. Our friend from Wisconsin [Mr. CANNON] had in mind the famous extension of remarks made by a distinguished Senator from Wisconsin of nearly 100 pages of the RECORD, and his enthusiasm is based, possibly, on that incident. No Member of the House approves of such extensions as that.

Mr. WOODRUM. I remember the extension that the gentleman refers to. I remember another extension that I figured up cost something like $1,200 or $1,400, in which the entire record of some senatorial investigation was reproduced in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, and as you gentlemen know, you pick up the RECORD almost every day and see where some gentleman has put in the RECORD great columns of newspaper articles and editorials.

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM. Yes.

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. Does the gentleman know that a Member of the House a very short time ago sent out 200,000 copies of a printed speech?

Mr. KELLER. It was paid for?

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. Yes; it was paid for, but it was printed at the Government Printing Office and that speech cost $11.30 for the first thousand and $2.30 for every additional thousand. This same speech was submitted to a reputable union printer here in the city and he was asked what 200,000 copies of the speech could be printed for without any profit to him, and he said, $40 for the first thousand and $10 for the balance.

Mr. WOODRUM. Of course, I do not know anything about the particular case the gentleman is talking about and I do not believe his information is correct. The speeches that Members of Congress have printed and sent out are paid for by themselves out of their own pockets and not at the expense of the taxpayer. They are franked and, possibly, the franking privilege may be abused. I am not defending that, but the cost of the printing of speeches, so far as my information goes, is borne by the Member of the House and paid for out of his own pocket.

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. Just one more question. May I say that the Printing Office has advised me that they are losing money daily on these speeches and that they are not receiving the actual cost of printing these speeches.

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. WOODRUM. Yes.

Mr. MAY. With the previous attitude of the general press of the country toward the Congress for the last few years, what medium has the Congress of the United States to use to give their constituents the truth about what they are doing except the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD?

Mr. WOODRUM. That is quite true.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOODRUM. Every day there goes out of this body a photograph to the people of this country of just what we have said and what we have done; and speaking about the right to revise your remarks, gentlemen, it is a saving grace sometimes.

I want to say with the utmost kindness, as an old, gray-haired Member to a splendid, bright, young gentleman, that when he gets his remarks this afternoon he ought to revise them, because he is put in the attitude of making a very serious aspersion on an honorable body of which he is a Member, and a gentleman ought never to place himself in that attitude. [Applause.]

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. And reports during the consideration of the economy bill showed that all of the documents that are franked by the Government from all the departments, including Congress and all independent offices, constitute only one tenth of 1 percent of the deficit in the Post Office Department, and the President of the United States in his radio address on postal matters said that with the present

Post Office force it could handle twice as much mail with the same cost at which it is handling the mail now.

Mr. WOODRUM. Exactly.

Mr. BLANTON. So the franking privilege, so far as handling it in post offices is concerned, has cost the Government practically nothing. The Post Office employees receive nothing additional for handling it.

Mr. BYRNS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM. I yield.

Mr. BYRNS. I do not wish to have the RECORD show that Members of the House are having the printing of their speeches done at less than cost. The fact is the Government Printer estimates the actual cost of all speeches he prints, and Members of Congress reimburse the Government for every dollar expended in connection therewith, and, as I am informed, plus 10 percent added to cover any possible mistake in the estimate.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM. I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman from Wisconsin has evidently been talking with some disgruntled printer who wants to do the printing of these speeches. May I call the attention of the House to the fact that Congress is being constantly abused by newspapers for exercising the franking privilege, when every newspaper that attacks Congress has the franking privilege for papers in its own county, and that it costs $102,000,000 more than they pay in postage to carry those newspapers and magazines.

Mr. KELLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM. Yes.

Mr. KELLER. I suppose the gentleman's experience is the same as mine, that I pay extra postage on matter that I send out for my constituents to more than pay for the benefit I derive from the franking privilege.

Mr. DONDERO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM. I yield.

Mr. DONDERO. Is it not true that the people of the Nation look to this body for the dissemination of information which they can get in no other way?

Mr. WOODRUM. I think the gentleman is correct.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM. Yes.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. I have sent to the document room and procured a copy of the bill introduced by the gentleman from Wisconsin. It applies solely for the distribution of the RECORD. There is nothing in it regarding the abuse of the RECORD. If there is anything that should be done in the House it is to correct that abuse, and I might add the Senate should act first.

Yesterday I talked with the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL] and suggested to him that he confer with the Democratic leader [Mr. BYRNS], agree upon two men on each side of the House, and let the House know that four men have been appointed who would be on the floor in the future to object to any unanimous-consent agreement to put anything in the RECORD other than Members' own remarks. I refer to the insertion of editorials and newspaper articles.

Mr. WOODRUM. I am somewhat in sympathy with that, except for this fact: I have seen that rule enforced in the House, and the only result was that it deprived our colleagues of putting in what they wanted to put in and the matter was inserted usually at the other end of the Capitol. If you enforce it at all, it ought to be enforced at both ends of the Capitol.

[Here the gavel fell.]

MEETING TOMORROW AT 11 O'CLOCK

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock tomorrow.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, I want to make this explanation, that because I did not object to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin I do not wish it understood that I agreed to everything he said.

Mr. BLANTON. Reserving the right to object, I want to call the attention of my friend from Wisconsin [Mr. CANNON] to the fact that while he was reflecting on the remarks he made against extensions, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT] has just gotten permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. I am letting the matter go by for today; but I shall begin tomorrow.

Mr. LAMBETH. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Wisconsin in his colloquy with the gentleman from Virginia stated that the Government Printing Office loses vast sums of money in reprinting the speeches of Members of Congress, implying that that is the cause of the deficit. I want to say that that is not the fact. I have official information from the Public Printer that he figures the cost of printing the speeches and sells them to Members at cost. I want to say, too, that the gentleman reflected seriously and unjustly on the integrity and ability of a faithful public servant who has been in charge of the RECORD for over 50 years—Andy Smith.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

THE GOVERNMENT SHOULD CONTROL THE BANKS—BANKS MUST NOT CONTROL GOVERNMENT

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WEIDEMAN. I cannot yield now.

Mr. Speaker, I have obtained this time in order to speak on the bill introduced by the Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, H.R. 5661, but before doing that I want to comment on the matter that the gentleman from Wisconsin discussed. He would curtail the distribution of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. I would be in favor of increasing the number of CONGRESSIONAL RECORDS allotted to each Member, to distribute throughout the country, so that the people may know the work that we are actually doing here. [Applause.] The CONGRESSIONAL RECORD will stand as a part of the current history of the country. Of course, it is unfortunate that the gentleman who preceded me in the Seventy-second Congress [Mr. Clancy] and who was on the Republican side of the House, distributed the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD to the presidents of boards of commerce, bank presidents, industrial executives, Wall Street, and so on. I have changed that method of distribution. I send mine out to every school that applies and to the people back home who want to know and should know what is going on, and if we could have a few more copies of this RECORD to send back to the people, to the tillers of the soil and the workers in the factories, we might have some changes of faces here, more than we have had in the past. I am anxious to have my people know what I am doing.

I compliment Members here whose faces I see today, some of the older faces. I see them here day after day and week after week. They do not miss a minute. It is necessary to print this RECORD so that the people who are elected here to Congress, but who do not seem to have time to attend the sessions, may know what is going on. I say this because of the fact that so many Members evidently do not have time to attend the sessions of Congress. Many of them spend their time looking for jobs in the departments, when they are paid to be here to discuss this and other matters of interest to all of them, whether Republican or Democratic. This is our open forum for discussion, where we meet and exchange views, and I, for one, will willingly vote to increase the number of CONGRESSIONAL RECORDS to be distributed throughout the country at any time. [Applause.]

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

SOME SUBSIDIES OF GOVERNMENT

Mr. WEIDEMAN. No. The gentleman has shown much concern over the cost of this RECORD. I wonder if he has raised his voice against the subsidy given to the newspapers, amounting to $102,000,000 every year. The Post Office Department donates this amount to the newspapers yearly, due to losses suffered in carrying their mail. I wonder if he has raised his voice, either on the floor or by an extension of remarks, against the subsidy given to the steamship lines, amounting to $21,000,000; and whether he has raised his voice, either by extension of remarks or on the floor of the House, against the subsidy of $20,000,000 a year given to the aircraft lines. Let us not quibble over these little things; let us get at these big subsidies. Let us get down to the root of this thing, down to the banking situation in this country, which controls us all.

MONEY CONTROLS PUBLIC OPINION

How far do the bankers exercise their control over the country? I mention this because we are to be asked to pass a bank bill in a few days. They control radio, and how! They control the movie industry and sell the people worthless stock, they rob and commit pillage of the people day in and day out, by stock issues. First, there is Wall Street. What does Wall Street control, and the House of Morgan and the House of Kuhn-Loeb, and all the rest of them? They control all of the voting stock in radio, banks, and the motion-picture industry and they control the means of publicity that some Members of Congress are fearful of. They determine whether or not you men are going to be sent back here. You will not come back if you are afraid. Of course, I do not expect to get any of that publicity from the controlled press or radio; I do not want it. I got a call only last week when voting on the radio bill. A boy that I attended college with 15 years ago called me up from New York and asked me how I was going to vote on the investigation of the movie industry. He said that one of the owners of the chain theaters and chain radio in Detroit was there with him in New York and also wanted to know how I was going to vote. I voted for the investigation. That is my answer. Wall Street tries to control your vote, and everybody else's, by threat. That was an indirect threat. I do not expect to get any advantage from them. I do not want it. They did not send me here. I am solely responsible to the ordinary citizens and not to Wall Street or the subsidized press.

ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAY

We had a matter up here in respect to the St. Lawrence waterway. I voted to refer that bill back to the committee and then refer it back to the House with instructions that our vote on the ratification of the agreement made between the Power Authority of the State of New York and the United States Government should not be construed as the feeling of the House on the waterway. I did that for this reason: I do not think the United States got as fair a deal in that treaty as it was entitled to. Ninety percent of the St. Lawrence River lies wholly within Canada.

UNITED STATES OUTMANEUVERED

A Canadian editorial appearing in the Toronto Mail and Empire of July 18, 1932, places the cost to the Canadian treasury at $38,000,000 and the cost to the United States, part of which is assumed by New York State, at $600,000,000. The Canadian Minister has worked on this treaty, and they have provided that all of the work done in Canada must be performed by Canadian labor, and that all of the material must be Canadian material—and still we are paying over 66 percent of the cost of that. Of the horsepower to be developed, Canada gets four fifths and the United States one fifth.

AMERICA FIRST

Now, do you think Uncle Sam is getting a fair deal? I do not. I am interested in protecting the rights of American citizens, American labor, American capital, and American seaports. In addition, the St. Lawrence River is only open 7½ months a year. There has been a lot of ballyhoo, and one of the newspapers in Detroit, which is also tied up with these bankers, said, "Why stab the seaway?" I did not stab the seaway. I voted for the ratification of the power agreement, but I am interested in protecting American rights, and do not want American citizens taxed for this construction, and advantages given to Canada. I am not interested in destroying the ports on the Great Lakes. It is another well-known fact that we have had uniform control of Lake Michigan all these years, and under this treaty we make Lake Michigan an international lake. I am more interested in this country than I am in England, despite the fact that our former administration seemed to be more concerned in the welfare of England than in the welfare of this country in the drawing of treaties. The former administration even went overseas to get these new brass doors for the Commerce Building at a cost of $6,000 a door. I hope we do not follow in their footsteps.

Now, I want to bring to the attention of some of the new Members something that I have discovered since I have been here. There is not anything so mysterious about money that we cannot all understand it; and if there is any piece of legislation that is brought before this House that you cannot understand, you have no business passing it on to the general public to be a law to govern them. It is when we make laws mysterious and unintelligible that we get into deep water. Let us keep our laws in plain language, in simple facts, so that we can all understand them and we will not get far away from our duty.

CONGRESS SHOULD BE INFORMED

The Federal Reserve Board publishes a bulletin every month. You will not get this bulletin unless you ask for it. I advise every Member of Congress to write to the Federal Reserve Board and ask them to send you their bulletin published each month. It has worlds of information in it. You can see the trends of money, the foreign exchange, and many other things, and I advise you all to get that. Of course, I am speaking to the new Members, I cannot speak to the old Members, but after listening to some of them, I think perhaps they should read some of these things, too. [Laughter.]

Here is the annual report of the Federal Reserve Board. That is just full of statistics concerning banking and currency, and you will have to write for that, too. You will have to insist on it. After you write for the Federal Reserve Bulletin, ask that you be placed on the mailing list or you will only get one issue.

I would also advise you to get a copy of the Federal Reserve Act and read it through. You are charged with governing the finances of this country, and I will venture to say there are not 2 percent of the Members of this House who have ever read that act. I want to commend that to the Members who are interested in the financial condition of this country.

MEMBERS DISCUSS BANKING BILL

Last week we met in a little group. There were Representatives KELLER, of Illinois, PATMAN, of Texas, McFARLANE, of Texas, PARSONS, of Illinois, Judge FIESINGER, of Ohio, FORD and KRAMER, of California, ZIONCHECK, of Washington, LLOYD, of Washington, KNUTE HILL, of Washington, and about 30 other men who were present at this conference to discover what was in this bill. We are interested in restoring the financial system in this country to the proper hands. I think it is the duty of every Member of Congress to know what is in a bill before he votes for it. In line with that, Mr. McFARLANE and myself, after consulting with those gentlemen, spent a little time going over this bill. I have prepared some amendments to H.R. 5661, the Steagall bill, which amends the Federal Reserve Act.

SHOULD WE AMEND BILL?

I think if you are going to give the banking powers back to Wall Street you should at least do your constituents the courtesy of reading this bill through. You are charged with knowledge of what is in the bill. In section 3 of the bill this is what they do: In section 3 we have a new section amending the old law. The old act provided that after the Federal Reserve bank gets $160,000,000 in reserve the surplus should be turned back to the Treasury of the United States. The original provision in the Federal Reserve Act provided for a reserve in the Federal Reserve bank of $40,000,000. When they got the $40,000,000, so that they would not have to pay anything to the Government, the bankers increased it to $160,000,000. Now, what does this bill propose to do? On page 5, line 4, H.R. 5661 provides:

Net earnings shall be paid into the surplus fund of the Federal Reserve bank.

Do not you see what you are doing? You are giving away the entire power to control money in this country, and you are giving it to Wall Street. You are giving them an absolute franchise on money. For what? For nothing. They give the country nothing. I wish I had that franchise. Just think of it. If you could give me bonds and I could have money printed on them and go out and lend it at whatever rate of interest I could get, anyone could make money. One of my amendments is to strike that language from the bill entirely. The other amendment is where it reads "Federal Reserve bank", to strike out those words and insert "the United States Government."

The Federal Reserve banks are not owned by the Government. They are private institutions. They are entitled to 6 percent of the earnings that they make. What were the earnings in 1931? That is the last report I could get. Why, you people are robbed blind by the expenses incurred by the Federal Reserve banks. From the very inception they would buy a piece of property at $60,000 for bank sites and sell it back to the Government within a few months for $300,000; not only once, but many times. I use these figures for purposes of illustration.

Now, about earnings, the gross earnings of the Federal Reserve banks in 1931 amounted to $29,701,000, or $6,723,000 less than in 1930, and were lower than any other preceding year since 1917. After deducting current expenses of $27,040,000, somewhat less than the previous year, and allowing for the depreciation on bank currencies, reserve for losses, and so forth, there remained net earnings of $2,000,000. Just think of the expense to run the Federal Reserve banks of this country. Twenty-seven million dollars, which goes out mostly in salaries to executives, for paying telephone bills, business losses, and so forth. I ask you to examine this some day. They are just committing robbery upon the people day after day. This is the first section to which I call your attention, section 3.

The second is section 4. On page 5, line 10, they have included Morris Plan banks. They are allowed the right of getting Government privileges the same as Federal Reserve banks and State banks. I do not know of any single reason why this private group of highwaymen calling themselves the "Morris Plan Bank," should be allowed the privilege of using Government money. If we would follow the plans outlined by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. KELLER], we could pay the soldiers' adjusted-compensation certificates twice over.

Another matter to which I wish to call your attention is page 8, section 5, line 11. I have prepared amendments on all of these. We hope to be able to offer amendments under the 5-minute rule. I am taking these matters up in advance to advise the Membership what I have found. I have spent considerable time trying to analyze this bill, but did not nearly get through it. We are hoping that tonight the same group of interested men who are trying to save this country will get together to discuss this matter further.

This language reads:

The Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency shall be ineligible during the time they are in office and for 2 years thereafter to hold any office, position, or employment in any member bank. The appointive members of the Federal Reserve Board shall be ineligible during the time they are in office and for 2 years thereafter to hold any office, position, or employment in any member bank, except that this restriction shall not apply to a member who has served the full term for which he was appointed.

Why, that is just the man we should reach, and I shall seek to modify this language. If we are going to get the banking situation back in the hands of the people, back in the hands of the Government, we have got to take it out of the hands of the big bankers. We trusted them and see what they have done to us.

SHOULD BANKERS BE APPOINTED FOR 12 YEARS

Farther down on page 8 the term of office is fixed at not to exceed 12 years as the term of any appointive member of the Federal Reserve Board.

I propose to offer an amendment reducing the term to 6 years.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a short statement?

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Yes; I yield to my colleague from Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. The gentleman made the statement that he had voted for the ratification of the treaty between Canada and the United States. I do not think the gentleman meant that.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. No; I did not say that.

Mr. DONDERO. Treaties are ratified at the other end of the Capitol.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. I think the gentleman misunderstood me. I said I voted for the ratification of the agreement between the Power Authority of the State of New York and the Federal Government.

Now, let me call the attention of the House to one or two other matters.

We elect our Senators for only 6 years, and that is too long; they get too far away from the people. This is my first term, but I see now how easy it is to get out of contact with things at home. The Members live in a different atmosphere here in Washington. They live in a different background, and I can well understand how easy it is to become divorced from the feelings of the people.

I propose to offer an amendment changing the term from 12 years to 6 years. With the term of 12 years, no administration can control the Federal Reserve Board. With the term fixed at 6 years for new appointees, the President can get control of the Board and appoint members who will act in the interests of the people of the United States and for their benefit.

I wish to call attention also to section 12 (a), a new section which creates a Federal open-market committee. This is going to deal with the international aspects of banking operations. I have not time to go into it now, but I ask you to read this section carefully, and examine it, to see that you know what it is, and then follow it back through the Federal Reserve Act and through the United States Code so you can see the change that has been made.

Another matter I wish to speak of is section 9 on page 14 which amends section 14 of the Federal Reserve Act as amended. I propose to offer an amendment providing that they shall report all relationships and transactions to the Congress of the United States on the 1st day of January of each year. This relates to international dealings. Why, the bankers here have loaned hundreds of millions of dollars on foreign securities. I have a list here but I have not time to go into the matter at this time. I propose that the Congress shall know where our money is going, how many hundreds of millions of dollars of the people's money is being invested in foreign countries for the building up of industries employing cheap foreign labor to compete with the industries of our own country.

SHOULD BANKERS USE GOVERNMENT MONEY FREE?

Section 8 provides for advances to member banks, and so forth. I propose to offer an amendment to section 8, page 13, line 17, by inserting, after the word "Board"—and this deals with revenues—the following words:

But not to be less than 2 percent interest per annum.

I propose that a charge be placed upon Federal Reserve banks for Government money that they use.

I propose, inasmuch as the other law did not fix any charge and Professor Goldenweiser, before the investigating committee, said that the banks had fixed a zero charge for the use of this money, and that is how the Government got gyped—I propose to write in here 2 percent. Do you know why? The Federal Reserve bank, for instance, finances automobile purchases. In short, the General Motors sells you a car and they take the paper to the bank and the Government gives them Federal Reserve money, for which they pay the usual rate of interest. The Federal Reserve does not pay anything for the use of this Government currency, still General Motors charges the person who buys the automobile 21 percent for financing charges. That is how they are making money off us.

LIMIT SALARIES TO $15,000 A YEAR

There is another provision in here, section 5 (b), with respect to the payment of salaries, and I propose to insert there, after the word "therewith", in line 25, page 9, the following:

Provided, That no officer, member, or employee whatsoever shall receive a salary or remuneration in excess of $15,000 a year.

They say we cannot get a good banker for $15,000 a year. We have had $200,000-a-year bankers and they robbed us, did they not? I say you can get honest men for $15,000 a year. If we can get a Vice President to serve the United States who is honest and who is guarding the interests of the people for $15,000, I say you can get bankers to work for $15,000 a year. [Applause.]

The following statements are included to show to what extent the original purposes of the Federal Reserve have been changed, and to what limits the international bankers will go in their attempts to control the entire economic and financial structure of the United States and of the entire world.

AMENDMENTS TO THE FEDERAL RESERVE ACT PROVIDING FOR THE SALE OF FOREIGN SECURITIES IN THE UNITED STATES AND FOR THE INVESTMENT BY NATIONAL BANKS OF THEIR DEPOSITORS' MONEY IN THE STOCKS OF INVESTMENT TRUSTS AND OF BANKS ENGAGED IN FOREIGN BANKING

The following statement is offered in explanation of the foreign banking amendments to the Federal Reserve Act, as part of the history of this act:

Acts were approved September 17, 1919; December 24, 1919; and June 15, 1921, all relating to the same general subject matter, namely, the investment by national banks in the stock of corporations engaged in foreign banking and other international financial operations, and the organization and operation of such corporations under Federal law and subject to Federal supervision. After the close of the war it became apparent that the adequate financing of foreign trade would require credit facilities of a kind which could not properly be furnished by banks doing a strictly commercial banking business, and that such special facilities could be furnished in a large way only by corporations with authority to purchase foreign securities and paper representing long-term credits, and with authority to issue and sell to the public their own debentures secured by such securities and long-term paper.

The act of September 7, 1916, had amended section 25 of the Federal Reserve Act so as to authorize the larger national banks—that is, banks with capital and surplus of not less than $1,000,000—to invest in the stock of "banks or corporations . . . principally engaged in international or foreign banking." There seemed to be some doubt, however, whether this authority to invest in stock of banks or corporations engaged in banking gave the right to invest in stock of these debenture-issuing or investment corporations. Furthermore, it seemed desirable for the encouragement of such corporations to authorize investments in their stock by all national banks, both large and small. Consequently, the act of September 17, 1919, was passed, authorizing national banks, until January 1, 1921, and without regard to the amount of their capital and surplus, to invest in the stock of corporations "principally engaged in such phases of international or foreign financial operations as may be necessary to facilitate the export of goods, wares, or merchandise from the United States or any of its dependencies or insular possessions to any foreign country."

Section 25, as thus amended, in terms authorizes national banks, upon the conditions and subject to the limitations therein stated, to invest in the stock of banks or corporations of the specified kinds which are "chartered or incorporated under the laws of the United States or any State thereof"; but, as a matter of fact, no provision was made for the incorporation under Federal law of such banks and corporations until the enactment of the so-called "Edge Act", approved December 24, 1919.

This act added to the Federal Reserve Act a section, designated section 25 (a), which authorizes the organization of corporations "for the purpose of engaging in international or foreign financial operations", thus permitting the Federal incorporation of both types of corporations referred to in section 25; that is, banks doing a commercial banking business and corporations issuing debentures and doing an investment business. The act also describes the powers of such banks and corporations and gives to the Federal Reserve Board full power to examine, supervise, and regulate their operations.

Section 25 (a) as originally enacted required that corporations organized under it should have a capital of not less than $2,000,000, one quarter of which must be paid in before the corporation is authorized to commence business, and the balance in 10-percent installments at the rate of one every 2 months. This requirement was modified by the act approved June 14, 1921, which provides in effect that a corporation with an authorized capital in excess of $2,000,000 may apply for the consent of the Federal Reserve Board that such excess be paid in on call of the board of directors, provided that in all events 25 percent of the total capital must be paid in before the corporation commences business.

The words "debenture-issuing or investment corporations" mean investment trusts. The other corporations that can be organized under section 25 and 25 (a) of the Federal Reserve Act do a foreign banking business, as, for instance, the Chase National Bank, financial friend of Soviet Russia, but do not issue debentures, bonds, or notes.

Under these amendments to the Federal Reserve Act—that is, under section 25 and section 25 (a)—foreign securities were brought into the United States in blocks. These blocks were divided and distributed in lots to investment trusts. The national banks were permitted to invest in the stock of these Federal Reserve investment trusts practically without limit. Shares of the investment trusts were then sold. The Comptroller of the Currency defined marketable securities in such a manner as to include them. These foreign securities are not the same securities as those which were floated in this country. These securities, in the most part, were floated abroad and purchased on foreign stock exchanges. The total amount of such securities put into the United States investment trusts under the supervision of the Federal Reserve Board is a large one.

GOVERNMENT AIDS INVESTMENT TRUSTS

The effect of bringing those foreign securities into the United States was disastrous. They were brought in here in lieu of gold. During the past 6 years the United States has gained no gold on net account. When the shares of the investment trusts sank to a few cents on the dollar the unreliable foreign securities carried down the United States securities with which they were intermingled. This led to the formation of the superinvestment trust known as the "Reconstruction Finance Corporation." During the hearings on the Reconstruction Finance Corporation bill someone asked if the Corporation was designed to help private bankers. A gentleman at the other end of the Capitol said it would "relieve investment trusts." The Reconstruction Finance Corporation might have been formed under existing law; the chief object of the specific bill was to capitalize it with Treasury funds. If the Federal Reserve Act had not been amended in section 25 and by the addition of section 25 (a), the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, unconstitutional and dangerous, would never have been formed.

The nature of the foreign securities which were unloaded on the United States under sections 25 and 25 (a) is shown in the following list of German securities held by the United Founders and its subsidiaries (about May 1931). It has been said that international bankers have repurchased many of these securities at trifling cost. This scheme paid billions to its promoters and, by means of it, hundreds of small United States banks were ruthlessly and deliberately destroyed to make way for predatory branch banking on a Nation-wide scale.

Could anything be more dangerous than the transformation of national banks into investment trusts, with power to sell questionable foreign securities to our nationals under cover of deceptive corporate titles?

HOW THE BANKERS GAMBLER WITH AMERICAN MONEY

United Founders

This is a holding company owning a majority of the shares of 2 investment companies and of 1 public-utility holding company (United States Electric Power Corporation). It has an interest in the earnings of The Public Utility Holding Corporation of America. The price at which these foreign securities were unloaded on the American public is a matter which should be inquired into.

LXXVII—238

While American money has been financing the world, our financial system is hungry for money, currency, or a medium of exchange to start the wheels of industry turning again.

And our bankers now ask for more Government aid in the form of money, having invested, gambled, and speculated our money in foreign industry in building foreign factories to compete with American factories and American labor.

"Trust your banker."

You did, and the American public holds the bag.

Mr. SHANNON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHANNON. I am sensible of the fact that in the midst of our popular fervor and enthusiasm for the program of economic reconstruction and the long-hoped-for "new deal" a warning voice may not find much of a welcome. I want it understood that I have no desire to oppose or in the least to throw an obstacle in the way of the many reforms now under way, which, God knows, are sorely needed to bring some order out of the existing chaos. As a Democrat—a Jeffersonian Democrat, if you will—I stand ready at all times to raise my voice and give my support to any measure on the Presidential program that seems to point the way for the forgotten man, or the little forgotten business, to beat his or its way back to prosperity. But when I find creeping into the company of the many varied and popular measures for the rehabilitation of business such a mysterious stranger as the movement to repeal the Sherman anti-trust law, it seems to me that we should call a moment's halt and reconnoiter the ground ahead of us. There may be a black-winged vulture edging his way in among our eagles of reform. I seem to sense an atmosphere of hugger-mugger in the harmony of our plans and hopes that will bear investigation.

I recollect in my school days reading the great story of the siege of Troy. The Greeks for 10 years had tried to batter down its walls in vain. At last they sought an armistice and they constructed a great wooden horse which they asked leave to present to the Trojans as a peace offering. But one wise old Trojan, when the proposition came up in council, said, "I fear the Greeks even when they bear gifts." But his warning voice was voted down; and when the wooden horse was pushed through the opened gates of Troy, it was filled with Greek soldiers, who opened the way for the Greek invaders, and Troy fell never to rise again.

If, as we have repeatedly reiterated in our party platforms, the antitrust laws were the first stepping stones to some remedial legislation designed to correct the abuses brought about by combinations aided by immense capital, why, may I ask, do we now stop in the midst of our great movement of reform and our efforts to relieve the struggling business men of the land and the unemployment that has resulted from their failure to carry on, to wipe from the books the first remedial law in this regard that was ever placed there? Is it not time to sound a warning, to look about us, to inquire whether we are not about to open our gates to a wooden horse with his belly full of trust magnates?

I am not advised how far this movement directed against the antitrust law has penetrated the program of reform, or whether or not our leaders have given their approval to it. For myself, I want to go upon record as against any attempt to remove that law from the books. Enough has been already done to emasculate it and weaken its vitality. But the law is still there, and it is my hope that life may yet be restored to it. As chairman of the committee which investigated Government interference with the small business man, I learned from original sources the destructive influences of such competition. But far greater and more devastating within the past 20 years or more of big-business rule has been the havoc wrought upon the struggling merchants of this country by the concentration of capital and interlocking corporations—an evil which the Democratic Party has fought consistently in every campaign and which, in my humble judgment, it stands pledged to remedy now that it is in a position to redeem its pledges.

A REVERSAL OF DOCTRINE

To me, for the Democratic Party to turn about face on the trust question would be as preposterous and heretical a change of doctrine as for an ordained representative of some great religious body that had for centuries taught a belief in God to announce suddenly to his congregation that "for a few years now we propose to release you from a belief in God and to suspend the operation of His law, as a new experiment."

Thomas Jefferson, from far-off France, at the making of our Constitution, complained of the things that the Constitution failed to take notice of, or, rather, that the makers left out of the proposed document. One of these was the Bill of Rights, guaranteeing freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom of the press, an adequate, permanent habeas corpus, and, further, a proper control of monopoly.

It was doctrines such as these which Jefferson enunciated that caused Thomas Edward Watson, the historian of Georgia, to say of Jefferson that his teachings called upon the lawmaking power to use every device possible to keep down the centralization of great wealth, meaning that there should be no accumulation of the wealth of the land in the hands of a few; that the wealth of the land should be divided; that there should be a multiplicity of the well-to-do scattered over the land, from which source only national happiness could come. If wealth were to be concentrated, of course, the contrary would be true. And that great statesman and founder of our party principles said further that he would not give a fig for a people that did not have the spirit of revolt in their blood, lest those in control of government should forget whose government this was.

THE MAN WHO MADE THE LAW

In 1889, the opening day of the session of Congress of that year, Mr. John Sherman, of Ohio, introduced a bill which had for its purpose the regulation and control of monopolies, trusts, and so forth. That bill was debated in the Senate of the United States and in the House of Representatives for a period of some 5 months. The measure now on the books and known as "the Sherman antitrust law" came from the Judiciary Committee as a substitute to the one introduced by Sherman, and it is commonly said that the real author of the agreed-upon measure was Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts.

In the body that debated that question were such great minds as those of John Sherman, George Frisbie Hoar, George Franklin Edmunds, George Graham Vest, Francis Marion Cockrell, John James Ingalls, Preston B. Plumb, John H. Reagan, and the great constitutional lawyer from Mississippi, James Z. George, and many other great men of the period. It was really a blending of the various elements that had participated in the war between the States. They knew no sectional bounds; they knew no line of party distinction in that contest. They stood together to pass a law which they hoped would protect the American citizen in the future from the encroachments of great organizations of wealth.

The measure passed the Senate with but a single negative vote. Under the leadership of "Silver Dick" Bland in the House every vote present was cast for the act. The President of the United States signed the bill.

Mr. Justice Harlan, in his dissenting opinion in the Standard Oil Co. case, said:

All who recall the condition of the country in 1890 will remember that there was everywhere, among the people generally, a deep feeling of unrest. The Nation had been rid of human slavery—fortunately, as all now feel—but the conviction was universal that the country was in real danger from another kind of slavery sought to be fastened on the American people, namely, the slavery that would result from aggregations of capital in the hands of a few individuals and corporations controlling, for their own profit and advantage exclusively, the entire business of the country, including the production and sale of the necessities of life. Such a danger was thought to be then imminent, and all felt that it must be met firmly and by such statutory regulations as would adequately protect the people against oppression and wrong.

Many of us believe that the period of slavery and oppression foreseen in 1890 is here.

Commencing with 1892, and every 4 years thereafter, the Democratic Party incorporated in its platforms sections demanding the rigid enforcement of the antitrust laws.

Here are the excerpts from the platforms dealing with this subject and the names of the presidential candidates of the respective years:

DEMOCRATIC ANTITRUST PLEDGES

1892—Stephen Grover Cleveland: We recognize in the trusts and combinations, which are designed to enable capital to secure more than its just share of the joint product of capital and labor, a natural consequence of the prohibitive taxes which prevent the free competition which is the life of honest trade; but we believe their worst evils can be abated by law, and we demand the rigid enforcement of the laws made to prevent and control them, together with such further legislation in restraint of their abuses as experience may show to be necessary.

1896—William J. Bryan: The absorption of wealth by the few, the consolidation of our leading railroad systems, and the formation of trusts and pools require a stricter control by the Federal Government of those arteries of commerce. We demand the enlargement of the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission and such restriction and guaranties in the control of railroads as will protect the people from robbery and oppression.

1900—William J. Bryan: We pledge the Democratic Party to an unceasing warfare in Nation, State, and city against private monopoly in every form. Existing laws against trusts must be enforced and more stringent ones must be enacted, providing for publicity as to the affairs of corporations engaged in interstate commerce, requiring all corporations to show, before doing business outside the State of their origin, that they have no water in their stock and that they have not attempted, and are not attempting, to monopolize any branch of business or the production of any article of merchandise; and the whole constitutional power of Congress over interstate commerce, the mails, and all modes of interstate communication shall be exercised by the enactment of comprehensive laws upon the subject of trusts.

1904—Alton B. Parker: We recognize that the gigantic trusts and combinations designed to enable capital to secure more than its just share of the joint products of capital and labor and which have been fostered and promoted under Republican rule, are a menace to beneficial competition and an obstacle to permanent business prosperity. A private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable.

Individual equality of opportunity and free competition are essential to a healthy and permanent commercial prosperity and any trust, combination, or monopoly tending to destroy these by controlling production, restricting competition, or fixing prices should be prohibited and punished by law. We especially denounce rebates and discrimination by transportation companies as the most potent agency in promoting and strengthening these unlawful conspiracies against trade.

1908—William J. Bryan: A private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable. We therefore favor the vigorous enforcement of the criminal law against guilty trust magnates and officials, and demand the enactment of such additional legislation as may be necessary to make it impossible for a private monopoly to exist in the United States. Among the additional remedies we specify three: First, a law preventing a duplication of directors among competing corporations; second, a license system which will, without abridging the right of each State to create corporations, or its right to regulate as it will foreign corporations doing business within its limits, make it necessary for a manufacturing or trading corporation engaged in interstate commerce to take out a Federal license before it shall be permitted to control as much as 25 percent of the products in which it deals, the license to protect the public from watered stock and to prohibit the control by such corporation of more than 50 percent of the total amount of any product consumed in the United States; and, third, a law compelling such licensed corporations to sell to all purchasers in all parts of the country on the same terms, after making the allowance for the cost of transportation.

1912—Woodrow Wilson: A private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable. We, therefore, favor the vigorous enforcement of the criminal law as well as the civil law against trusts and trust officials, and demand the enactment of such additional legislation as may be necessary to make it impossible for a private monopoly to exist in the United States.

We favor the declaration by law of the conditions upon which corporations shall be permitted to engage in interstate trade, including, among others, the prevention of holding companies, of interlocking directors, of stock watering, of discrimination in price, and the control by any one corporation of so large a proportion of any industry as to make it a menace to competitive conditions.

We condemn the action of the Republican administration in compromising with the Standard Oil Co. and the Tobacco Trust, and its failure to invoke the criminal provisions of the antitrust law against the officers of those corporations after the court had declared that from the undisputed facts in the record they had violated the criminal provisions of the law.

We regret that the Sherman Antitrust Law has received a judicial construction depriving it of much of its efficacy, and we favor the enactment of legislation which will restore to the statute the strength of which it has been deprived by such interpretation.

1916.—Woodrow Wilson: We have created a Federal Trade Commission to accommodate the perplexing questions arising under the antitrust laws so that monopoly may be strangled at its birth and legitimate industry encouraged. Fair competition in business is now assured.

1920.—James M. Cox: The Democratic Party heartily endorses the creation and work of the Federal Trade Commission in establishing a fair field for competitive business, free from restraints of trade and monopoly, and recommends amplification of the statutes governing its activities, so as to grant it authority to prevent the unfair use of patents in restraint of trade.

1924.—John W. Davis: We declare that a private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable, and pledge the Democratic Party to a vigorous enforcement of existing laws against monopoly and illegal combinations and to the enactment of such further measures as may be necessary.

1928.—Alfred E. Smith: During the last 7 years, under Republican rule, the antitrust laws have been thwarted, ignored, and violated, so that the country is rapidly becoming controlled by trusts and sinister monopolies formed for the purpose of wringing from the necessities of life an unrighteous profit. These combinations are often formed and conducted in violation of law—encouraged, aided, and abetted in their activities by the Republican administration—and are driving all small trades people and small industrialists out of business. Competition is one of the most sacred, cherished, and economic rights of the American people. We demand the strict enforcement of the antitrust laws and the enactment of other laws, if necessary, to control this great menace to trade and commerce, and this to preserve the right of the small merchant and manufacturer to earn a legitimate profit from his business.

1932.—Franklin Delano Roosevelt: In this time of unprecedented economic and social distress, the Democratic Party declares its conviction that the chief causes of this condition were the disastrous policies pursued by our Government since the World War of economic isolation, fostering the merger of competitive businesses into monopolies, and encouraging the indefensible expansion and contraction of credit for private profit at the expense of the public.

We advocate strengthening and impartial enforcement of the antitrust laws to prevent monopoly and unfair trade practices, and revision thereof for the better protection of labor and the small producer and distributor.

No hand, in a legislative way, has ever been laid upon the Sherman Antitrust Act. For more than 21 years it remained without any judicial interference with its provisions. The Supreme Court of the United States repeatedly upheld the law. Many proceedings concerning it reached that tribunal. It was used unfairly to get a decision against labor by predatory interests, notwithstanding that never a word was said in its enactment that it was to apply to labor. Its plain intent by its proponents was a use against organized wealth.

TAKING THE TEETH OUT

In 1911, 21 years after its enactment, the interpretation of the law again came before the Supreme Court in two cases upon appeal; one from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Second Circuit—New York—and the other from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Eighth Circuit—Missouri. The case from New York involved a trust known as the American Tobacco Co.; the other was a trust known as the Standard Oil Co.

The Standard Oil case had been heard by the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals, and by a unanimous decision the finding was against the trust in every particular. A most courageous opinion was written by that court, and an especially strong one was written by Judge Hook. Then the case was appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States.

After a hearing, the Supreme Court handed down what many think a reactionary opinion; not an interpretation of law but a piece of judicial legislation, and so called by a minority member of that Court, Justice Harlan. By a stroke of the pen the Supreme Court of the United States amended the law by holding that Congress meant to say that every combination in undue restraint of trade was illegal. The word "undue" was written into the act by the famous "rule of reason" decision of the Supreme Court. Justice Harlan pointed out in his dissenting opinion that if the act "ought to read as contended for by defendants, Congress is the body to amend it, and not this Court, by a process of judicial legislation wholly unjustifiable." The "rule of reason" and not the words of the legislative act, became the law of the land, and thereby from the Sherman Act many of its teeth were taken.

When this opinion was rendered, representatives of five great groups of wealth, through their leading men, hailed it with delight.

Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, the banker, said of the decision:

I consider the decision concerning the Standard Oil entirely satisfactory; moreover, I expected it.

Henry Clews, another great banker of the period, likewise gave expression of confidence in the ruling. He said:

It may be taken for granted, therefore, that hereafter there will be nothing but good trusts in the eyes of the law.

George J. Gould exclaimed:

I am for the Supreme Court every time. For more than a hundred years it has been at work, and it has never made a mistake.

Jacob H. Schiff, of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., said:

I believe that the general effect of the Supreme Court decision will be most favorable to the corporations of the country.

Just stop for a moment and think what that meant. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. is still doing business. Only last year one of the great railroad systems borrowed many millions of dollars from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to rebuild the road, and every dollar of that national gift was carted over to pay a mortgage on the railroad held by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. Not a penny of the money borrowed from the Government was used for the reconstruction of the property.

Jacob H. Schiff's trust connections, operated under that friendly interpretation of the law, were a fine thing for him. He died worth many millions, and his estate was divided amongst the members of his family, one of whom, Mortimer, became quite a rich man in his own right. He died only the other day, and his will disclosed that he was worth $33,000,000, $7,000,000 of it in cash. This in a period when the ordinary citizen is made to shake loose of the few dollars that he may have laid by in his stocking to avert the proverbial rainy day. Who would think in an hour of depression such as this, with millions walking the streets without means of support, that any one man could have in his coffers so much cash as that!

THE SO-CALLED "RULE OF REASON"

Right after the rendition of the "rule of reason" decision, William Jennings Bryan said that Mr. Taft, who was then President, had "packed" the court in the interests of the trusts. Of course, everyone knew Mr. Bryan did not mean literally that he had packed it in a venal or corrupt way. What Mr. Bryan meant, and had the courage to say, was that Mr. Taft, a Hamiltonian, had appointed a Hamiltonian court and that his Hamiltonian court had handed down a Hamiltonian decision, and a Hamiltonian decision always was and always will be that property, especially big property, has rights that the common man does not possess. Hence, the "rule of reason" for the benefit of those trusts, the good old Standard Oil Co. and the American Tobacco Co.

Mr. Taft himself was much put out about the criticism of this decision, and 3 years after the decision was rendered he took his pen in hand and had Harper & Bros. publish a book entitled "The Antitrust Act and the Supreme Court." It is a small volume of 133 pages. Mr. Taft was then professor of law at Yale University. He goes into much detail to demonstrate the correctness of the decision.

For the purpose of my speech at this moment, I will confine myself to just two illuminating paragraphs from that book—one on page 108 and one on page 124, wherein he says:

This brings out clearly that mere bigness not used to effect monopoly but only to increase efficiency is not a violation of the statute.

The mere fact that smaller companies are unable to keep the pace is an indication that they must have greater capital . . . so that they can sell with the other and larger companies. . . . The objection to the decree, then, is that it did not divide up the companies into small enough pieces to prevent effective competition. In this view it is the aim of the antitrust law not to free trade from obstruction or restraint, but rather to destroy the larger businesses whose capital and large plants enable them to produce goods cheaply in order that small plants that cannot produce them as cheaply may live. This is not the purpose of the statute, and those who insist that it ought to be true misunderstand its useful intention.

Mr. Taft, by saying this for the purpose of sustaining his court's opinion, tells the whole story. He had no fear of the evil that has brought on our present plight, namely, concentration of wealth in the hands of the few.

On Saturday of last week an announcement was made that a case had reached the Supreme Court of the United States presenting a protest of stockholders against the president of the American Tobacco Co. You will remember this corporation was one of the two litigants for whose benefit the "rule of reason" was found by Mr. Taft's court. In the present proceeding a stockholder challenges the validity of the bylaws of that company adopted in 1912, under which the president and vice presidents were voted a percentage of net profits remaining after paying operating and other expenses and dividends on the preferred stock.

In this case the Supreme Court is called upon to decide whether $2,500,000 annually is an exorbitant salary for the president of the American Tobacco Co. At the same time the court is asked to determine whether salaries of from $500,000 to $1,500,000 are too much for the five vice presidents of the concern. And to think that the given name of the two-million-salaried president of this company is George Washington—George Washington Hill.

These are salaries paid to men who have perhaps contributed nothing to the future welfare of man, who have lived their big-business lives isolated from millions of their fellow Americans, and who have been paid these enormous salaries by reason of a trust combination made possible under judicial decisions. It is the very size of these institutions that is the real evil. Therefore, the law that created them has a right to put them out of business, if need be, to insure a more equitable distribution of the wealth of our great country and to preserve common happiness to mankind.

THE WAGES OF GENIUS

Consider for a moment some of the emoluments that have been paid to the great men of genius, who spent their talents and poured out their natural gifts for the delight and improvement of their fellowmen. The immortal Shakespeare, whose plays and poems have been translated into almost every language in the world, works which are still furnishing light and inspiration to modern audiences, and which are the basis of literary study in every school and university in the land, wrought for the cultural good of mankind. This great author's total wealth was perhaps never in excess of $50,000 or $60,000.

Milton, the author of Paradise Lost, received for it 70 pounds, $350.

Bunyan, whose Pilgrim's Progress has become a great inspirational work in use in all places of public study, received a term in jail for his great contributions to the spiritual welfare of mankind.

There was another poet who bequeathed to posterity a great intellectual fortune, a wealth of beautiful thought, serene philosophy, and enchanting poetry—Oliver Goldsmith. I mention him particularly for this reason, that he left these six lines (from The Deserted Village):

Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey,
Where wealth accumulates, and men decay;
Princes and lords may flourish, or may fade;
A breath can make them, as a breath has made;
But a bold peasantry, their country's pride,
When once destroy'd, can never be supplied.

And when Goldsmith died, his friend, Samuel Johnson, the great English writer, upon examining his estate and finding out what he was worth, said, "Was ever a poet so trusted before?" He had found nothing but debts.

The meek and lowly One preached the doctrine of welfare on earth. And His wealth: What was it? A most insignificant thing.

My peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you. My kingdom is not of this earth.

John the Baptist preached:

The time is fulfilled and the Kingdom of God is at hand. Bethink yourselves and believe in the gospel.

Bethink! That was his urging about the gospel.

What John Sherman was after was for all America to bethink. "Bethink, because a time is coming that is fraught with danger." But men did not listen to the warning of Sherman. The time foreseen by him is here, and in the midst of our efforts to readjust ourselves from the evils he foresaw, we are preparing to turn about face upon the remedial law he sponsored.

Nothing could be more appropriate than at this moment to quote the description of the condition that confronted us by the growth of the trusts, uttered by William J. Bryan in 1899 at Chicago at a great gathering on the trust question. He said:

I want to start with the declaration that a monopoly in private hands is indefensible from any standpoint, and intolerable. I make no exceptions to the rule. I do not divide monopolies in private hands into good monopolies and bad monopolies. There is no good monopoly in private hands. There can be no good monopoly in private hands until the Almighty sends us angels to preside over the monopoly. There may be a despot who is better than another despot, but there is no good despotism. One trust may be less harmful than another. One trust magnate may be more benevolent than another, but there is no good monopoly in private hands, and I do not believe it is safe for society to permit any man or group of men to monopolize any article of merchandise or any branch of industry.

On this occasion he also said:

When God made man as the climax of creation, He looked upon His work and said that it was good; and yet when God finished His work the tallest man was not much taller than the shortest and the strongest man was not much stronger than the weakest. That was God's plan. We looked upon His work and said that it was not quite as good as it might be, and so we made a fictitious person called a corporation that is in some instances a hundred times, a thousand times, a million times stronger than the God-made man. Then we started this man-made giant out among the God-made men. When God made man He placed a limit to his existence, so that if he was a bad man he could not do harm long; but when we made our man-made man we raised the limit as to age. In some States a corporation is given perpetual life.

When God made man He breathed into him a soul and warned him that in the next world he would be held accountable for the deeds done in the flesh; but when we made our man-made man we did not give him a soul; and if he can avoid punishment in this world, he need not worry about the Hereafter.

What Government gives the Government can take away. What the Government creates it can control; and I insist that both the State government and the Federal Government must protect the God-made man from the man-made man.

What Bryan said at that time is fourfold truer today. There are no good trusts; all trusts are bad trusts; and behind every trust can be found the man-made man, the corporation, which the Government created and which it can control.

The hordes of privilege, through their hired agents, have since the Sherman law was put on the books never let up in their efforts to tear it down. There has not been a concerted effort on the part of any administration to wipe out the trusts, save and except an occasional flare here and there. President Woodrow Wilson, just prior to our entrance into the World War, vigorously undertook to do it through amendments to the Federal Trade Act. The War stopped him. The trusts have run wild since 1920.

BIG BUSINESS "HUGGER-MUGGERING"

In all great crises, such as at the present time and during the World War, there is an insistent hugger-muggering between the big corporate interests and the administrative and legislative agencies. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred when the hugger-muggering ceases the big fellow has added a little more fat to his greedy hog at the expense of the little fellow, who is not able to fight and has gone down in the melee. It is the very cornerstone of the community, the little merchant, who always suffers—who has suffered almost to extinction. He is fighting today for his very breath.

All America cries out for something to be done at this moment, and that is, "We want to see the name of John Henry or Bill Smith or Tom Clark substituted for the common name of Piggly-Wiggly or the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., or this or the other big business combinations, and we want him backed, if he can get backing, in fair competition with his fellows in the small lines of trade." Hundreds of thousands of small merchants have lost their means of livelihood and are now tramping the streets. When the leading man of the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. died a few years ago in New England, he left an estate of $125,000,000.

Those conditions could only be made possible through a violation of the law that bears the name of John Sherman. Shall we choose this time to kill entirely the law that the so-called "rule of reason" maimed? Let us have a new rule of reason and let the new rule be that the last Piggly-Wiggly and the last Atlantic & Pacific and all of their kindred crowd shall no longer be empowered by law to crush their little competitors, and that in their place may spring up again rugged Americans doing business as individuals and not as mere remittance agents for the trust magnates of the United States.

What are the influences at work, one may well ask, that are seeking to blind the judgment of some of our leaders in these times, when downtrodden men are calling so clamorously for wisdom and justice and for the redemption of the pledges that every Democratic platform has made to the people? Time and again we have written into our party platforms the reiteration of the Jeffersonian doctrine that we stand for the "equality of all men before the law" and for "equal and exact justice to all citizens."

THE Hairy PAW REACHING OUT

As the trusts and combinations of capital increased in power and oppression, the Democratic Party in every campaign since has denounced them and promised relief. We have pointed to the Republican Party as the fostering party of the trusts—we have pledged our own party to remedial laws that will curb their abuses and protect the rights of the individual merchant and the small competitor. We have stood by the letter of the Sherman antitrust law and denounced its emasculation. It was upon the Democratic Party and its promises and pledges that the people pinned their hopes of relief from those vast combinations that were slowly crushing their individual business efforts to death. Are we to fail them now in their hour of greatest need? Are we to lend our credulous ears to the subtle voices of the big interests that now, under the guise of friendship and co-operation, are seeking to "make the worse appear the better reason", to lead us to believe that repeal of the only law that protects the small business man, feeble as its execution has been, is in line with the other great movements we are undertaking to rehabilitate the Nation and restore it to its prosperity? Let us not mistake the voice that is trying to convince—the voice may sound like the voice of Jacob, but if you take a close look and feel of the hand, you will know that it is the hand of Esau—that hairy paw that is ever reaching out for special privileges, for the destruction of competition, for bigger profits, and for monopoly of legislative benefits.

Just this word in conclusion: In every public square in the United States there should be a memorial tablet erected to John Sherman, James Z. George, John H. Reagan, George Franklin Edmunds, George Graham Vest, and those other great men who foresaw and tried to prevent this terrible condition that has reached America, though their efforts failed to bring about their noble purpose, due to inaction on the part of executive departments of the Government.

And let us hope, if William Jennings Bryan and Thomas Jefferson from the shades beyond are looking down today upon the Democratic Party, that they will not feel as did the old prospectors in many instances in the far West, when perhaps their sole companion and protector through the long wilderness nights would be their dog they had brought from the States. The hungry coyotes would gather round, making the nights hideous with their barking and efforts to get at the inmates in their little boarded hut. Then imagine the dismay when it was found that the dog, their friend, was missing and that a night or two later they could recognize the voice of their once faithful watchdog among the coyotes, having joined them in their savage efforts to get at the prospectors. Shall we Democrats, professed defenders of the common people, unleash our only remaining hound to join the trust coyotes?

In the name of Jefferson, in the name of Jackson, in the name of Wilson, in the name of that great commoner, William Jennings Bryan, let me voice the hope at this critical time that it will not be the choice of the Democratic Party to destroy the one law that enables us to cling to some hope of restoring the little fellow in trade to his rights—the Sherman antitrust law.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. SHANNON. Yes.

Mr. McFADDEN. I am entirely in accord with what the gentleman says about the Clayton Act. I am glad that he has made the statement he has as to the source of the demand for the repeal of the Clayton Act. It is a dangerous thing to do at this time. I am very much disturbed today about the legislation that we are about to vote on this coming week. I refer first to the passage of the bill proposing to amend the Federal Reserve Act. That bill will centralize the control and management of our finances in this country to an extent that no one has ever dreamed of.

Then we have this other proposal to create a superstructure and control over industry in the United States. The centralized control proposed in that bill will destroy individual initiative; it will destroy independent institutions that have been built up with experience, money, and labor. And may I say to the gentleman that the influences that he has been referring to now control the railroads of the United States and control the financial system of the country, and if we pass this industry control bill under the leadership that is proposed, we will give control of industry in the United States to that same crowd. We have already granted control over farming to this same group.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. GASQUE. Mr. Speaker, as chairman of the Pensions Committee, my office is called upon from 5 to 25 times a day to know just exactly what effect the recent Economy Act has on the different classes of pensions. With the assistance of the law examiner in my office, I have prepared a brief and, I think, a rather clear synopsis of just what that is. I ask unanimous consent that this may be printed in the Record at this point for the information of the Members.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. GASQUE]?

There was no objection.

Mr. GASQUE. Mr. Speaker, the synopsis will be in a brief, general way show the amounts of pension to be paid to the veterans and their dependents under the provisions of these new regulations. I have arranged the statement to show, first, just what benefits in the way of pensions the Spanish-American War veterans and their dependents get for disability contracted in service in line of duty; also the benefits for disability not contracted in line of duty. The next statement shows the benefits paid to peace-time service veterans and their dependents for service-connected disability. My next group shows the pension for World War veterans and their dependents where disability or death is shown to be due to service in line of duty; also the benefits for non-service-connected disability. The next statement shows the effects of these regulations upon former members of the military or naval service in wars prior to the Spanish-American War and their dependents. The next statement shows that the emergency officers retain their present rates without reduction under certain conditions.

An emergency officer granted retirement pay prior to March 20, 1933, shall be entitled to continue to receive such retirement pay, without any reduction, if the disability for which he has been retired with pay resulted from disease or injury incurred in line of duty during the World War, provided such person entered active service between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, and that the disease or injury or aggravation of the disease or injury directly resulted from the actual performance of military or naval duty, and that the causative factor therefor is shown to have arisen out of the performance of duty during such service.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to insert certain records showing the amount of American money invested in foreign stocks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WEIDEMAN]?

There was no objection.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

Sundry messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the House by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House that on May 18, 1933, the President approved and signed a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 5081. An act to improve the navigability and to provide for the flood control of the Tennessee River; to provide for reforestation and the proper use of marginal lands in the Tennessee Valley; to provide for the agricultural and industrial development of said valley; to provide for the national defense by the creation of a corporation for the operation of Government properties at and near Muscle Shoals in the State of Alabama, and for other purposes.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON]?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Rules has today brought in a special rule making in order House Joint Resolution No. 149, favorably reported from the Foreign Affairs Committee on April 14, 1933. But for this special rule, this resolution would not be in order, and the Speaker would sustain a point of order that I otherwise would make against it. But this special rule makes the resolution impervious to all points of order. This special rule allows only 1 hour of general debate on this resolution, one half of which is to be controlled by the chairman, and the other half by the ranking minority member of the Foreign Affairs Committee. Unless the other 410 Members of the House can obtain a little of this time from the Foreign Affairs Committee, they will not have an opportunity to say one word against the proposition, for under the terms of the special rule, all of the time for debate will be controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Inasmuch as this measure doubtless will be called up for passage tomorrow, I am taking the floor to warn my colleagues of its provisions. I mentioned it on the day it was favorably reported, and I discussed it again on May 12, 1933 (p. 3355) and warned you to be on the lookout when it came up for passage. Are you in favor of spending $48,500 every year for all time to come on a so-called "International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, Italy"? That is what it proposes, for I now quote the first part of it word for word, as follows:

Joint resolution authorizing an annual appropriation for the expenses of participation by the United States in the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, Italy

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the sum of $48,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby authorized to be appropriated annually, for the expenses of participation by the United States in the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, Italy, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of State—

And so forth. And after authorizing the payment of about $5,000 toward the annual support of this institute in Rome, Italy, it then provides:

Not to exceed $7,500 for the salary of a United States member of the permanent committee of the International Institute of Agriculture.

That $7,500 happens to be a raise of $2,500 more in salary than was proposed by a similar resolution which the chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee introduced in the last Congress, and I refer to House Joint Resolution No. 586, introduced in the House by Chairman McREYNOLDS on February 2, 1933, and favorably reported on February 16, 1933, in which this particular clause reads as follows:

Not to exceed $5,000 for the salary of a United States member of the permanent committee of the International Institute of Agriculture.

Just what has happened since February 16, 1933, to cause the Committee on Foreign Affairs to want to raise this salary from $5,000 to $7,500? Are we raising salaries just now? Then, when did we begin to raise them? We have lowered and not raised salaries. We have cut all salaries 15 percent. Then why should we have an American employed by the year as a member of this institute in Rome, Italy? And why should he live in Rome, Italy, the year round. The next provision of this resolution provides:

Not to exceed $5,500 for rent of living quarters, including heat, fuel, and light.

Are you in favor of furnishing a home in Rome, Italy, for this member of this Agricultural Institute in Rome, Italy, at an annual cost of $5,500? I am not.

Then the next item of expense in this resolution is to pay the following:

Compensation of subordinate employees without regard to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended.

Thus, there is no limitation in the measure as to the number of subordinate employees to be employed, and no limitation as to the salaries to be paid them, but Congress is to leave all that to somebody else. Who is to do the employing? Who is to fix their salaries? Are you colleagues here not interested in knowing beforehand these pertinent facts? I am interested in knowing them beforehand, and I am going to know them before such measures are passed.

I am afraid that the State Department is getting into the bad habit of adopting the methods used by the War Department and the Navy Department when framing their bills, in using technical language in its bills likewise, so that there will be little chance of discovery as to its intent and purpose. There are five innocent-looking little words in this resolution under which the greater part of this $48,500 will be spent each year, and they are the following, cut off by semicolons, to wit:

Actual and necessary traveling expenses.

These words are the ones that will permit the junkets. You will remember that there is an expense quota of about $5,000, and an annual salary of $7,500, and $5,500 for rent, heat, fuel, and light of his living quarters, and some compensation for subordinate employees. The balance of this annual $48,500 is to be spent under the heading "actual and necessary traveling expenses", and I want to know who is to do this traveling. I want to know who is to go on these junkets.

I represent a farming and stock-raising district. I am in close touch with the farmers. I know what they are thinking about. I know how they feel. I know what they want, and I know what they do not want. And I know that the farmers do not want us to spend $48,500 to participate in any so-called "Institute of Agriculture" in Rome, Italy. I know that they do not want us to pay $5,000 per year to Italy on the expenses of this institute. I know that the farmers do not want us to pay a man $7,500 per year salary and allow him $5,500 for dwelling, heat, fuel, and lights in Rome, Italy, just to be a member of that Italian institute. I know that the farmers do not want us to spend money to employ any subordinate employees for them in Rome, Italy. I know that the farmers do not want us to spend the balance of this $48,500 for annual traveling expenses over to Rome, Italy.

It may be of interest to you to know who started this Agricultural Institute in Rome, Italy. There was a man named David Lubin, of California, from whence comes our distinguished colleague—

Mrs. KAHN. May I say that I am not the only inhabitant of California present?

Mr. BLANTON. But I knew my friend would know something about it. In 1905 this man Lubin got the King of Italy to such a conference, and the United States was represented in it by Henry White, our then Ambassador to Italy. Instead of having our Ambassador, already there, and already drawing a salary to represent us, and already being furnished with a dwelling, heat, fuel, and lights, to sit in such conference as our representative whenever it was held, we entered into a new arrangement of having another and different representation at an added cost. And ever since 1905, except an interim during and following the war, and until 1928, when we cut loose from them, we have been "participating" in this so-called "Institute of Agriculture" at Rome, Italy, each year at an expense that has varied between $29,577 to $68,340 per annum. Since 1928 we have had no delegate to participate at Rome, Italy, in this institute, and we have ceased to participate actively in the affairs of the organization. And I want to say that it will pay us to stay out of it. We have been out of it since 1928. And we ought not to go back into it, especially when it will cost us $48,500 annually.

To give you an idea of just how each delegate we send to Europe spends public money that we take from the people back home in taxes, I remember that on May 8, 1928, there was held in Rome, Italy, what the Italian authorities called "an International Conference on Literary and Artistic Property." Of course, we had to attend it. There is always somebody who wants to attend. As a United States delegate there was a Mr. Thorvald Solberg, already employed on a salary, and he is an able, capable man, and I have high respect and regard for him, and the following is a correct statement of the expenses of his trip to Rome, which I got direct from the State Department, to wit:

Steamship fare, New York to Cherbourg, and railway fare, Cherbourg to Paris and return.....	$634.00
Railroad fare, Washington to New York.....	8.14
Pullman fare, Washington to New York.....	1.88
Miscellaneous traveling expenses and per diem allowances in Europe.....	633.39
Total.....	1,277.41

And that $1,277.41 for Mr. Thorvald Solberg's junket abroad was paid out of the Public Treasury with tax money wrung from the pockets of taxpayers whose shoulders are overburdened.

Oh, it is easy to theorize on paper, and to declare that certain imaginary benefits will accrue from this institute and that, but I challenge any official of this Government to show where the farmers of the United States have ever received any practical benefit whatever from this institute at Rome, Italy. Not many farmers even know that it has ever existed. My good colleague from Oklahoma, WILL ROGERS, tells me that he has taught school for the last 15 years and he never before heard of this Agricultural Institute at Rome, Italy. It is a junket proposition, pure and simple.

Mr. FORD. But the gentleman is talking about a junket. There is no junket in that resolution.

Mr. BLANTON. Now, why is there not?

Mr. FORD. That is for a permanent delegate.

Mr. BLANTON. Now let us see about that. Why do we have to have a man live in Rome, Italy, at a salary of $7,500, with an allowance of $5,500 more for his home, all the time, by the year, to attend an institute? They proposed last February to pay him only $5,000 a year to live in Rome.

Mr. HOEPEL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. In just a moment. Now they are proposing to increase that salary from $5,000 to $7,500 by this bill, to live in Rome, Italy; and they are proposing to give him $5,500 more a year for expenses there, for rent and expenses. Then, what is to become of the balance of the $48,500 each year? He will not do the farmers of the United States one dollar of good. There is not a farmer in my big district in Texas who wants this institute held in Rome. I will say to my friend WILL ROGERS, of Oklahoma, there is not one farmer in the whole State of Oklahoma who wants it.

Mr. GASQUE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. In a moment, I will, gladly. But the Foreign Affairs Committee is interested simply because the State Department sent it to them. Now, this is the way these things happen.

Some fellows want to take trips to Europe. They get a department to send a recommendation to the President. The President knows nothing about the matter. He merely approves the recommendation of his department. The department forwards the recommendation to a committee of Congress, together with a draft of the bill they want passed. Many times committees approve them without question or serious thought, and Congress passes them, and the money is spent, and the junkets taken. That is why we find so many employees of this Government frolicking all over Europe every year, and we have to tax the people to pay for it. I remember that in another Congress, I was a conferee on a bill, and I objected to an item of $10,000 that had been put into it, and it was remarked, "Oh, we cannot take that out, as it is the summer trip of our good friend ———." We must stop these summer trips, even if they are to be taken by good friends of ours.

Why, Rome, Italy, is simply bedecked constantly with international conferences. If we attended all of them that are held there, we would be going back and forth all of the time, at great expense to the people. The following is a communication that came here to the House from the State Department last January inviting us to come to Rome, Italy, on an "International Parliamentary Conference on Commerce":

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 4, 1933.

HON. JOHN N. GARNER,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

SIR: There is transmitted herewith for your information and consideration a copy of a despatch from the American Embassy at Rome and its enclosure, a letter from the secretary general of the International Parliamentary Conference on Commerce, extending to the Congress of the United States an invitation to be represented at the eighteenth plenary assembly of the above-mentioned organization, which is to take place in the capitol at Rome, beginning April 19, 1933.

The Department will be pleased to receive an indication of the views of the House of Representatives with regard to this invitation in order that an appropriate reply may be made to the secretary general of the conference.

For your information, it may be stated with regard to the seventeenth assembly of this conference which was held at Prague in 1931 that, the Senate and House of Representatives having adjourned without having taken action to appoint representatives, this Department was requested by officers of the two Houses to delegate observers on behalf of the Government of the United States from the Foreign Service. As a result the American consul general and the commercial attaché at Prague were so delegated. This matter is also being referred to the Vice President.

Very truly yours,

H. L. STIMSON.

We ought to stop this eternal spending of public money on wasteful, extravagant, and useless matters. This Institute of Agriculture in Rome, Italy, may be important to Italians in Rome, but it is of absolutely no interest to the farmers of America. I want to ask you colleagues present, have you got any farmers at home in your district who want you to spend $48,500 each year having somebody attend this institute in Rome, Italy? If you have such farmers, I feel sure that they do not know how to milk cows, as does my good friend from Minnesota, Senator MAGNUS JOHNSON.

Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota. I stand with the gentleman on this; I am with him.

Mr. BLANTON. We ought to stop it. I have been fighting against these expensive junkets ever since I first came to Congress.

You will note that these delegates on trips abroad, like Mr. Thorvald Solberg, use $1,277.41, so they can spend going over $500 for a trip on a big, fine Manhattan to Cherbourg and Paris, and another $500 to spend running around over Europe, with the trip back on a sea palace like the Washington.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I yield.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. It is just like sending them on a social trip at Government expense.

Mr. BLANTON. That is it. I wish the gentleman could see what happens on some of these social trips.

Mr. HART. Are these delegates farmers?

Mr. BLANTON. No; they are not farmers.

Mr. HART. Let me call the gentleman's attention to what happened in Michigan in the matter of $250,000 spent in an effort to introduce and develop the Katahdin potato.

Much money has been spent in the undertaking, with the result that a carload of these potatoes was shipped into the State of Michigan for the purpose of being given to the farmers of the country, but all that happened was that a few were given to college friends, who will cultivate these potatoes, so that next year they can charge the other farmers $5 and $10 a bushel for them for seed.

Mr. BLANTON. Yes; I showed just how much our Department of Agriculture spent in sending its scientists all over old Mexico and South America hunting wild potatoes. Mr. Speaker, I cannot yield further.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLANTON. I have been trying for years to stop this waste and extravagance. The President did not send this up here as an emergency measure. Our good friend, Cordell Hull, did not ask us to pass this kind of a measure when he was a Member of the House or Senate.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I yield.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. The gentleman is inaccurate in his statement regarding this matter.

Mr. BLANTON. Now, I want to be fair to my friend.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Well, the gentleman is not fair.

Mr. BLANTON. I want to say this: You cannot always rely on committees that bring in a resolution to give you all the facts. Why, you could not rely on the Rules Committee, and you could not rely on the gentleman from New York [Mr. SIOVICH] when they tried to get you to spend $250,000 the other day on a junketing resolution.

Because authors of such resolutions are my friends is not going to deter me from doing my duty here in trying to save the money of the people.

Mr. BLACK. Does not the gentleman remember the time recently when the Judiciary Committee came in with a bill which the House was assured was endorsed by both the Department of Justice and the Department of State, when in fact both Secretaries repudiated it?

Mr. BLANTON. The Rules Committee did turn down a request for a rule, the other resolution from the Committee on the Judiciary, which sought to allow it to hold hearings anywhere in the United States, after the Speaker sustained my point of order against it, and I made that point of order when as good a friend as my friend from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS] is chairman of that committee. Yet this did not stop me from doing my duty and stopping that resolution, that would have permitted the 25 members of the Judiciary Committee to sit anywhere in the United States any time they wanted to and employ high-priced lawyers and experts at the expense of the people. This ought to be stopped; I do not care if Cordell Hull has approved it since he has become Secretary of State.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I am sure the gentleman this time will couch his question in friendly terms, and I yield.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Did I understand the gentleman to say that the Chairman of the Rules Committee had refused a rule on this resolution?

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, no. I said he had brought in a rule for it. I said that the Rules Committee had refused to vote out a special rule for the investigation by the Judiciary Committee; and that is so, is it not? They have not brought in any rule on that, although we were served notice the other day by one member that they were going to bring it in immediately. They had a meeting, and I am informed by members of the committee that the members of the committee opposed it and they could not pass it.

Mr. BLACK. I referred to the press-censorship bill.

Mr. BLANTON. I know that. I am talking about the resolution now for which they have been trying to get a rule that would permit the 25 members of the Committee on the Judiciary, or any subcommittee, to sit anywhere in the United States they want to from now until January 1 and employ experts, and so on. I stopped that bill with a point of order. We ought to stop this eternal junketing in all bills. [Applause.]

I hold in my hand a copy of Senate Document No. 130, Seventy-second Congress, first session, embracing a letter from President Hoover, transmitting to the Congress the recommendation of the Secretary of State, Mr. Stimson, proposing identically this same bill, except that the salary of the resident delegate was only $5,000, to wit:

To the Congress of the United States:

I commend to the favorable consideration of the Congress the inclosed report from the Secretary of State, to the end that legislation may be enacted authorizing an annual appropriation of $48,500 for the expenses of participation by the United States in the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, Italy.

HERBERT HOOVER.

THE WHITE HOUSE, June 29, 1932.

No such message as the above has ever come to us from President Franklin D. Roosevelt, in this emergency session. And in parallel columns I will now quote first on the left the bill prepared and sent by Mr. Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of State under Mr. Hoover, on June 29, 1932, and on the right the present bill that is to be taken up under the special rule, and you will see that they are exactly the same, except the latter proposes to raise the salary from $5,000 to $7,500. And following, in parallel columns, I will show the purposes of the institute, as stated in said Senate document, sent by Mr. Stimson in 1932, and the purposes of the institute, as stated by the present report of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and you will see that both are identical. Hence, you will see that these purposes are mere theoretical hopes and aspirations, and there is nothing whatever to show that any of such proposes have been accomplished.

STIMSON'S BILL

Joint resolution authorizing an annual appropriation for the expenses of participation by the United States in the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, Italy

Resolved, etc., That the sum of $48,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby authorized to be appropriated annually, for the expenses of participation by the United States in the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, Italy, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of State in the following manner:

(1) Not to exceed the equivalent in United States currency of 192,000 gold francs for the payment of the annual quota of the United States for the support of the institute, including the shares of the Territory of Hawaii, and of the dependencies of the Philippine Islands, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

(2) Not to exceed $5,000 for the salary of a United States member of the permanent committee of the International Institute of Agriculture.

(3) Not to exceed $5,500 for rent of living quarters, including heat, fuel, and light, as authorized by the act approved June 26, 1930 (46 Stat., p. 818); compensation of subordinate employees without regard to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended; actual and necessary traveling expenses; and other contingent expenses incident to the maintenance of an office at Rome, Italy, for a United States member of the permanent committee of the International Institute of Agriculture.

Mr. BLANTON. So it will be easily seen, Mr. Speaker, that this whole matter is one that has come from the Department of Agriculture and the State Department, and they prepared and sent the measure here for us to pass. It is true, as the gentleman from Tennessee stated, that Hon. Cordell Hull, since he has become the Secretary of State, has approved this matter, but I imagine he did it perfunctorily.

Not one word has come to us from anybody showing that any of the purposes for which this institute was formed has ever been accomplished. No one can tell us of any practical benefit that farmers have ever gotten from this institute. We have not participated in it since 1928. And we ought not to ever participate in it again. And we ought to save this $48,500 per year. We ought to defeat this resolution whenever it is called up for passage.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I am very glad, indeed, that I happened to walk in on the floor of the House or was notified that the gentleman from Texas was making this speech. You know he has harped a great deal on these committees that go abroad and he has even seen fit to reflect upon my committee and the chairman of the committee.

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, not to reflect on them. I am a friend of every member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. I am simply calling attention to the effect of legislation that this committee has reported here. The gentleman knows that I would not reflect on any member of that splendid committee.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Whenever you go to discuss a matter of this kind and attempt to give the gentleman the facts, he always leaves you and says that he will investigate it.

The statement of the gentleman in reference to this bill not being advocated by Secretary of State Hull or by the President of the United States is absolutely without foundation and untrue.

If you will only examine the report, as you should have done, you will see the statement of Secretary Hull and the statement of the Secretary of Agriculture in this report; and I am authorized by the President of the United States himself, by telephone communication this morning, to state that he is behind this bill and thinks that this information which the farmers of this country ought to have could be acquired cheaper by this means than by any other means we could offer.

The gentleman talks about these junketing committees. I am certainly in sympathy and in harmony with him on that. I have voted against these junketing committees, but why does he bring that into this matter? This is not a junketing committee. The gentleman ought to be more careful about the statements he makes when he comes before the House.

What is this institution? What is its purpose? It was organized in 1905 by a man from California, our own country, who went to Rome and secured the cooperation of the Government there, and it was made a world-wide matter of cooperation by the various nations. It was the greatest institution of its kind in the world up to the time the League of Nations was created. It is the only place in the world where you can secure information for the farmers of this country. It gives you detailed reports, and these reports are used by the Agricultural Department and by the farmers throughout the Nation. It is also bound up by treaty agreements. There is a treaty between various nations, and the gentleman would have you violate these treaties.

In 1921 and 1922 they had to pay more than the original treaty and the appropriations were made; but in 1928, as the gentleman has correctly stated, there was a disagreement about who was in charge and about the reservation of which the gentleman speaks, and then our country withdrew our delegates; but we had to pay, under our treaty agreements, toward the keeping up of the institution.

Mr. BLANTON. That is about $4,000 a year.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. It runs between four and five thousand dollars. Our treaty agreement provided for payment in francs, and as the franc had depreciated we did not have to pay more than four or five thousand dollars; and the party that he speaks of who was in charge, since that time has gone out of office at the request of this Government and other governments and now it is left to the council, and that is the reason that our Government and other governments are willing to go back into this institute, and that is the reason they come here asking you for this authorization.

Mr. CARTER of California. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Yes.

Mr. CARTER of California. With the exception which the gentleman has noted, has the Government participated in this conference since 1905?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. During the war, I think not. Up to 1928 we had a delegate there.

Mr. CARTER of California. Can the gentleman explain for the enlightenment of the House any benefit that has accrued to the farmer by reason of this conference?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. We have it in the report; the gentleman can see it by reading the report.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. I will guarantee that my friend cannot find a farmer in Tennessee or a farmer in Texas that ever heard of this institute.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. That is like the general statements the gentleman is making on the floor. The gentleman is continually making statements that are not borne out by the facts. That is the way I feel about it. The gentleman from Texas is always taking the floor to make general statements, and, in this case, trying to establish a connection with a junketing committee. He connected other junketing trips with this, for which there is no foundation. What we propose to do is to preserve our treaty rights. We place a man there to look after the rights of this country. I think I would not have to go far to get a witness—no farther than the Speaker of this House, who is a farmer. I talked with him and he told me at one time that he had written over there for information and could not get it because we did not have a representative there. It was in reference to the great bank that was being organized for the League of Nations, by which the farmers of the country could be furnished loans at the rate of interest of 1 percent. That was very vital to this country. That would be a saving. It takes a qualified man there to represent this Government, to collect this data for the farmers of this country.

You can get no information more valuable from any source than you get from this institute. As the President said this morning, there is no means by which we can acquire that information as cheaply as we can to meet our treaty obligations than by this expenditure.

This bill was recommended by ex-President Hoover, Mr. Stimson of the State Department, and by the present Secretary of State, and the present Secretary of Agriculture, and the President of the United States.

It seems to me, sir, that that ought to have some influence as to the importance of this service, more influence than the gentleman from Texas, who comes to you and says nobody except some students ever heard of this institute.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. I will yield.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman is the chairman of the committee. He ought to know as much about it as any member on his committee. I challenge him to tell one thing to this House, one piece of information of value to the farmers that this institute has ever given. If he can tell me one, I will sit down—one single piece of information that has been of value to the farmers.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. If I gave that to the gentleman, he would be a doubting Thomas.

Mr. BLANTON. No; but I want the facts. When the gentleman speaks of ex-President Hoover I am reminded that there is a monument down here on Pennsylvania Avenue known as the "$20,000,000 Commerce Building" that will be an eternal monument to Hoover's extravagance.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I want first to pay my respects to the gentleman from Texas.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has expired.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 3 minutes more.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the gentleman have 10 minutes more, because I wish he would tell us one piece of information that has been gathered by this institute at Rome that has benefited the farmer.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] says that he is always willing to be convinced by reason and logic. If he can show me anybody in this House who can substantiate that statement, I shall take more time, as he suggests.

Mr. BLANTON. I will show the gentleman many Members here who will substantiate the fact.

Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota. I have not taken up very much time on this floor. As a farmer and a lawmaker, if I can call it that at the present time, can the gentleman tell me what real benefit American agriculture will have from this trip of, maybe, a dozen or a score of people to Rome?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. The gentleman from Minnesota has misinformation about a score going to Rome.

Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota. If they spend $48,000—

Mr. McREYNOLDS. There is one representative there to represent this country. Let me show the gentleman the purposes of this institution, and then he can judge for himself whether or not the information is worth anything to this country. What is the purpose of the institution? It is to collect, study, and publish as promptly as possible statistical, technical, or economic information concerning farming, both vegetable and animal products, the commerce in agricultural products, and the prices prevailing in the various markets of the world.

Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota. Stop right there.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. No; let the gentleman do the stopping. I have the floor, it is my time. It strikes me that if that information is given to people who have things to ship, and they can be advised of the markets of the world, it will be of benefit. Second, its purpose is to communicate to parties interested, as promptly as possible, the information just referred to. That has been done throughout this country. Whether or not my friend from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] has received any information of that character I know not—but I presume not, because he is not a farmer, and he would not know what to do with it if he did get it.

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, I will put my general information up against the gentleman's general information.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. I am not yielding. Third, to communicate the wages paid for farm work and to make known new diseases of vegetables, which appear in any part of the world, showing the territories affected, the progress of the disease, and, if possible, the remedies which are effective in combating them. Does the gentleman believe that that will be of service to the farmers in this country?

Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota. May I ask the gentleman a question right there?

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has again expired.

Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota. I want to ask the gentleman 2 or 3 questions.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman have 2 minutes more.

Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota. And I hope the gentleman from Texas will keep quiet so that I can have the gentleman's attention for just a moment.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has again expired.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may have 2 minutes more.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Tennessee may proceed for 2 minutes more. Is there objection?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. The gentleman from Tennessee was stating what this institution is for; but returning now to the question—because I am a new man, and if this is a good thing, I am for it—I should like to have the question answered as to what good this thing has done.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota. I am a farmer, and maybe I should have some privilege.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. The gentleman should.

Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota. I do not belittle the effort of anybody to help the people of this country and other countries in the world, but does not the gentleman as chairman of that great committee, having been a Member of this House for years and years, know that we, the farmers of this country, have about enough information on that score? I want to put another question to the gentleman so he can answer one after the other. Does the gentleman not know that we have a group of people in this country today informing us farmers how to raise more, and that we also have another group who are telling us to raise less and even destroy the things that we have planted and tried to raise in this country? Let the gentleman answer those questions, and then I will put 2 or 3 more if he has the time.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. The gentleman seems to be proceeding on his own convictions, regardless of what people think about it. He may have what information he desires as a farmer, and I presume he has, with the standing and the learning and the compliments that he has had in his lifetime. I presume he had a chance to acquire this knowledge, but there is many a poor farmer in his district, I have no doubt, who has not had those same advantages, and I presume that that is one of the reasons why the gentleman's constituents have sent him down here, so that he may impart that information to them. This is absolutely endorsed by the Secretary of Agriculture as a part of his program, because he feels that it will help the farmers of this country. His letter to that effect is not only in the Record, but it is also in a private letter.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has again expired.

Mr. HOEPEL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOEPEL. Now that the battle is over, I hope we can have peace.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to speak on something other than finances and junkets. I am going to speak on a subject which is near and dear to the heart of every Member of Congress and every citizen of the United States and in the world. I refer to our American homes and motherhood. I wish to preface my remarks with commendation of the ministers of New York who in their sermons last Sunday deviated from the ordinary eulogy in poetry to the mothers of America and addressed themselves to the question of economic relief and benefit to the mothers of America.

I am interested in the mothers of America, and I am interested in the welfare of the women of America. During the campaign and since we heard a great deal about the forgotten man. I am here this afternoon to speak briefly for the forgotten woman of America, because she has never been considered. Today 150,000 are transients, while a total of approximately 1,500,000 are unemployed.

We passed a bill putting 250,000 young men to work at starvation wages, but we have done absolutely nothing for the young unmarried women and widows of America.

Mr. CARTER of California. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOEPEL. I do not have the time. I am just bringing up the subject. What I am striving to present to you is this, that in the city of Washington and throughout the United States in general there are untold thousands of married women who are working and who do not need to be employed. The leadership here have been free and liberal in bringing bills to us, saying the President is for such bills and urging our support. Will these leaders go back and tell the President that the American people are opposed to the unnecessary employment of married women in government?

In the Patent Office in this city there is an attorney who receives $7,400 per year. His wife is employed in the same division, receiving $3,400. Yesterday I was told of a man working in the Printing Office, at a salary of $3,200, and his wife working in the Treasury at $2,400. His son is a page in this Congress and his daughter is secretary to a Congressman. I think this Congress ought to set an example to the world and to the individual who is out of employment and enact legislation preventing the employment of married women who do not need to work.

As I go back and forth to my home I see an army of women. In fact, I see them riding in limousines, their fingers bedecked with diamonds. Every high-class apartment here is filled with poodle dogs. For every poodle dog that is maintained by these married women who are unnecessarily employed there are women and children walking the streets begging for bread. Yesterday a fine, high type American lady came to me pleading for help. She was secretary to a Congressman here. She went to the Woodward Building looking for work. A high-class law firm offered her $5 a week. On investigation I found the man who offered her $5 a week lives in one of the swellest apartments in Washington. What we need is a little more humanity in government and a little more humanity in the hearts of the people.

It is up to this Congress and these leaders, who are always talking about money, finances, and bonds, to think a little about the unemployed. I take you briefly to my own State of California, where letters to me indicate that conditions are becoming increasingly worse. The county of Los Angeles borrowed money from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The poor, distressed unfortunates in my county who were paid with these funds were taken from their work and called into the office.

In order to continue in employment they were forced to subscribe to a pauper's oath, and in this oath they required to know whether the wife at home had an engagement ring or a wedding ring. Can you imagine such a thing in this free country of America? But you will all observe that when $90,000,000 was loaned to Dawes, which he turned over to Insull, they did not ask Dawes whether his wife had a wedding ring.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOEPEL. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I wonder if the gentleman is aware of the fact that recently something on the same order happened to some soldiers? They required them to leave the soldiers' home at Dayton, and when expelled compelled them to leave without outer garments. This fact can be confirmed by reference to the May 15 issue of the Disabled American War Veterans' periodical.

Mr. HOEPEL. I can answer the gentleman in detail on that subject, as I yield to no man in my knowledge of the veteran question. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. HOEPEL] has expired.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. DOWELL]?

There was no objection.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, there has been a great deal of discussion on the financial situation, on the condition of the Treasury, and on the subject of taxation. It is not often that I read an article in this House, but I want to call attention specifically to an Associated Press dispatch, which appeared in the Washington Star a few nights ago, and I want to emphasize this, if I may, because I take it the article is authentic.

The headlines and the article are as follows:

$2,500,000 SALARY UNDER CHALLENGE—SUPREME COURT ASKED TO PASS ON REASONABLENESS OF TOBACCO OFFICIALS' PAY

By the Associated Press

The Supreme Court was called upon yesterday to decide whether $2,500,000 annually is an exorbitant salary for the president of the American Tobacco Co.

At the same time it was asked to determine whether salaries of from $500,000 to $1,500,000 is too much for the vice presidents of the concern.

Richard R. Rogers, a stockholder, presented the question in challenging the validity of a bylaw adopted by the stockholders in 1912, under which the president and five vice presidents of that company were voted a percentage of net profits remaining after paying operating and other expenses and dividends on the preferred stock.

HOLDS AUTHORITY LACKING

Rogers contended the stockholders had no authority under the charter to adopt such a bylaw, declaring that authority was in the hands of the directors, and insisted the high court should consider the reasonableness of the compensation being paid the president and vice presidents.

The Second Circuit Court of Appeals at New York held the bylaw valid and questions from the bench developed that the reasonableness of the compensation paid the officers had not been decided by the lower courts.

Nathan L. Miller, counsel for the company, insisted the stockholders were the sole judges of the compensation to be paid their officers and that the high court should not interpose.

WARRANTED BY SERVICES

While President Hill of the company under the bylaw had received an additional $840,000 compensation in 1930, Miller asserted the value of the services rendered by him, as shown by the increase in the earnings of the company that year was, in the judgment of the stockholders, ample to warrant it. "The stockholders", Miller said, "were always in a position to change the bylaw at any of their meetings."

Mr. Speaker, no trust organization in the United States, under the laws of the United States, should ever be permitted to pay these officers such exorbitant salaries. [Applause.] If these exorbitant salaries are being paid by any trust company in the United States a large part of these salaries should be covered into the Treasury of the United States under the tax laws of the country. I insist that while we are undertaking to raise revenue for the expenses of the Government, instead of placing further burdens on those of limited means, who can ill afford to pay, we should strike these large incomes so hard that there will be no occasion to bring suit to ascertain if $2,500,000 is an exorbitant salary.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DEEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 20 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

Mr. DEEN. Mr. Speaker, 22 cents out of the retail dollar in 1929 was paid to chain stores. The ratio of chain sales to total sales varied greatly between types of retail stores. There were five fields in which the chain could be considered a dominant factor in distribution. These types of stores and the percent of total retail business accounted for by chains in each case were as follows:

	Percent
Variety store chains.....	89.5
Household appliance chains.....	50.5
Shoes.....	45.8
Groceries and meats.....	44.0
Filling stations.....	35.2

The variety store is better suited to the chain type of operation. Each small commodity department within a variety store is linked to every similar department in other stores in the same grouping and operated from headquarters. This is a true chain operation as compared with the situation in other fields where a number of individual units are subject to a single ownership and control, but are still of necessity operated as individual units because of the character of the business.

In the other four groups in which the chain is a dominant sales factor, there appears to be various considerations which help chain operation to succeed. In the case of chain shoe stores and chain filling stations, by far the greater number of chain systems are owned and operated by manufacturers in an effort to control and stabilize the retail distribution of their products. The case is somewhat similar for household-appliance chains, 80 percent of the systems being operated by public-utility companies who desire more than anything else to support and develop the market for electricity or gas by promoting the sales of gas and electric appliances.

The grocery chain offers at least one important advantage for chain operation in the very limited number of items which the typical grocery store carries and the consequent ease of standardizing the operation of store units in this field.

Aside from these five fields in which there may be some ground for economic advantage from chain operation, there are other fields in which chains do a much smaller percentage of the business and where their contributions to efficient distribution are extremely doubtful. One such field is the retail drug field. Only 18½ percent of all retail drug volume went through the chain units in 1929. Nevertheless, the presence of the chain organization in the field was the most important consideration confronting the trade as a whole or manufacturers supplying the trade. Chain stores in the drug field had pursued a consistent policy of drastic price cutting which continued to be a source of great dissatisfaction and confusion in the trade. The price cuts offered by the chain drug stores did not arise from a favorable position concerning operating costs. As a matter of fact, the operating expense for chains in 1929 was 27.6 percent as against 27.1 for all drug stores, including chains. It is interesting to anticipate just what economic advantage is derived from a type of concern which succeeds only in increasing the operating expenses of the field in which it operates, despite very expert staffs of executives and merchandisers.

The volume of business done by drug chains is highly concentrated within a few organizations. Seven companies with annual sales of $5,000,000 or more each accounted for 62.3 percent of chain drug sales, or 11.5 percent of all retail drug sales.

It is principally the practices followed by these seven major organizations which have been the source of great difficulty and dissension in the drug field. It is an open secret among all branches of the trade that these organizations secure price concessions from the manufacturer on almost all items which have no relation whatever to the relative cost of selling to chains as against other retailers. The abuses arising from a price structure built around chain stores can be observed to better advantage in the drug field than any other. Seven organizations are being permitted to create disorganization and price instability in a field where there are nearly 60,000 individual operators. This will help to explain the fact that the independent druggist has taken the lead in promoting efforts for price stabilization. Even though legislation now before Congress may be badly conceived, the multiplicity of bills offered reflect the urgency of the need for some adjustment.

It might be contended that while the chain drug store has average operating cost about 1 percent higher than the independent drug store that the chain type of organization is justified economically because of savings accruing in the performance of the wholesale function. The best figures available on the cost of the wholesale function to drug chains were collected by the Census of Distribution. For 41 chain organizations reporting the expenses of the average chain-store warehouse were 6.6 percent of the value of merchandise handled at wholesale prices. This is only slightly lower than the figure for efficient cooperative wholesale establishments in the drug field which are running 7 and 8 percent of sales for operating expenses. Considering both the retail and wholesale functions then, it appears that the chain-store organizations do not offer any economic saving over the results achieved by independent distributors.

The chain stores in many lines have enjoyed spectacular growth, particularly during the 5 years ending with 1929. There were only a few of the retail trades enumerated by the Census of Distribution in 1929 in which more than half of the chain units in operation were established previous to this 5-year period. These lines, with the percentage of units in operation before 1925 in each case, were as follows:

	Percent
Office appliances.....	87
Motor-vehicle dealers.....	67.6
News-dealer groups.....	65.3
Variety-store chains.....	57.8
Men's wear.....	57.8
Drug stores without fountains.....	54.4
Hardware chains.....	53.6

There were several lines which enjoyed unusually rapid growth in the 4 years following 1925. In fact there were several lines in which the stores opened during this period constituted a third or more of all units enumerated in 1929. These groups in order were filling stations, food chains, household appliances, department stores, drug stores with fountains, shoe chains, jewelry, restaurants, and furniture.

There were some fields in which chains were still expanding so rapidly in 1929 that 1 out of 5 or more of the stores listed were opened in that year. These groups, with the percentage opened in 1929 given in each case, were as follows:

	Percent
Department stores.....	34.6
Drug stores with fountains.....	23.9
Filling stations.....	23.8
Auto accessories.....	23.6
Women's apparel.....	22.6

The economic contribution of the chain stores is frequently claimed to have been the reduction of the spread between producer and consumer. The coming of the chain store, according to this theory, should have meant decreasing gross margins over the entire period in which they have operated. As a matter of fact, figures for a great many trades collected by the Federal Trade Commission indicate the reverse to have been true. The earliest date for which comprehensive figures were available was 1909. In this year the gross-profit percentages of all chains reporting was 19.9 percent, as against 26.3 percent in 1930. Because of a very limited amount of data for the earlier years a fairer comparison can be made between 1920 and 1930. The percent of gross profit for all chains reporting in 1920 was 23.9.

Although there was no very decided upward trend from that date on the part of chain stores as a whole, such an upward trend is very marked in more than half of the trades reporting. Types of chains showing a definite upward trend since 1920 were grocery, meat, hats and caps, men's and women's ready-to-wear, confectionery, millinery, men's furnishings, men's ready-to-wear, women's ready-to-wear, hardware, men's shoes, men's and women's shoes, dry goods and apparel, and grocery and meat stores. The first five types enumerated show an upward trend in gross profit for earlier years as well. The most striking upward trend is for grocery stores, for which the gross-profit percentage was 8.2 in 1909 and 22.1 in 1930. The grocery field is most frequently pointed to as a line in which the chain store has contributed by the reduction of gross margins.

Three lines—namely, furniture, drugs, and dollar-limit variety stores—show a horizontal trend through a long period of years. The latter two particularly have moved in a very narrow range, with gross margin varying only slightly on each side of 35 percent.

The only lines which show a definite downward trend in gross margins are musical instruments, department stores, tobacco, dry goods, and general merchandise. Musical instruments and tobacco may be looked upon as special cases. The deflation of gross margins in tobacco retailing has largely been due to the price policies and distribution practices of the large manufacturers of cigarettes. The decline of margins in musical instrument stores has resulted to a great degree from the impact of the development of the radio industry.

Other types of stores will be recognized as those which have developed to the highest degree the technique of the special cut-price sale. Department stores show the most consistent downward trend with a gross margin of 35.8 percent in 1911 and 29.8 percent in 1930. Department stores have based their merchandising to a very increasing degree on various types of special sales and anniversary events. On such sales both the manufacturer and retailer accept a lower margin in order to offer particularly attractive prices to the consumer. This decline in department store margins can be looked upon purely as a competitive phenomenon and cannot be expected to produce any benefits for the consumer over the long run. Department store margins have been lower than department store operating costs, in most instances, ever since 1930, which would indicate that margins cannot conceivably remain at their present low levels.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEEN. I yield.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. In line with the gentleman's general argument the chief difficulty with these chain stores is that they are taking money out of the communities.

Mr. DEEN. Yes.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Every time you spend a dime in a chain store the profit from that transaction goes right back to Wall Street, does it not?

Mr. DEEN. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Into the hands of the Mellons and the Morgans. It merely means the accumulating of the money into the hands of a few.

Mr. DEEN. The gentleman is right.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Every time they get a dollar it goes back to Wall Street, where it gets into the hands of the international bankers, and much of it goes out of the country.

Mr. DEEN. The gentleman is exactly right. It works in the direction of the centralization of wealth into the hands of a few. This policy has been pursued too long already in this country.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEEN. I yield.

Mr. COLMER. Is it not a fact the chain stores are destroying the middle class of people, which has been the backbone of this Nation?

Mr. DEEN. In my judgment, the great middle class, which has supported the institutions of the country, the roads, the schools, the churches, and which have been the backbone of the Nation, is fast being destroyed because of the power of the centralized dollar that is impoverishing millions of the common people of the country.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEEN. I yield.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. What is the gentleman's remedy for this situation?

Mr. DEEN. I will come to that at the conclusion of my speech.

The chain store does not necessarily lead to the grouping of retail sales in larger units. As a matter of fact, there are a number of lines in which there has been a definite decrease in average sales per store during the period covered. In looking at the period from 1920 to 1930, this sales decrease is particularly marked.

On the other hand, among the seven kinds of chains which show a definite increase in average sales per store, there are several whose percentage of operating cost increased during the same period. This is particularly true of grocery stores, meat stores, and combination stores. Despite the advantage of operation in larger units which, theoretically, should tend toward decreased operating cost, all three of these types, as previously noted, have collected a constantly growing percentage of gross profit from the consumer.

In the years since 1929 chain-store growth in most lines has slowed down or ceased entirely. Growth figures available for these later years are not as comprehensive as those shown by the census for previous years. Types of chains which were still growing very fast in 1929 showed a much slower rate of growth in the 3 succeeding years, and in 1932 closings exceeded openings in many cases. This was true for eight variety chains for which figures are regularly compiled and was, no doubt, true for most of the leading drug chains.

In terms of volume, the downward trend has been even more marked. Volume figures for representative organizations in the field of variety stores, mail-order chains, and restaurant chains show a decline in sales for every year since 1929. In these three groups the sales volume for 1932 ranges between 60 and 75 percent of the sales for 1929. It would appear that the chains in this field have absorbed approximately the same percentage of decline noted in the case of independent dealers. Apparently they were possessed of no particular management skill which enabled them to maintain volume while independents in the same lines were suffering sales declines.

There, no doubt, has been similar, although less marked, declines in the grocery field, although the leading grocery organization showed a slight gain in 1930 over 1929, and receded only slightly in 1931. Between 1931 and 1932, however, this company showed a very marked decline from $1,035,542,000 to $887,713,000. It is not known whether this loss in volume was partly due to the closing of stores in this instance. In the case of the second largest chain in the grocery field, however, a great many individual units were closed during 1932. This is probably true for most of the large organizations in this field as in others.

The chain stores in both the grocery and the drug fields is now forced to compete with a type of price-cutting organization with still more aggressive policies. In the drug field this new price cutter is known as the "pine-board store" while the grocery field has seen the development of huge cut-price markets. Both types of outlets can be considered special products of the depression. The principal saving in operating cost made by such companies is frequently rent free or rent at greatly reduced rates granted them by landlords holding distress property.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. DEEN. I yield.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. In addition to driving down rental values of property constantly, these chain stores, no matter what they are, are constantly driving down the wage scale, are they not?

Mr. DEEN. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Men who used to be independent merchants we now find working as clerks in chain stores at salaries of $10, $12, and $14 a week, do we not?

Mr. DEEN. Yes.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. And in the days of the independent business man, when the little fellow had a store on every corner in your little village and my big town the profit that he derived from the proceeds of his business was in turn spent with the shoemaker, the butcher, the baker, and so forth, in the community and the money stayed right there for redistribution.

If we keep on at the rate we are going, eventually there will not be any little men, because they cannot buy as cheaply as the big chains can. Does not the gentleman agree with my statement?

Mr. DEEN. I agree with the gentleman's statement.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. I think the gentleman and I are pretty well in accord on this proposition.

Mr. DEEN. We are in agreement.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. In addition to that the merchandising operations of the chain store is such that they tell the manufacturers what their goods must be manufactured for, saying to one of them that if he does not meet the price someone else will. So the ill effect of the chain extends throughout the entire range of operations from the factory worker through to the independent business man.

Mr. DEEN. I agree with the gentleman, and my next statement will answer his questions, especially the last one.

Their chief source of saving on the purchase cost of goods has been the desire of many manufacturers to find some sort of outlet for products that would not move through regular channels, even though the merchandise had to be sold at greatly reduced prices. There have been several striking instances of staple products which were ruined by such policies. One manufacturer of an important advertised product found his sales dropping from fourteen million to four million dollars in the space of 18 months because of the lack of a price-stabilization policy. Manufacturers in many lines have awakened to the menace to their position which such practices hold. Chain stores also, finding that they were not able to compete with the new organizations, which now offer the ultimate in price appeal, have become interested in price-stabilization programs. In the drug field, for example, a new organization which has for its central purpose an attempt at price stabilization, is securing the cooperation of not only retailers and wholesalers but of manufacturers and chain stores as well.

A comprehensive report has been made by the Federal Trade Commission on this policy of loss leaders in chain stores which has led to this situation. In a number of instances chain officials admitted that they had been selling merchandise below cost in order to attract customers who might be sold other items. This policy of offering merchandise at or below purchase price carries with it an element of deception. The intention is usually to limit the sale of leaders by every possible device and to use high-pressure selling to get purchasers to take other merchandise instead. Definite evidence is available in several cases of steps taken to delay the sale of leaders during the sale day by having too few people at the counter where leaders are displayed, by slowing down wrapping and change-making, and similar devices. There seems to be a growing sentiment in a number of trades that this type of merchandising has about run its course. Consumers are more fully conscious of the trick element in this type of selling and are increasingly insistent upon obtaining precisely the item asked for when responding to a special sale.

Citizens of several of the States in the United States, recognizing the positive need for legislation which would place a proper tax on chain stores, have made a distinct contribution to merchandising policies as related to the home-town merchant and to the buying public in general. Chain stores, with their amassed capital, have forced the commodity price level of agricultural and industrial products to an exceedingly low plane. With their centralized wealth they have hammered down farm products. Through their enormous buying power they have squeezed the very life out of thousands of individual merchants. They have put out of business thousands of the men and women who have built the very towns and communities in which they now operate. Usually they do not enter a town until it is considered modern and progressive. In most cases they do not go to small towns while the schoolhouses are being built, streets and sidewalks are being paved, sewerage systems being installed, and other civic improvements. The local citizens do the work and pay the bills and later find themselves being driven out of business by these very monopolistic chain stores who take the money from the local communities and carry it to the large money centers.

Each of the several States in the United States should expeditiously enact proper legislation that will prevent the stream of money flowing from their local communities to the coffers of money lords. The following States have enacted anti-chain-store taxes:

Alabama: Enacted 1931. A graduated license tax based on number of stores. Applies to both wholesale and retail. Provisions: 1 store, $1; graduated to $75 for each store over 20. Contested, but in force.

Arizona: Enacted January 1, 1932. A graduated license tax based on number of stores. Provisions: 1 store, $3; graduated to $25 for each store over 20. In March 1933 repealed by legislature.

Delaware: Enacted 1917 (ch. 13, Session Laws). A property, nonresidence tax. Provisions: $10, plus 10 cents for each $100 of aggregate cost value of goods in excess of $5,000 for concerns having principal place of business outside the State and maintaining stores or depots within the State. In force.

Florida: Enacted June 24, 1931. A graduated license tax based on number of stores located in one county. Provisions: Where all stores are located in 1 county, 1 store, $5; graduated to $40 for each store over 75; where stores are in more than 1 county, 2 stores, $15 per store; graduated to $50 for each store over 75; $3 for each $1,000 stock carried in each store; counties and towns were allowed to tax in the same way as the State but to only 25 percent of the extent. On March 13, 1933, the United States Supreme Court declared the law unconstitutional.

Georgia: Enacted 1927. A straight license tax. Provisions: For each store over 5, $250. On September 4, 1929 (Corporation Tax Service, Georgia Digest, p. 58N) in F. W. Woolworth against Vandivier the Superior Court of Fulton County made permanent an order restraining the enforcement of the law. Not in force.

Georgia: Enacted 1929. A straight license tax. Provisions: For each store in a chain of more than 5, $50. In Woolworth against Harrison, April 1931, the State court declared the law unconstitutional.

Idaho: Enacted March 1, 1933. A graduated license tax based on number of stores. Provisions: 1 store, $5; graduated to $500 for each store over 20. In force.

Indiana: Enacted 1929. A graduated license tax based on number of stores. Provisions: 1 store, $3; graduated to $25 for each store over 20. Superseded by more severe law 1933.

Indiana: Enacted March 11, 1933. A graduated license tax based on number of stores. Provisions: 1 store, $3; graduated to $150 for each store over 20. In force.

Kentucky: Enacted 1930. A graduated sales tax. Provisions: One twentieth of 1 percent of gross sales of $400,000 or less graduated to 1 percent of gross sales in excess of $1,000,000. In force.

Louisiana: Enacted July 7, 1932. A graduated license tax based on number of stores. Provisions: 2 stores but not exceeding 5 stores, $15 each; graduated to $200 on each store in excess of 50. In force.

Maine: Enacted March 31, 1933. To take effect July 1, 1933. A graduated license tax based on number of stores. Provisions: 1 store, $1; graduated to $50 for each store over 25. In force.

Maryland: Enacted 1927. A graduated license tax on chain stores in Allegany County only. Provisions: $500 for each store up to 5, inclusive; prohibited more than 5 stores of one chain in the county. Circuit Court of Allegany County declared law unconstitutional.

Maryland: Enacted 1933. A graduated license tax based on number of stores. Provisions: 1 to 5 stores, $5 per store; graduated up to $150 for each store over 20. In force.

Minnesota: Enacted 1933. Graduated license tax based on number of stores. Provisions: $5 for each of first 10 stores; graduated to $50 for each store over 50. In force.

Mississippi: Enacted 1930. A sales tax on chain stores. STATES AND CITIES WHICH ENACTED ANTICHAIN TAX LAWS PRIOR TO MAY 15, 1933

The following 17 States have antichain tax laws: Alabama, Delaware, Idaho, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Minnesota, Mississippi, Montana, New Mexico, North Carolina, South Carolina, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia, and Wisconsin.

The following four States have had, but no longer have, antichain tax laws: Arizona, Georgia, Florida, and Mississippi.

The following five cities have antichain tax ordinances: Portland, Oreg.; Durham, N.C.; Fredericksburg, Va.; St. Louis, Mo.; and Aberdeen, Wash.

The following five cities have had, but no longer have, antichain tax ordinances: Hamtramck, Mich.; Red Bank, N.J.; Knoxville, Tenn.; Maplewood, Mo.; and Capital Heights, Md.

Mr. Speaker, I believe the question of the chain-store tax should be left to the several States; in addition to this fact I also believe that sales taxes are within the province of the States. In my judgment, the Federal Government should leave the sales tax to the various States in the United States. The powers of the Federal Government are powers which have been delegated by the various States. Several of the States have already enacted a sales tax. It seems to me that for the Federal Government to continue the policy of a sales tax is further encroachment upon State rights.

The Ways and Means Committee of the House is now engaged in trying to find some method of raising $3,000,000,000 for the purpose of carrying out the President's public-works program. Serious consideration is being given a general sales tax which, in my judgment, if enacted into law, will yield very little revenue and at the same time will paralyze business, increase the burdens of the buying public, while at the same time millions of people will remain unemployed. The common people of this country cannot stand any more taxes now. They will rebel if the load is increased.

Serious consideration is being given a bond issue of $3,000,000,000 with which to raise the funds. A bond issue means more debt and more taxes. It also means that we will again flood the country with tax-exempt securities. The rich people will buy these securities, which the Government will guarantee at about 4 percent interest. The masses will have to pay the taxes and the interest. I am constitutionally opposed to any further bond issues. The Federal Government has outstanding bonds and other liabilities totaling around $20,000,000,000. This is no time to increase this huge debt. I am also opposed to the Federal Government putting on a general sales tax, because it will be passed on to the consumer.

Briefly, the President can secure this money by one or both of the following methods: First, under the recent act passed by Congress giving the President authority and power to expand the currency $3,000,000,000 he can authorize the printing of $3,000,000,000 in new currency and put that currency in circulation by giving employment to the unemployed in the construction of useful public works. He has that power, given him recently by the Congress. Why not use it? This is the proper course for the President to follow. It will be a tragic mistake to adopt a sales tax or to issue more bonds. An individual cannot tax himself out of debt, neither can a nation. The other method that should be pursued is to increase the inheritance tax, the gift tax, the excise tax, and surtaxes. Three hundred and seventy-six thousand corporations now have a surplus of $60,000,000. From January 1, 1916, to December 31, 1929, these corporations made net profits of $100,000,000,000. A substantial increase in the taxes on a few of the corporations who made their millions during and following the World War will raise several billion dollars. The disabled American veterans, their widows and orphans, millions of unemployed, and the masses of farmers and laboring people along with their dependents are pleading for justice. It is my hope that this Congress will not increase the bonded indebtedness on the Nation, will not paralyze business and crush overburdened taxpayers with a sales tax, but that we will have the courage to place the proper taxes where they belong—that is, on gifts, inheritances, excess profits, and certain corporations who are paying exorbitant and extravagant salaries to their executives and declaring millions in dividends. Let us be honest and call a sword a sword and a spade a spade. Let us legislate for the masses and not for the classes.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks which I made today and to insert therein certain excerpts from committee reports that I mentioned.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Speaker, some time ago I addressed a letter to the Secretary of State and the Attorney General in an effort to find out who was responsible in their Departments for telling the Committee on the Judiciary that the Secretary of State and the Attorney General endorsed the bill that was finally passed in the House and which has been known as "the press censorship bill." This bill, as soon as it was passed by the House on the strength of the statement that it came from these Departments, was repudiated by the Secretary of State and the Attorney General.

The Secretary of State answered my letter. The Attorney General, although the letter was written over a month ago, has not answered it.

It is true that because of the emergency the House has been going along at great speed, which, of course, required that the House abridge the individual rights of the Members of the House. A great number of the Members are reconciled to this; but because of the way the House treats its own Members does not mean there is any abridgement of the courtesy that should exist between the executive departments and the Congress. This is the first time in my career as a Member of the Congress that the head of a department has refused to answer a letter.

This bill has been completely changed in the Senate, but it left the Members of the House who voted for it in the position of having voted in these free United States for a law involving press censorship, and I believe it is the duty of the Secretary of State and the Attorney General to tell the House and the public who in their Departments were responsible for misleading the House.

The House is entitled to this information. The Secretary of State's letter was long and rambling and statesmanlike. It did not say anything and it did not give me the name of the man in the State Department who misled the House; but the Attorney General has not answered at all.

What can I do about it? You cannot force them to answer. I could write the President of the United States a letter and see if he could make them answer, but I do not want to do this. I do not want to embarrass the President. So I am making this protest on the floor of the House so it will not happen again.

Now, why has he not answered this letter? It is one of three reasons, and I prefer to believe that the first one is the correct one. It is either lack of courtesy or it is inefficiency in his Department or it is concealment. I prefer to believe it is lack of courtesy; lack of courtesy not to me personally, but in my official capacity as a Member of the Congress.

It is true that the country generally believes that the Congress has sunk to a low estate as compared with the executive departments, but this is because of the artificial system which prevails now because of the speed required.

If it is inefficiency, it is this kind of inefficiency: Here is the head of a department charged with the investigation and prosecution of crime. If the head of the Department cannot find out who in his Department used his name wrongfully before a committee of the House, how is he going to find the ordinary criminal?

If it is concealment, why the concealment? And there is every indication that it is concealment, because the letter of the Secretary of State to me was evasive and concealing.

We should know in this House who is responsible for putting over this proposition on the House. Why did somebody in the executive branch of the Government want press censorship? Who suggested it? Where did it come from? What is the purpose of it? Why was the House left in this position?

It is a dangerous thing in this country, if there is lurking in the mind of anybody in the executive branch of Government the idea that there should be press censorship. We have heard a lot about dictatorship; we have heard a lot about Congress surrendering its rights, which is bad enough; but if there is in the brains of anybody in the executive branch of Government the idea that in addition to this so-called "dictatorship" there should also be press censorship, then I say the freedom of this country is in danger, and we should know whether it was carelessness, whether it was neglect, or whether it was actually the purpose of somebody in the executive departments that this House should pass a press-censorship law.

As I have said, there is nothing I can do about it except to leave it to the House and the committee, but I am going to go as far as I can. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill, H.R. 5390, entitled "An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1933, and June 30, 1934, and for other purposes."

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

AMERICA'S MORAL LEADERSHIP

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, one of the tragedies of this distressing period through which the world is passing is the apparent inability of the present rulers of Germany to realize that racial hates and religious bigotry are the demoralizing and destructive indications of a national hysteria, similar to that which plunged the world into a bloody, useless, and insane war in 1914.

The people of Germany have suffered deeply from foolish and vain leadership. It was this that made them a military nation in 1914, with the one idea of winning what they were taught to think was their just place "under the sun." And it is an equally false leadership that now decrees that all sorts of injustices be visited on the Jews in Germany. Many of these Jews have been German citizens for generations; have been law-abiding, industrious, respected members of their communities. And now, without reason and without justification, they are subjected to every sort of indignity and worse.

This has caused a wave of horror to sweep through all just countries. It has been particularly strong in our own country. And this is right and natural. For a country dedicated to religious freedom and racial equality must voice its protest when those sacred principles are violated as they are now being violated under Hitler in Germany.

While every man and woman who loves justice must be revolted by the treatment of the Jews in Germany, each account of that treatment comes like a sword thrust in the heart of our Jewish citizens. For many of these have relatives there. And each morning they awake to the fear that the day may bring to them news of new calamities that have been visited upon an aged mother, a long-respected father, or to other dear ones.

It is because of this that I am voicing my protest here. But I have something other than a protest to offer. And that is an assurance to the many thousands of Jewish people who are living under direct anxiety as to the fate of their relatives in Germany. That assurance is that they can have faith in the State Department, which is informed as to the facts, is enlightened and liberal, and can be trusted to make such representations to the Hitler government as are in accord with diplomatic usage. That Hitler will listen and will change his policy is my firm belief.

And this belief is based on the fact that under the virile and enlightened Presidency of Franklin D. Roosevelt the United States is winning the respect and confidence of the nations and is taking world leadership in moral as well as economic issues. [Applause.]

SENATE

SATURDAY, MAY 20, 1933

(Legislative day of Monday, May 15, 1933)

The Senate sitting as a court for the trial of articles of impeachment against Harold Louderback, judge of the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, met at 10 o'clock a.m., on the expiration of the recess.

The managers on the part of the House of Representatives appeared in the seats provided for them.

The respondent, Harold Louderback, with his counsel, Walter H. Linforth, Esq., and James M. Hanley, Esq., appeared in the seats assigned to them.

PROCLAMATION

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Sergeant at Arms will proclaim the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment in session.

The Sergeant at Arms made the usual proclamation.

THE JOURNAL

On motion of Mr. ASHURST, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment for the calendar day of May 19 was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

The VICE PRESIDENT. What witness do counsel for the respondent desire to call?

Mr. LINFORTH. The witness Hunter was on the stand.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Call the witness. Has the witness been sworn?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Yes, sir.

CROSS-EXAMINATION OF H. B. HUNTER (CONTINUED)

H. B. Hunter, having been previously sworn, was cross-examined further, and testified as follows:

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Mr. Hunter, what was the total amount of money that you collected in the Russell-Colvin estate as receiver?—A. There was over $3,000,000 of assets.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, I object to the witness' not responding to the question, and I ask that the reporter read it to him.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The witness will answer directly the question according to the information he has.

The WITNESS. In my opinion, there was over a million dollars collected for the estate in the way of the collection of accounts—cash, selling securities, credits on indebtedness, and so forth.

Q. Do you mean to tell me, in answer to my question, that you collected over $1,000,000 of money as receiver? Answer, yes or no.—A. No; not in money.

Q. Then tell me the amount of money that you collected.—A. I think in the neighborhood of $500,000.

Q. Now, what came into your hands in the form of securities, and how much which was not money but securities?—A. There was over a million and a half dollars of securities that were in the estate, which were partially liquidated or sold to satisfy indebtedness due by the estate to the extent of $500,000, and also additional amounts were sold to satisfy the overborrowing of the partnership on customers' securities, which would leave about some $800,000 to $900,000.

Q. I will ask you again to state, not including money, which you state was $500,000, but the securities alone that came into your possession as receiver for distribution to the owners?—A. I say it was around $500,000.

Q. You recall the filing of a petition to put the concern into bankruptcy after the appointment of a receiver?—A. I am not familiar with the petition; no.

Q. You know it was filed?—A. Oh, yes.

Q. What class of claims was it that was represented in the petition? Was that what was known as the Sanderson claim?—A. If I may correct you, it was the Sendermen case. I do not think there was a claim filed in the Sendermen case.

Q. Was the petition filed by creditors of the concern?—
A. As I understand it, Paul Marrin, representing a creditor by the name of Olmstead, filed the petition.

Q. I am talking now about the petition in bankruptcy.—
A. Oh, the petition in bankruptcy. I do not know anything about that.

Q. Do you not know that it was the Sendermen claims that were represented by this petition in bankruptcy?—A. I have heard that, but I do not know it to be a fact.

Q. You do know the Sendermen claims were settled?—
A. I do.

Q. And that that eliminated the bankruptcy proceeding?—
A. I know that Sendermen was a partner in Russell-Colvin and claimed certain partnership profits and securities. He had a claim, I think, of twenty-five or fifty thousand dollars.

Q. And that claim was settled by you as receiver?—A. On the recommendation of counsel for the general creditors.

Q. And that eliminated the bankruptcy proceeding?—A. I am not certain that that eliminated the bankruptcy proceeding, but that was a part of the deal; yes.

Q. There was also a group of claims that you settled in full of those who were general creditors of the estate, was there not?—A. The preferred creditors in the general estate; yes.

Q. Part of those claims were represented by Mr. Kreft, who testified here yesterday, were they not?—A. That was an exception filed.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, I ask that the witness answer my question.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If the witness has knowledge, he must answer the direct question that the counsel asks.

Q. Part of those claims that were settled were represented by Mr. Kreft, who testified here yesterday, were they not?—
A. I know $75,000 was paid to Mr. Kreft's clients.

Q. That was in full of his claim?—A. It was not in full.

Q. What percentage did you pay?—A. A very small part or percentage.

Q. Do you mean that he settled for less than was paid out to the other creditors?—A. No; but to avoid long litigation. Mr. Kreft claimed certain offsets, and, on recommendation of the counsel for the plaintiff and the defendant, the matter was settled.

Q. Were those recommendations from the counsel for the receiver?—A. They were not.

Q. Well, on whose advice did you settle that? Did you do it without advice from your own counsel?—A. My own counsel undoubtedly thought that was the advisable thing to do to save the estate from lengthy litigation.

Q. I will ask you again if it was on advice of counsel for the receiver that you made the settlement?—A. I would say so; yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Hunter, there was a certain amount of stock that you had on option and that you permitted the option to expire on without selling for the price that had been offered, was there not?—A. May I correct you on that?

Q. Yes.—A. There were certain bonds of the Consolidated Box deal which were on option to be sold to Mr. Blumberg, representing something like 21 bonds. I think there were conditions. There was an option to deliver them at a certain time; there was a letter of credit issued by the Wells, Fargo Bank guaranteeing payment; the due date on the option and the due date on the letter of credit varied 30 days.

Q. You did permit that option to expire without selling?—
A. I did.

Q. And what was the loss to the estate because of that lapse of the option?—A. The loss to the estate was $4,200. That I do not consider a complete loss for this reason: There were 13 bonds pledged to the collector of internal revenue, guaranteeing him the payment of the income tax. If I had refused or had gone to him and said, "Now, you sell your bonds", it would have put him in a very difficult position. It would have lengthened the litigation by many months, fighting with the Government over the payment of their income tax. So that I took it to avoid a long-drawn out litigation and justification for more fees and more expenses.

Q. It was out of your consideration for him that you let this option lapse, was it?—A. Out of consideration for Mr. Blumberg?

Q. Yes.—A. Not at all.

Q. You gave as a reason that he would have lost on his income-tax matter, as I understand.—A. No; the collector of internal revenue.

Q. But you did not take that into consideration when you let the option lapse, did you?—A. No, sir. The reason the option lapsed was due to a misunderstanding of the legal terms of the letter of credit.

Q. When you testified before our committee last September in San Francisco you took full responsibility for this yourself?—A. I do; as I always do in the administration of anything.

Q. And you did not offer at that time any excuse for your failure to sell on that option?—A. No, sir; there is no excuse when a man makes an error.

Q. How long were you connected directly as assistant to the president of the San Francisco Stock Exchange?—A. I think about 8 or 9 months.

Q. Have you been closely associated with the stock exchange or members of the stock exchange before and since that time?—A. I think so.

Q. Do you think you are very familiar with the attitude of the conduct of the stock exchange?

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a minute. I submit, Mr. President, that question is objectionable. The attitude of the stock exchange and its conduct should not be left to the opinion of the witness.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I am asking him whether he knows it, and that is the only way we have to prove it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. What is the object of the testimony?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. The object of the testimony, Mr. President, is that this man, as assistant to the president of the stock exchange, and as directly connected with the members of the stock exchange, should know what the attitude of the stock exchange has been toward the liquidation of the estates of its members. The effort has been made here to try to show some kind of a suspicious interest on the part of the exchange in the settlement of this estate, and we want to prove what the attitude of the stock exchange really is in the case of these administrations.

Mr. LINFORTH. One minute, Mr. President. We submit their attitude on any matter other than the matter under consideration is purely immaterial to this inquiry, and I make the objection in the interest of time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is the purpose of the managers on the part of the House to show the general reputation of the stock exchange?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. No; the purpose is to show whether the activities of the stock exchange on matters that involve its members is in the interest of covering up something or the interest of protecting the public and economical administration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The witness may be allowed to answer the question.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I will ask the reporter to read the question.

The WITNESS. I think I recall the question. I have no knowledge of the attitude of the stock exchange.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Did you contact the attorneys for the stock exchange in the administration of this Russell-Colvin matter?—
A. I contacted every attorney in town interested in the estate, including the stock-exchange attorneys.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I asked the witness one question, and I insist I have the right to an answer to that question.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The witness will answer the question directly.

The WITNESS. I did.

Q. Was that Mr. Lloyd Dinkelspiel and other members of the firm?—A. Lloyd Dinkelspiel.

Q. How often and in what relation?—A. Once when I asked him to come to sit in with a great many other attorneys who were there as to the method of handling the estate to approve the procedure that I was setting up so that I would have his approval and should not have a long-drawn-out litigation later.

Q. Who are the attorneys who were present in this conference?—A. Lloyd Dinkelspiel, Mr. Ackerman—

Q. Is that Lloyd Ackerman?—A. Lloyd Ackerman. Mr. Cohen—Aaron Cohen—a representative from Mr. Peart's office, Mr. Simon from the stock exchange, and several other attorneys. I do not recall the names now.

Q. Was Francis Brown there?—A. Oh, Francis Brown was there; yes.

Q. And De Lancey Smith?—A. I do not recall De Lancey Smith's being there, but I think Mr. Marrin was there.

Q. You mentioned some representative of the stock exchange other than Lloyd Dinkelspiel; who was that?—A. Mr. Simon.

Q. In what relationship did he represent the exchange?—A. Only as a member, I should say, and as a member of the board of governors.

Q. Throughout the administration of this estate, to your knowledge was there any effort on the part of anyone representing the stock exchange to cover up any act of this member of the exchange that would be hurtful to the public or to the creditors?—A. I do not know of any. I had full cooperation from the exchange.

Q. Mr. Hunter, when were your fees paid? What date was the money transferred from the receiver's account to your personal account in this case?—A. I think the estate had run about 15 months when the amount was allowed by the court of $33,000 which I received. In another 6 months I think I was paid an additional $7,500.

Q. I am asking the exact date on which the money was transferred from your account as receiver in this first matter of the allowance of fees to your personal account, and when the second amount was allowed and transferred to your personal account?—A. I do not recall. My records, which were subpoenaed in this case, and my bank account would show that. I do not recall the exact date. The cash account will show that.

Q. Will you consult the records in the hands of the clerk and give us that information?—A. I will try to; yes.

Q. Do you know the exact date on which the money was paid to the attorneys in this case?—A. Probably the same date.

Q. You will supply that for the record at the same time you supply the other?—A. Yes.

Q. I believe you stated yesterday that you did not divide your fees with anyone?—A. That is absolutely true. I think when you were in San Francisco and subpoenaed my account, I satisfied you in that regard. My account and my wife's account were investigated thoroughly and I think we accounted for every nickel.

Q. Soon after your fee was allowed to you in this case did you consult an attorney and tell him that you thought you were supposed to divide your fee with somebody?—A. I do not recall it; no, sir.

Q. If you had, would you know it?—A. I certainly would.

Q. Do you say now that you did not consult anyone at any time about a division of your fee?—A. Absolutely.

Q. Did you speak to an attorney about your fee after you got it?—A. I do not recall.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Are there any further questions?

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a question or two, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Proceed.

Redirect examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. In line with the question asked you, did you submit your bank account and your wife's bank account to Mr. LaGuardia when the investigation was going on in San Francisco?—A. I did.

Q. Did you also, upon their demand or request, take them to your safe-deposit box, so they could examine your safe-deposit box?—A. Absolutely; both Mrs. Hunter's and my own box and accounts.

Q. They examined both your safe-deposit box and your wife's safe-deposit box?—A. Absolutely. No rock was left unturned.

Mr. LINFORTH. That is all.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I wish to submit a question which I wish to propound.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the question submitted by the Senator from Utah.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. The testimony indicates that you and your attorney consulted frequently. Was there any necessity to consult so often?

The WITNESS. There was, Senator. I think my daily record of service, in which I am rather methodical when I put down matters, shows that I consulted them almost daily on questions of law.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I submit another question.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let it be read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. State the reasons for such frequent consultations.

The WITNESS. There were hundreds and hundreds of questions that had to be settled in the liquidation of a brokerage concern, and these came up every day as I worked on the problem. As an instance of the questions I wished decision upon, I recall a few. The first thing that I wanted to know was what date would the securities be appraised. Would it be the date of the receiver's appointment or a later date or an earlier date? That is just one illustration. There are hundreds of them that you can find out from the record. I have a record of questions asked that I should be glad to submit if anyone cares to look at them.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Are there any further questions? If not, the witness will stand aside.

(The witness retired from the stand.)

EXAMINATION OF JOHN DINKELSPIEL

Mr. LINFORTH. We will call Mr. John Dinkelspiel.

John Dinkelspiel, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair appoints the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] to preside for this day.

(Thereupon Mr. McCARRAN took the chair.)

Mr. LINFORTH. Shall I proceed?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. You may.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Will you please state your residence and occupation?—A. My residence is San Francisco, Calif., and my occupation is attorney at law.

Q. What is the name of your firm?—A. Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel.

Q. At the time of the transactions which are under investigation who were the members of your firm?—A. For part of the transactions the firm consisted of my father, who was then living, Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel, and my brother, Martin J. Dinkelspiel, and myself. My father passed away in 1931.

Q. How long had he been practicing law in San Francisco?—A. He was admitted to the bar of San Francisco in 1891.

Q. In the 5 years which Judge Louderback was upon the Federal bench, in how many matters were you appointed attorney for a receiver?—A. Four.

Q. When he was upon the trial bench of the superior court for 8 years, were you appointed attorney for a receiver in any matter?—A. No, sir.

Q. In any of the fees allowed your firm in the four receivership matters to which you have referred, did Judge Louderback directly or indirectly receive any part or portion of them?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did anyone except yourselves receive any portion of those fees?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know Mr. W. S. Leake?—A. No, sir.

Q. Never met him?—A. Never in my life.

Q. In the case known as "the Sonora Phonograph case", you were attorneys for the receiver?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the receiver?—A. It was an ancillary receivership proceeding. There were two receivers in the first instance, the Irving Trust Co., of New York City, and G. H. Gilbert.

Q. Mr. Dinkelspiel, in answering my questions, in the interest of time, will you please cut out as much detail as you can and just give us the ultimate facts or conclusions?—A. Very well.

Q. Who was the receiver in that receivership?—A. The Irving Trust Co. and G. H. Gilbert.

Q. Did the Irving Trust Co. continue to act during the entire time, or was it relieved of its duties?—A. It was relieved of its duties.

Q. How long did the receivership continue, approximately?—A. Approximately 7 months.

Q. In that time, in round numbers, how much money was collected by the receiver?—A. Approximately $350,000.

Q. Did the receiver carry on the affairs of that concern as a going concern?—A. He did.

Q. Did the receiver dispose of the assets which that company had within the northern district of California?—A. He did.

Q. In that matter what fees were allowed by Judge Loud-erback?—A. The receiver received sixty-eight hundred and some odd dollars, and the attorneys $20,000.

Q. Was the amount allowed the receiver figured upon the statutory basis?—A. The fees allowed to the receiver in that case were fixed according to section 48 of the bankruptcy law.

Q. That established the amount that was allowed to the receiver. Is that correct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What amount was allowed to you?—A. $20,000.

Q. Before that amount was allowed to you was there any agreement made by the representatives or attorneys of the home receivership in New York as to the amount that should be allowed you?—A. We filed an application for $22,500. We submitted that to the attorney for the Irving Trust Co. and to the attorneys representing the creditors' committee in New York City. They advised us that we should file an ad interim account and that they agreed that as an interim allowance the court should allow us $15,000 on account.

Q. Subsequently, when an additional application was made for $7,500, was that taken up with the attorneys for the home receiver in New York, and was any suggestion or agreement made as to what should be allowed?—A. Yes, sir. The attorneys in New York City representing the trustees, and also the attorneys representing the creditors' committee, suggested that an allowance of $2,500 be approved.

Q. In other words, the attorneys for the New York receivership consented to an allowance of $17,500 in full?—A. That is correct.

Q. And the court allowed you $20,000?—A. That is correct.

Q. You have the telegrams and the letters of those attorneys to that effect?—A. I have.

Q. You can produce them here if opposing counsel desires them?—A. I can, sir.

Q. Did you apportion or divide the fee received in that manner with anyone?—A. No, sir.

Q. Except your partners?—A. No, sir.

Q. Not a dollar of it?—A. No, sir.

Q. During that receivership, did you come in daily contact with Mr. Gilbert, the receiver?—A. Practically every day, sir.

Q. With respect to the work that he did as receiver, how did you find him, efficient or otherwise?—A. I found him efficient in that case, and believe that the people in interest also found his work efficient.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President—

Mr. LINFORTH. I consent that the part of the answer which purports to state what the others found him to be may go out.

The WITNESS. I am sorry.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Were you the attorney for the receiver in the Golden State Asparagus case, so called?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In round numbers, what was the value of the assets of the Golden Gate Asparagus Co.?—A. In round numbers, slightly over $1,000,000.

Q. And, in round numbers, what were its liabilities?—A. Its secured liabilities were approximately four or five hundred thousand dollars; and, in round numbers, its unsecured liabilities were about the same figure.

Q. Who was the receiver in that case?—A. George N. Edwards.

Q. Did you know Mr. Edwards before he had been appointed receiver?—A. No, sir.

Q. By the way, does your firm make a specialty of matters of this kind—liquidation matters?—A. Yes, sir. We have, I should say, a large bankruptcy and receivership practice.

Q. In the Asparagus Co. matter, how long did that receivership last?—A. It was commenced in September 1930 and it is still pending.

Q. During that receivership, did you ascertain that a great portion of its assets had been pledged and mortgaged to a certain bank?—A. When the receiver was first appointed, in September 1930, I might say generally that practically every asset of any value of the company was hypothecated to the Pacific National Bank of San Francisco.

Q. As the result of negotiations entered into by the receiver, Mr. Edwards, and yourself, with the assistance of others, did you liquidate the assets that were under pledge or mortgage?—A. We were able to pay off the loan to the Pacific National Bank in full and preserve an equity in the company of a considerable amount of money. I cannot fix the amount, because it depends on the value, based on economic conditions.

Q. How much was the obligation of that bank which you and the receiver, with the assistance of the others, liquidated and paid off?—A. Between $225,000 and $235,000.

Q. Do not go into detail, but state briefly how many petitions and applications of various kinds were prepared by you and presented to the court during the administration of that receivership?—A. We prepared, on behalf of the receiver, 18 separate rent-share base contracts and leases, all of which were different, and on which we could not use the previous form or basis to work out. We prepared a petition and negotiated to close the sale of some 16 acres to the Southern Pacific—

Q. Mr. Dinkelspiel, will you permit an interruption in the interest of time? Instead of stating what they were, unless it is asked for on cross-examination, will you state in round numbers the number of petitions that you prepared which were submitted to the court and passed upon by the court in that receivership?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, may I suggest to counsel for respondent that it will perhaps save time if the witness will indicate in what connection these various documents were prepared. It might save time.

Mr. LINFORTH. In the interest of time, I leave that for the cross-examination, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. You may proceed.

The WITNESS. We prepared approximately 18 or 19 separate leases, probably 5 or 6 separate agreements, and numerous other agreements which were drafted and not executed.

Q. In round numbers, how much in cash did the receiver take in during his receivership?—A. I do not believe I could answer that question without referring to the receiver's account.

Q. Could you answer, in round numbers, whether it was several hundred thousand dollars or a few dollars?—A. I could not give an answer on that.

Q. The receiver took in more than enough to pay the bank two hundred and odd thousand dollars, did he not?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. We object to that question, Mr. President.

Mr. LINFORTH. My embarrassment is that I am trying to save time.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I withdraw the objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is withdrawn.

The WITNESS. I could not give you a proper answer without referring to the receiver's account, which is on file with the papers.

Q. In that matter, to your knowledge, was an arrangement made between the attorneys representing the plaintiff and the attorneys representing the defendant in that case with reference to the compensation of the receiver?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the arrangement made with those attorneys as to the compensation of the receiver?—A. The receiver was to receive $1,000 per month.

Q. How much did you apply for as one of the attorneys for the receiver?—A. $14,000, covering 1 year's services.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Just a moment. The Chair assumes that when you use the word "you", you mean the firm, do you not?

Mr. LINFORTH. Thank you, Mr. President, for the suggestion.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. When I say "you", I mean your firm.—A. $14,000 for 1 year's services.

Q. Before that application came on for hearing, was there any discussion between you and the receiver and the attorneys for the American Can Co., the plaintiff in that case, with reference to the amount that should be allowed to yourself and the receiver?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was that attorney?—A. Mr. Fox, of Chickering & Gregory, and Mr. Richter, of Cushing & Cushing.

Q. What amount was agreed to as the reasonable value of the services of the receiver and the attorney?—A. We were unable to agree to any figure. Mr. Richter, who represented the defendant company, advised us that his client no longer had any direct interest in the situation, and referred us to the creditors' committee and to Mr. Fox, who represented the American Can Co., who was the petitioner in the action. We took up the matter with Mr. Fox, and advised him that we were considering filing a petition both for the receiver and for his attorneys for $15,000 apiece to cover the 1 year's service. Mr. Fox said, "Well, I should rather not pass on that. I will suggest that you take up the matter with Judge William J. Hayes", who was the attorney for the San Francisco Board of Trade, and who was representing numerous creditors.

Q. Did you take it up with Mr. Hayes?—A. We did, sir.

Q. What amount did Mr. Hayes suggest?—A. He suggested that a fee of $10,000 would be in order.

Q. Did the matter come on subsequently before Judge Louderback for hearing?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At that hearing did Mr. Hayes suggest that he thought $10,000 would be reasonable?—A. Mr. Hayes' statement in court was, he advised the court that we had discussed this matter with him; that we had offered at that time—we felt, if I may recount that conversation a little more fully—

Q. Mr. Dinkelspiel, I want you, please, to be as brief as possible, and cut out details.—A. Judge Hayes advised Judge Louderback, when the matter came on for hearing, that he was neither approving nor disapproving of the application made, but that he was instructed by his clients to state that in their opinion an allowance should be made of $10,000 covering 1 year's services.

Q. Did the court make any statement to Mr. Fox, representing the American Can Co. and its attorneys, Chickering & Gregory, as to what amount in his opinion was reasonable?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did Mr. Fox reply?—A. Mr. Fox suggested, instead of making the allowance for 1 year's services, in view of the fact that the application was being heard about 16 or 18 months after the inception of the receivership, that Judge Louderback make the allowance on account of services rendered to date.

Q. Was there any question from the judge to Mr. Fox as to what, in his opinion, the services were worth?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What took place in that respect?—A. The judge asked Mr. Fox, on his suggestion, what he felt should be a proper allowance on account, as distinguished from our application for 1 year. Mr. Fox stated $15,000.

Q. In the submission of the matter, how much did the court allow you and how much did the court allow the receiver?—A. To the receiver, $14,000 on account; and to ourselves the same amount on account.

Q. Was any appeal ever taken from either order?—A. No, sir.

Q. With reference to that fee of $14,000, to your absolute knowledge did the respondent, Judge Louderback, ever receive a cent of it?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did anyone except the firm of Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel ever receive a cent of it?—A. Absolutely not.

Q. You made no contribution and no division to anybody of any part of that fee?—A. No, sir; no, sir.

Q. Were you—and when I say "you" I mean your firm—the attorneys for the Fageol Motors Co.?—A. For the receiver in equity of the Fageol Motors Co.

Q. That is what I meant, Mr. Dinkelspiel. May I amend the question? Was your firm the attorneys for the receiver of the Fageol Motors Co.?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who was the receiver?—A. G. H. Gilbert.

Q. How long did that receivership last?—A. From February 1932 until sometime in July of 1932.

Q. In that matter, do you know who allowed or fixed the compensation of the receiver and his attorneys?—A. Yes, sir; the referee in bankruptcy at Oakland, Calif., Burton K. Wyman.

Q. Did Judge Louderback, the respondent here, have anything whatever to do with fixing those fees?—A. No, sir.

Q. In the application made, how much was requested as fees of the attorney and the fees of the receiver?—A. The attorneys requested $10,000 and the receiver $6,000 or $6,500; I do not recall the exact amount.

Q. In open court upon the hearing of that application, did the creditors consent to the payment of those amounts?—A. Yes, sir; those allowances were made by us after several conferences with the creditors, and made at their suggestion as to a reasonable fee to ask for.

Q. Mr. Wainwright was the representative of the largest unsecured creditor?—A. He was.

Q. And Mr. Ross was the representative of the Waukesha Co., the next largest unsecured creditor?—A. He was.

Q. Were both of them present in court at the time of the application for fees?—A. I believe so.

Q. And did they, as well as the other creditors present, consent to the allowance of $10,000 as attorney fees, and $6,500 as fees of the receiver?—A. Absolutely.

Q. And after their consent, what order did the court make?—A. It allowed the attorneys $6,000 and to the receiver $4,500.

Q. Did anyone except Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel receive any part or portion of that fee?—A. No, sir.

Q. No division of any part or portion was made to Judge Louderback or anyone else?—A. Absolutely not.

Q. By the way, did Mr. LaGuardia, when in San Francisco, examine the bank accounts of Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel?—A. He did.

Q. Were they all turned over to him, together with the vouchers and checks?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that before the hearing which took place subsequently in San Francisco?—A. Prior to the hearing and during the pendency of the hearing at San Francisco.

Q. Did you at that time furnish to him all information and all data relating to your bank accounts that he requested?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In either the Sonora Phonograph matter or the Golden State Asparagus matter, was there any litigation?—A. There was no litigation in the Sonora Phonograph Co. There was some in the Golden State Asparagus Co.

Q. How many suits did you commence in the Golden State Asparagus Co. case?—A. I think, up to the present time, five.

Q. Did at least one of them go to trial?—A. Yes, sir; one case was tried before Judge St. Sure in the Federal court at San Francisco.

Q. Did your firm try it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did that result in a judgment in favor of the receiver?—A. It did, sir.

Q. For how much money?—A. Seventeen-odd thousand dollars.

Q. In that matter did you employ, or did the receiver under your instructions employ, a firm of accountants to make an audit?—A. We employed a firm of accountants in the Fageol Motor Co. matter.

Q. Who was that firm of accountants?—A. Lybrand, Ross Bros. & Montgomery.

Q. At whose suggestion or request did you employ those accountants?—A. At the suggestion of Mr. Wainwright, of the bank, and at my own suggestion.

Q. When you employed those accountants, did you have any understanding with them as to what the maximum charge or fee was to be?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it?—A. Not to exceed $5,000.

Q. Did you take that up with Mr. Wainwright representing the creditors, and did it meet with his approval?—A. It did.

Q. Subsequently a bill for how much was received from those accountants?—A. Some fifteen and odd thousand dollars.

Q. Did you oppose the bill?—A. When the bill was submitted, the equity receivership had terminated—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Answer the question "yes" or "no", and then explain if you care to.

The WITNESS. Yes.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. After the Fageol Motor Co. went into bankruptcy and Mr. Street was appointed as receiver, did you cooperate with him in opposing that bill?—A. I did.

Q. The other receivership matter in which you represented the receiver was the Prudential Holding Co.?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Gilbert was the receiver in that matter?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did that receivership last?—A. About a month or 6 weeks.

Q. Did you take any part in the proceedings made to dismiss the receivership?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you apply for or did you receive any compensation in that matter?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did the receiver apply for or receive any compensation in that matter?—A. No, sir.

Q. Then, am I correct in saying that the only compensation you ever received in any matters under appointment by Judge Louderback, where you represented the receiver, was in the three matters you have already referred to?—A. That is correct.

Mr. LINFORTH. You may take the witness.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I submit two interrogatories dealing with the fee of $20,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the interrogatories.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. Was the reasonable value of the legal services of your firm worth the amount allowed, $20,000?

The WITNESS. In my opinion it was, sir.

Q. What was the provision of the statute which you state authorized the payment of $20,000?

The WITNESS. The Senator misunderstood my answer. There is no provision in the statute providing for compensation to attorneys for receivers or trustees. The reference I made is that the receiver's compensation in that case was pursuant to the bankruptcy act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The managers on the part of the House may cross-examine.

Cross-examination by Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Mr. Dinkelspiel, what other cases, representing receiverships in other courts than Judge Louderback's, has your firm been in since your father's death?—A. We represented the receiver in the American Radio Stores, a case before Judge St. Sure.

Q. Who was the receiver?—A. Bartley C. Crum. We represented a case of Hirsh Millinery Co., where the receiver was Morris Rodgers, appointed by Judge Kerrigan.

Q. What were your fees in each of those cases?—A. The fees in the American Radio Stores were some $2,000, as I recall at the present time.

Q. And in the other case?—A. I do not recall, Mr. BROWNING.

Q. Who knows that?—A. The court records would show it. I have not refreshed my memory on it for some time.

Q. It was less than $2,000, was it not?—A. I believe so.

Q. How long did the Sonora Phonograph Co. case last?—A. Seven months, approximately; 6 or 7 months.

Q. This concern was conducted for a part of that time as a going business?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What other attorneys assisted in the conduct of this receivership?—A. In California?

Q. Yes.—A. None, except in one or two instances or several instances, the exact number I do not recall, where we engaged counsel in various cities of California and on the Pacific coast to assist in the collection of accounts.

Q. They were paid out of the estate?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there a single claim in that case that went to litigation?—A. No, sir.

Q. And you attended to all the work yourself?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you get into that case, Mr. Dinkelspiel?—A. We were requested by an attorney in New York City, who represented certain creditors, to file a petition for the appointment of an ancillary receiver in California.

Q. Were you a member of an association or some list of collection attorneys that brought you that business?—A. No, sir.

Q. How did you get your connection with this concern?—A. I assume they knew of our firm. We are representatives in San Francisco in several law lists.

Q. What date did you receive your fee in that case?—A. The fee was allowed in two parts, one in May of 1930, and the balance of $5,000 in July of 1930.

Q. Your correspondent who requested you to file this petition for ancillary receiver was also in this same law list, was he not?—A. I do not know.

Q. Are you not acquainted with the lists in which you are listed?—A. No, sir; we are listed in probably 25 or 30. He possibly knew our firm from the Commercial Law League of America, of which at one time my father was president, and was prominent in its activities.

Q. Do you not know that is how you got it?—A. I do not know how we got it; no, sir. I assume by reason of the facts I have given you that our firm was known to the attorney in New York City.

Q. Did this correspondent of yours ever ask for a portion of this fee?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did he not ask you for a third of it under the commercial regulations as to the division of fees?—A. No, sir.

Q. Or no part of it?—A. We understood at one time—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Answer that "yes" or "no" and then explain afterward.

The WITNESS. He never asked for it. May I explain?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Yes; go ahead and explain.—A. It had been customary, and still is customary, when legal matters are forwarded from these law lists which I have described, that the receiving attorney is entitled to two thirds of the fee which may be allowed, and the forwarding attorney one third. We assumed at that time that it would be proper, in view of the custom, that he would receive one third of any fee which we were to obtain. During the course of that administration the United States Supreme Court rendered a decision frowning upon that procedure, and on the strength of that decision we advised him that, regardless of whether he anticipated receiving a fee from us or not, he was not to receive any, and there never was any division of fee with that party.

Q. Was your father living at the time you filed this petition?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much of your time each day did you put in in the administration of this receivership during that 6 months?—A. I would approximate 3 or 4 or 5 hours a day. It is all set forth in a verified petition with the court papers, Mr. BROWNING.

Q. The last appropriation that was made to you was contested by every interest in the case except the receiver, was it not, and especially by the Irving Trust Co.?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the Golden State Asparagus Co. case, Mr. Fox and Mr. Richter were just as active as your firm in the administration of that receivership, were they not?—A. Absolutely not.

Q. You do know that they stopped the forced sale—A. They did not.

Q. (Continuing.) Of the property, before you were appointed as attorney in the case?—A. They did not.

Q. When were you appointed?—A. We were appointed on—I have forgotten the exact date in September 1930.

Q. How many days after Mr. Edwards was appointed as receiver were you appointed?—A. I think 1 or 2 days.

Q. You do know that the forced sale was stopped the day he was appointed, do you not?—A. I know that the president of the bank told us that he would have no further dealings with Mr. Fox, and it was through our efforts that the sale was continued.

Q. Although it was 2 days before you were appointed that the sale was actually stopped, you are willing to say that now?—A. No, sir; the sale was, as I recall it, noticed to be held 2 days thereafter. Prior to the receivership a sale had been noticed, and the bank decided sufficient notice had not been given. It accordingly readvertised the sale to be held after the appointment of Mr. Edwards as receiver.

Q. And that was the day he was appointed?—A. No, sir; after, as I recall.

Q. Do you mean to say now that it was after you were appointed as the attorney?—A. That the sale was to take place; yes, sir, as I recall it at this time.

Q. You also know that Mr. Fox and Mr. Richter and their firm were very active in helping prepare all these leases and transactions you have described as coming within your services in the case?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did they do any part of it?—A. We prepared every lease that is described.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Answer the question.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Did they do any part of it?—A. Simply consulted with us after we had prepared the leases.

Q. But you did consult with them about all of these transactions?—A. Absolutely.

Q. And got their advice on it?—A. We submitted it to see if it would be satisfactory to them and if they had any suggestions to make.

Q. And you had their full cooperation?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you been paid your fee of $14,000?—A. Been paid $5,000.

Q. Why have you not been paid it all?—A. Because we did not feel that in view of the present economic conditions it would warrant drawing out any more money from the company.

Q. Was there any in there to draw out?—A. There was a potential amount at that time, but since the allowance was made the price of asparagus has dropped from 4 cents a pound to 2 cents a pound.

Q. Can you pay fees out of potential matters?—A. Yes, sir; we anticipated that the crop which had been harvested or was ready to be sold at that time would be sold at the then existing market price.

Q. What they had for sale was asparagus, was it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you could not take your fee in asparagus, of course?—A. We do not expect to, sir.

Q. In the Fageol Motors case, what were the assets of that concern, do you recall?—A. The assets were in excess of a million dollars in round figures.

Mr. KING. If I am not violating any rule, I wish to inquire what was the case to which counsel referred?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. The Fageol Motors Co.

Q. What was the nature of their business?—A. Automobile assembling and manufacturing plant.

Q. Did it have an extensive business up and down the Pacific coast?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many States did it stretch over?—A. Washington, Oregon, Utah, and California principally.

Q. They not only manufactured bodies and other parts of automobiles but they had an assembling plant, did they not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they had sales agencies and service also?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did this receivership last?—A. From February 17, 1932, until some time in July of 1932.

Q. How much of your time did you devote to that concern?—A. I should say on an average of half a day for 4 or 5 days a week.

Q. For how many months?—A. During the first part of the receivership, not so much after we had the thing running along.

Q. How long do you count "the first part of the receivership"?—A. About 3 months.

Q. And after that time what part of your time did you devote to the business?—A. I cannot say offhand, Mr. BROWNING. May I refer you to the account which we filed?

Q. Can you approximate it?—A. I would not dare do that, sir.

Q. But you did have something to do with it every day?—A. Practically every day; yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any litigation?—A. We filed some suits for the company.

Q. How many?—A. I think three direct suits as such.

Q. Did they go to trial?—A. Two of them did.

Q. And were they on matters of collection?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you successful in those suits?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much did you recover for the concern?—A. Several hundred dollars; they were small matters.

Q. Do you know how much money came into the hands of the receiver in this case?—A. I would not give an opinion on it. The records will show that.

Q. Approximately how much? You gave the amount in some of these other cases. Are you not as familiar with this one as with the other cases?—A. No; I am not, without referring to the records. I have a notation in my file, and if I might refer to that I could give it.

Q. Please refer to it.—A. (After examining file.) The receiver collected approximately $120,000 in accounts receivable and liquidated about $150,000 of the inventory.

Q. That was about $270,000 that he, in fact, handled?—A. Converted into cash, I am referring to, sir.

Q. Yes. Now, in comparison to the other receivership, in the Sonora Phonograph case, did you do as much work in this one as you did in that?—A. About the same.

Q. And did you do as much work in this as you did in the Golden State Asparagus case?—A. No, sir.

Q. You did not do as much in this?—A. Well, probably about the same; it is hard to say exactly.

Q. This was straight liquidation, was it not?—A. Are you referring to the Fageol Motors case?

Q. Yes.—A. No, sir.

Q. It was a going concern and operated during the receivership?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Golden State Asparagus case is a going concern?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. There is no liquidation about it?—A. No, sir.

Q. You say the employment of these accountants was agreed to by Mr. Wainwright?—A. May I recount the circumstances of that, sir?

Q. Yes.—A. Two or three days after the receiver was appointed we received a report or statement from a man named Crook, who had been an accountant of the company.

Mr. Wainwright brought that to my office and we discussed it together and decided that it was absolutely no good to us in determining any sort of a policy in connection with the company. We decided that it would be necessary to engage reputable accountants to handle the work. I discussed the matter with Mr. Bronson, who represented the defendant company, and he approved of the suggestion, stating that the cost would not be too great. I asked him if he had any suggestion as to whom to employ. He said "no." I then interviewed 2 or 3 or 4 people in reference to prices in connection with the work. I finally determined, on behalf of Mr. Gilbert, that Lybrand, Ross Bros. & Montgomery, who, I understand, are one of the largest accountant firms in the United States, be employed for the reason that they had branches in every city where the company had branches. They submitted a certain statement to me of what the charge would be, and we agreed that it would be about $5,000. I said that the ultimacy would have to be subject to the approval of the court, but I wanted to understand about what the charge would be at the present time. I submitted that to Mr. Wainwright, and he approved it.

Q. What did you tell the auditor that you wanted in the way of a report; just what information did you want?—A. We had to have a comprehensive balance sheet, the segregation of the accounts receivable, and the segregation of commercial accounts receivable that had been assigned and discounted with various finance companies.

Q. What you were after was a balance sheet?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have a definite contract with these people that the charge was not to exceed $5,000?—A. As I explained to you, it was agreed between us that the fee would be around $5,000, but I specifically put in the order that any allowance to them would be made subject to the approval of the court, which I felt was a sufficient safeguard against any overcharge.

Q. Then you did not have any agreement with them at all, except that the court would fix the fees for the auditor. Is that right?—A. No, sir; I had an agreement with them; I had an understanding with them.

Q. Why did you leave it to the court?—A. Because I knew that any agreement in an equity receivership must be subject to the court's approval. I had no authority to engage them, and I had no authority to bind them as to any particular fee.

Q. But you did not put into the order "not to exceed $5,000", did you?—A. No, sir.

Q. You did tell Mr. Wainwright and Mr. Bronson that the fee would not exceed $5,000?—A. Yes, sir. That was my understanding.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. May the Chair inquire what was finally paid in that case?

Mr. BROWNING. Will the witness answer?

The WITNESS. I do not know, sir, because I was not interested in the case when it came up; it was compromised; I know that.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. The record does show that it was $11,000 or $12,000 was it not?—A. I do not know; I know there was a compromise.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, I do not think that counsel should make a statement not in accord with the record of the testimony. It was reduced to $6,000 or $7,000.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. Peterson testified, in chief here, that it was between $11,000 and $12,000, and put it in the record, and it is in the record here now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the witness does not know, he need not answer.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. You say you had a lawsuit in the Golden State Asparagus case in which you made a recovery. What was the nature of that case?—A. When the receiver was appointed it appeared that the Golden State Co. had advanced some $15,000 to a man named Neilson, who is president of the Golden State Asparagus Co. Neilson was in partnership with two other people. We discussed the situation with Mr. Richter, who was attorney for the company, and Mr. Richter advised us that the Golden State Co., and, therefore, the receiver, had no claim other than a partnership accounting. We checked into this situation on our own account and advised the receiver, against Mr. Richter's advice, that, in our opinion, we had a claim for moneys advanced and that the Golden State Co. was not a partner of this other outfit and when we could not obtain a settlement from them filed suit in the Federal court, which was heard before Judge St. Sure, and judgment was rendered in the receiver's favor for the sum of seventeen-odd thousand dollars.

Q. Mr. Dinkelspiel, why did you not apply for a fee in the Prudential Holding Co. case?—A. Because I checked into the law and I found, in view of the order made by Judge Louderback abandoning the receivership, that we had no legal right to do so.

Q. You mean by that that the court could not allow a fee for the services you had already rendered?—A. No; in view of the court's order invalidating its order appointing a receiver; no, sir. I checked the law on that and I believe I am correct in my conclusion; otherwise, though the services rendered were not very great, I should have filed an application.

Q. Then, your understanding of the law is that when the judge or any court invalidates the appointment of a receiver he is entitled to no compensation?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was the first information you had of the origin of the Prudential Holding Co. case?—A. Mr. Gilbert called me and said he had been appointed receiver.

Q. What was the first case you were in with Mr. Gilbert?—A. The Sonora Phonograph Co. case.

Q. How did he happen to select you as attorney in that case?—A. He was named by Judge Louderback, and we requested of Judge Louderback that we be retained in that case as counsel for Mr. Gilbert and the Irving Trust Co. as coreceivers. The judge, I imagine, instructed Mr. Gilbert to do so.

Q. Whom do you mean by "we"?—A. I am referring to our firm, sir.

Q. Was your father living at that time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was really the head of the firm?—A. Yes; at that time, sir.

Q. Who else were members of the firm at that time?—A. My brother and myself.

Q. Did you personally know Mr. Gilbert before that time?—A. No, sir.

Q. Where did you first meet him?—A. Either at my office or at the chambers of the judge.

Q. When Mr. Gilbert went to the chambers of the judge and qualified, were you there?—A. I do not recall, sir. It was 3 years ago, and I do not remember where I did first meet Mr. Gilbert. It was either out there or at my office.

Q. In that first conversation Mr. Gilbert told you that he expected to appoint John Douglas Short, did he not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you told him that you were to be appointed?—A. We expected to be appointed; yes, sir.

Q. Well, who else did he talk to before he made the recommendation of you to the court, except you?—A. I have no idea.

Q. Did he make a recommendation then and there when you first talked to him? Did he sign the petition for your appointment at that time?—A. No, sir.

Q. How long after that did he sign it?—A. I would say within 24 or 48 hours; I do not recall the exact time, sir.

Q. Did he come to your office and sign the petition?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You drew it for him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you get the notice that you were to be the attorney in the Fageol Motors case?—A. Through Mr. Gilbert.

Q. Did he call you or come to see you?—A. I believe he phoned me and then came down to my office.

Q. What time of day did he phone you?—A. I think it was some time early in the afternoon.

Q. Would you say before 2 o'clock?—A. I would not say. It was around that hour. I could not say. I made no note of the hour.

Q. What time did you qualify?—A. I would say about 3 o'clock. I would say about an hour after he phoned, and I believe he came down to my office about an hour after that.

Q. You and he went to the judge's chambers then together?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were advised that you were to be appointed, and you had the orders drawn?—A. I assumed I would be appointed when Mr. Gilbert called me and asked me to act, and I prepared the orders and asked him, as I remember it, to come to my office, and that we would arrange to obtain the necessary bond for his qualification and such other papers as are necessary to properly qualify a receiver.

Q. You then went to the judge's chambers before you went to the clerk's office to qualify?—A. You cannot qualify in the clerk's office until you go to the judge's chambers and have the judge approve the bond.

Q. I ask if you did not go to the judge's chambers before you went to the clerk's office to qualify?—A. Yes, sir; to have the bond approved.

Q. Did the judge at that time sign the order to approve the bond?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you took it to the clerk's office and qualified?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The first thing you did after that was to call Mr. Bronson, was it not?—A. I took a taxicab to my office and phoned Mr. Roy Bronson.

Q. He asked you at that time if Gilbert had already qualified?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you told him that he had?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he tell you why he asked you that?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did he then make an engagement with you to talk to you about the case?—A. I asked him if I could make an appointment with him for that afternoon, and he advised me it was too late in the afternoon and we would make it for the morning. There were 5 or 6 various interests involved, and he made an engagement, as I recall, for 11 o'clock the following morning.

Q. To refresh your memory, did he not request you at that time for a conference, and you told him you could not see him until next morning?—A. No, sir. To the best of my recollection, I asked him for a conference that afternoon, and, to the best of my recollection, he said it was too late that afternoon, that we would make it in the morning. I may be mistaken, but that is the very best of my recollection.

Q. You did have a conference the next morning?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Gilbert went with you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. These men at that time cross-examined Mr. Gilbert on his qualifications for this work?—A. Very thoroughly.

Q. They told him they found him thoroughly incompetent so far as his experience and his attitude were concerned?—A. I did not hear them make any statement to his face to that effect, sir.

Q. Not to that effect?—A. No, sir. They merely asked questions in regard to his various qualifications and activities, to which he answered, and what conclusion of mind they came to I do not know because to the best of my recollection they did not express it so I could understand it.

Q. Do you not know they told him that his responses did not satisfy them at all, or his qualifications?—A. No, sir; I do not recall them having made that statement.

Q. Or that in substance?—A. No, sir.

Q. At that time they asked you and asked him to agree, if he stayed in, to let the creditors' committee run the estate, did they not?—A. Not in that language; no, sir. They asked us to cooperate with them.

Q. What did you understand by that?—A. At that particular moment I did not understand it until I had a conversation at 2 o'clock that afternoon with Mr. Wainwright.

Q. What did he state in that conversation?—A. He advised me that he was very disappointed at first in the appointment of Mr. Gilbert, but that he felt satisfied after attending the meeting that morning. His exact language was that he was afraid of the appointment of a stranger; that he had been interested, or his bank had been interested, in another case in Oakland where another receiver had been appointed, and, in his language, the receiver had run roughshod over the creditors and that they had had an awful time managing the receiver, but that with the assurance of Mr. Gilbert and ourselves that we would work together with them and be guided by such suggestions as they had, he would be satisfied.

Q. In fact, he asked you to consent then and there to let them run the receivership, in effect, did he not?—A. No, sir; absolutely not.

Q. But at that time you did agree to do everything they asked you to about the estate?—A. Certainly. They were the parties in interest and we wanted to work along with them.

Q. They told you then there would not be any big fees in this case if it stayed in receivership?—A. They asked about the fees and we said, "Gentlemen, you need not worry, because before any application for fees be made we will submit the matter to you and have you pass upon it."

Q. They insisted there would not be any big fees in that case if it stayed in receivership?—A. There was no insistence. There was no enmity of any kind. It was a gentlemen's discussion and we met them voluntarily in answer to their questions. There was no insistence on their part, though.

Q. You do not consider that you made an agreement at that time to keep the fees below the ordinary fees allowed in matters of this kind?—A. We only discussed the matter of fees as I pointed out; that we would take it up with them when the proper time came.

Q. You made no other assurance than that about the fees?—A. No; not as far as I can recall.

Q. Do you not know at that time you and Mr. Gilbert agreed that they should employ a man who knew the business and send him out there to have active charge of it?—A. At that time, no, sir; absolutely not at that time.

Q. At what time did you do it?—A. That afternoon Mr. Wainwright and Mr. Gilbert and myself went over to Oakland. Another creditor was to come, but did not appear. We went over the situation in a hurried manner and found out at that time that the president of the company, a man named Bill, had as his assistant and sales manager his son, who was drawing, in our opinion, a high salary and had run the company behind the previous year some $700,000. We decided the first thing to do was to put in a new manager, and that, therefore, if we let the so-called "Bill family" go, we would have to get someone else in. Mr. Wainwright said, "I can recommend an excellent man to you", which he did, and that man was Mr. Lundstrom. Meanwhile certain other creditors recommended a Mr. McKenzie. Mr. Gilbert and I interviewed both of them, and finally we discussed the matter together and with Mr. Wainwright, and in view of Mr. Wainwright's nomination of Mr. Lundstrom we determined to take him and let the Bill family go.

Q. At that time you did employ Mr. Lundstrom and put him in full charge of the business?—A. No, sir. He was employed a week afterwards.

Q. After you did employ him, you put him in charge of the business?—A. I should not say full charge.

Q. What did you give him to do out there? What authority did he have?—A. I was not out there very much myself, and it would be difficult to answer; but I believe he had charge of the manufacturing and assembling and to some extent of the sales.

Q. What else was there to do and have charge of?—A. There is quite considerable work to do.

Q. I mean what other branch of the industry was there to have charge of?—A. It was determined by Mr. Gilbert, when he stepped in there, together with the cooperation of the other creditors, that as a matter of economy, the branches at Los Angeles, at Seattle, at Tacoma, at Portland, and at Salt Lake City should be immediately closed.

Q. Who determined that?—A. I think Mr. Wainwright and Mr. Lundstrom and Mr. Gilbert and myself had a meeting.

Q. Who suggested it?—A. I could not say.

Q. Do you not know that Mr. Gilbert never made the suggestion?—A. I know that it was Mr. Gilbert's suggestion that the Bills be removed from the business, and it was a valuable suggestion.

Q. I am talking not about the Bill family but about the suggestion of closing those branches. Do you not know Mr. Gilbert never made that suggestion?—A. I do not know. I could not say yes or no.

Q. Do you not recall that Mr. Wainwright was the man that actually suggested it, and you took his suggestion?—A. I do not think that is absolutely true. I do not know how many suggestions Mr. Wainwright made and how many Mr. Gilbert made, but we were all meeting together on and off and discussing the situation as best we could.

Q. Tell me one suggestion Mr. Gilbert made about the conduct of the business, an independent suggestion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That you know of.

The WITNESS. As I recall, Mr. Gilbert suggested to me in reference to the discount companies who owned some $800,000 worth of contracts which the company had previously discounted, that we enter into an agreement with them whereby we would be allowed to resell the motor trucks which had been repossessed, charging the finance company the expense of resale and the expense of repair. That meant a great deal to the company.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. You do not know whether Mr. Wainwright suggested that to Mr. Gilbert before he suggested it to you, do you?—A. No; I cannot say that.

Q. What had been Mr. Gilbert's previous experience before this appointment?—A. He told me he was with the Western Union Co.

Q. The Western Union Telegraph Co.?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you not know that throughout the Sonora receivership he worked regularly for the Western Union Telegraph Co.?—A. I know it, because he told it to me; yes, sir.

Q. When he began in the Fageol Motor Co. case he also retained for some time or at that time did have his connection with the Western Union?—A. I understand, at the time he became receiver of the Fageol Motor Co. he resigned his position with the Western Union Co.

Q. Do you know whether he resigned or whether he was fired?—A. I know he was not fired. I understand he resigned.

Q. Was there any trouble between him and the company?—A. I did not know of any.

Q. Do you not know he had to take his choice between that and this?—A. I do not know anything about it.

Q. How do you know he was not fired?—A. Possibly I do not, but as I stated before I do not know anything about the fact he was working for them other than he told me.

Q. But you did say you knew he was not fired?—A. Yes, sir; that is what he told me.

Q. Was he in the operating part of the Western Union or in the business part of it?—A. I cannot answer anything about it, because it is all hearsay about what he told me.

Q. What did he tell you he was doing in the Western Union Telegraph Co.?—A. I think he was traffic manager, night traffic manager, as I recall.

Q. Who were the parties that brought the suit that resulted in this ancillary receivership?—A. In which case is that?

Q. The Fageol Motors Co.—A. I do not understand the question.

Q. I mean the Sonora Phonograph Co. case.—A. The Arrow Parts Electric Co., as I recall.

Q. Who were the lawyers?—A. A lawyer named Robert I. Blum, of New York City.

Q. You say the first you heard of the Prudential Holding Co. case was when Mr. Gilbert called you and asked you to represent him as his attorney when he was to be appointed receiver?—A. That is my recollection; yes, sir.

Q. Do you know Kearsley, from Los Angeles, the attorney in that case?—A. I do now; yes, sir.

Q. Do you know James H. Stephens, who was named a vice president of the company at that time?—A. I do, sir.

Q. You knew him at that time, too, did you not?—A. No, sir.

Q. In fact, Mr. Kearsley and Mr. Stephens came to your office before the petition was filed to talk to you about it, did they not?—A. They talked to me. They met in my office.

Q. What day?—A. I think the morning they went out to court.

Q. Was it that day or the day before? Are you certain?—A. No; I am not certain. I do not know.

Q. Did Blum send you down the petition in the Sonora Phonograph case?—A. What do you mean by sending down?

Q. A draft of the petition that was to be filed for ancillary receivership.—A. No; not that I recall. We prepared our own petition.

Q. Did you see Kearsley and Stephens either the morning that the petition was filed at your office, or the day before?—A. I do not remember having met them.

Q. But you do recall that they were there?—A. I remember that they came into my office, but I do not remember personally having met them.

Q. What purpose did they come in there for?—A. Mr. Kearsley phoned and said he had an appointment with Mr. Stephens and asked if he could use our office. We had done court business with their firm in Los Angeles.

Q. And they left your office and went to apply for the receivership?—A. I assume so.

Q. After the receivership was granted, you went with Gilbert to the office of the concern in Oakland?—A. That afternoon. It was Saturday afternoon.

Q. How soon after the petition was filed did you qualify as attorney for the receiver?—A. I do not know when the petition was filed, but we qualified about—it was after 12 o'clock of that day, of Saturday.

Q. And you got to Oakland before 1, did you not?—A. I do not know. It takes 40 minutes to go from San Francisco to Oakland. I know that Judge Louderback had gone for the day. We qualified before the United States commissioner, and we proceeded immediately to Oakland. Just the exact time, I cannot say.

Q. You saw Mr. Hawkins out there that day; did you?—A. No, sir.

Q. You did see him on Monday following?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You saw Miss Lind out there that day?—A. I assumed that is who she was. I did not know her at that time.

Q. You saw the lady who was the secretary of the concern?—A. I found out later she was the secretary. I did not know it at that time.

Q. She had in a long-distance telephone call, and requested to remain until she could complete that, to Mr. Hawkins, the attorney in Los Angeles, did she not?—A. I do not remember that.

Q. You do not remember her requesting that she remain for that?—A. No, sir.

Q. You do recall that?—A. I do not. It is not a question of recalling. I do not remember; yes or no. I will not deny that she may have done it.

Q. But you do recall that she was asked to vacate, and a padlock was put on the door?—A. Well, it was not as severe as that, sir. What happened was, it was a Saturday afternoon; there was no business, and Mr. Gilbert asked me what he should do to take control of the business and protect himself, having been appointed as receiver. I suggested to him the only thing that could be done, in view of the fact that we were to meet Mr. Hawkins on the following Monday, and no business would take place between that time, would be to have the lock on the door changed, and leave the business in status quo.

Q. And you were advised at that time—you and Mr. Gilbert—that there were three other corporations that had their offices in that same room and on that same floor?—A. We were either advised at that time or the following Monday.

Q. When you saw Mr. Hawkins on Monday he made the contention to you that the receivership was absolutely void at that time, did he not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he warned you that you were trespassers?—A. Not exactly that.

Q. What did he tell you about it?—A. He talked something about the violation of the fourth amendment of the United States Constitution, which I did not understand, and then he said that he thought he would move to set aside the receivership on that ground. I advised him that he was certainly within his rights; that I would do nothing to prevent it. He said he could not determine that until he spoke to a Mr. Beck, who, he advised me, was president of the company, and who, I understood, was in Idaho or Montana.

Q. But you do know the assets of this concern were turned over under more or less violent protest from the attorney and from the officials of the concern?—A. As a matter of fact, sir, there were no assets.

Q. Had it not been alleged in the petition that it was worth over a million dollars?—A. I knew nothing about the allegations. I only am telling you what I found.

Q. You were attorney for the receiver, and you did not know the allegations in the petition?—A. I knew them; but the allegations may or may not have been true. I am merely recounting to you what I found when I appeared at the Prudential Holding Co.'s place of business.

Q. You do know that after the dismissal of the receivership this concern operated for several months after that time without any legal interference?—A. I do not know anything about it, but I do not know what they could have operated on.

Q. They had a lot of real estate; did they not?—A. They had four pieces of real estate, all of which were under foreclosure or subject to an attachment lien.

Q. Do you mean that there was actual foreclosure in process at that time?—A. Subsequently I was named one of the attorneys for the receiver in bankruptcy, and the only work I did was to petition the court for restraining orders to try to protect the equities in those properties.

Q. You were named as receiver in bankruptcy of this concern?—A. One of the attorneys for the receiver.

Q. Who named you there?—A. Judge Louderback.

Q. How many days was that before the dismissal of this equity receivership?—A. I do not know. I do not have the dates in my mind, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, it was on the 30th day of September that you were named, was it not, as attorney for the receiver in bankruptcy?—A. Well, if you say it was, that is the date. I do not know the dates.

Q. And you qualified on October 2?—A. Whatever the records will show. I do not recall the dates.

Q. Who was appointed receiver in bankruptcy in that case?—A. Mr. Gilbert.

Q. By whom was he appointed?—A. By Judge Louderback.

Q. Did you draw the petitions in those appointments also?—A. No, sir; I do not recall that we did. As a matter of fact, our firm was not named as attorneys for Mr. Gilbert in that proceeding. The firm of Torregano & Stark were named as his attorneys, and A. B. Kreft, and they requested that a member of our firm be joined with them because of our knowledge of the conditions; and my brother, Martin J. Dinkelspiel, I believe alone, appears as attorney. The firm does not appear; and the only active part we took was, as I stated, in trying to prevent the foreclosures of these valuable equities in real estate.

Q. I thought you said a while ago that they did not have any assets to protect.—A. They did not, but we made the best effort we could to find some assets.

Q. You now say they were "valuable equities", do you not?—A. Well, I change the word "valuable", because they had no value.

Q. Why do you change it?—A. Possibly I meant the word facetiously; but there was no value to those properties.

Q. Mr. Dinkelspiel, how much of your testimony here before the Senate has been facetious?—A. None of it, sir.

Q. How do you explain that answer, then, that you made it facetiously?—A. I am sorry, sir; but I did not mean it in the sense of having any value.

Q. Was the Kreft that you mentioned the one who testified here yesterday before the Senate?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I think that is all, Mr. President.

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a question or two more, Mr. President.

Redirect examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Dinkelspiel, in the work of the attorneys for the receiver in the four matters that you refer to, did you also have the assistance and the cooperation of your brother Martin?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He also acted with you in each of those matters?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. With reference to the assets of this Prudential Holding Co., to your knowledge did the receiver get possession of anything tangible?—A. I think an amount less than $200 or $300 in the savings bank, and he collected some rents from the premises during the period of foreclosure, all of which rents were practically paid back for operating expenses, so that he turned back to the company some thousand dollars, I think it was.

Q. The bank that you refer to was where? In what State did you find a bank account of this concern?—A. In Reno, Nev.

Q. Was that the only bank account you could find that this $2,000,000 concern had?—A. To the best of my recollection.

Q. Mr. Hawkins was the regular attorney for this concern, was he?—A. I understand so.

Q. Did you have a talk with him as to whether or not the company had any assets, or whether it was bankrupt?—A. I talked with Mr. Hawkins on the Monday that I went to Oakland after the Saturday the receiver was appointed.

Q. What did he tell you at that time with reference to the financial condition of the company, if anything?—A. His conversation to me at that time was, "Well, what are you doing with an equity receivership in here?—What are you going to do with the assets?" I said, "Why?" He said, "There are no assets." He said, "The value of the entire firm here is worth about $250."

Mr. LINFORTH. I have no further questions.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all, Mr. Witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Call your next witness.

(The witness started to leave the stand.)

Mr. LINFORTH. May I recall Mr. Dinkelspiel on one matter?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. You desire to recall him for another question on redirect examination?

Mr. LINFORTH. Yes, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Proceed.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. There is one matter I overlooked, Mr. Dinkelspiel. Where is your brother Martin at the present time?—A. He is in San Francisco at the present time.

Q. Is he ill or otherwise?—A. He was operated on about 4 weeks ago, and was confined to the hospital for 2 weeks, and was just back to his office for the first time a few days prior to the time I left San Francisco to come to Washington.

Q. Is his condition such as to enable him to come here?—A. He was so advised by his doctor.

Q. That it was, or was not?—A. That it was—that his condition was such that he would not stand the trip.

Mr. LINFORTH. That is all.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. One more question, Mr. President.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Do you know anything about the "M" account to which your brother testified to Mr. LaGuardia in San Francisco last September, that was in the name of your father, or something of that kind?—A. I know he had an "M" account; yes, sir.

Q. What was that account?—A. An "M" account is a special account that some of the San Francisco banks have, that allows you to withdraw at any time and pays you interest during the period of deposit.

Q. That was not in the name of your firm, was it?—A. No; it was my father's own personal account.

Q. Is that account still in existence?—A. No; it is not in existence any more—I do not believe so. I could not answer you definitely.

Q. Do you know how long it ran?—A. No; I do not, sir.

Q. It was a savings account?—A. Yes.

Q. And you and your brother had no connection with it?—A. No; as far as—I had none. I do not know about my brother. I do not think so.

Q. You know it was revealed at that time that considerable amounts of money were taken out and put back into this account?—A. I do not recall at the time. I have not looked at it since I went over the account with Mr. LaGuardia. I went over all my records with him very carefully on two or three occasions, as you recall.

Q. Were you present when your brother testified?—A. At San Francisco?

Q. Yes. I do not mean now, in the open hearing. I mean before Mr. LaGuardia in special room 2093.—A. I do not recall being present. I went over there with him, but I do not think I was there. I am not sure, Mr. BROWNING.

Q. Let me read you a portion of that testimony:

Getting right down to the point—

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment, Mr. President. We object to the reading of any portion of what is called "that testimony", being some private investigation being made by Mr. LaGuardia before there was any hearing on behalf of the committee. If anything was said at that time which may be the basis of a question for impeachment, it should be put in the proper way; and that statement, or testimony, as it is called, should not be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If it is for the purpose of impeachment, the foundation has not yet been laid. Otherwise the Chair does not see the materiality of it.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. As a matter of explanation, I will say that Mr. LaGuardia, as a member of the committee, did have authority to swear witnesses and take proof on this direct question of the investigation of Judge Louderback. It is under that authority that he was acting. The witness was sworn and testified on that occasion. I am not inclined to press the matter, however, unless the Senate would care to hear it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Mr. Manager, does it pertain to the testimony given by this witness at a former hearing or some other witness?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. His brother.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks the objection is well taken.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Very well. That is all.

EXAMINATION OF G. H. GILBERT

Mr. LINFORTH. Please call Mr. G. H. Gilbert.

G. H. Gilbert, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Mr. LINFORTH. May I announce, Mr. President, that this witness, ever since he has been in Washington, has been suffering from neuritis in both knees; and it would be very difficult for him to stand.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, in view of the rule which we adopted requiring every witness to stand, and in view of the statement just made by the attorney for the respondent, I ask unanimous consent of the Members of the court that the rule be waived, and that the witness be permitted to be seated during the giving of testimony.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? If not, it is so ordered.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, while I am on my feet I suggest that the microphone be adjusted so that he can speak directly into the microphone.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. You may proceed with the examination.

Direct examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Gilbert, will you state your name and your residence?—A. Guy H. Gilbert, 1600 California Street, San Francisco.

Q. Have you any objection to stating your age?—A. None at all; 50 years old.

Q. Are you a married man?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Up to February 17, 1932, what was your business?—A. Night traffic manager for the Western Union Telegraph Co. at San Francisco.

Q. How long had you been an employee of the Western Union Telegraph Co.?—A. About 35 years.

Q. Covering your entire business life up to that time. Is that right?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you started with the Western Union Telegraph Co. in what position, and at what place?—A. As a clerk in Jacksonville, Ill.

Q. During the years that you were night manager of the traffic department of the Western Union Telegraph Co. where were you located?—A. At San Francisco.

Q. As traffic manager, did you have under your immediate supervision and control any other employees of the company?—A. I did.

Q. How many?—A. They ranged from 150 up.

Q. Up to how many?—A. Well, on special occasions, like Christmas Eve, or a heavy file of business, it would probably run 250 to 300.

Q. Would you state as briefly as possible the duties of night traffic manager of the Western Union Telegraph Co.?—A. My duties were organization, efficiency, economies, detailing the handling of traffic, taking care of emergencies that might arise, and directing about seven different departments.

Q. Did your duties require executive work?—A. They did; yes, sir.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, I suggest that this witness be asked to state what his duties were.

Mr. LINFORTH. The witness has answered, Mr. President.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I am directing now a general objection to this character of testimony. This is a key witness, and we suggest that the witness is being led beyond the requirements to elicit the testimony.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In other words, you object to the form of the question?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. That is right, yes; and to the form of the examination generally.

Mr. LINFORTH. The question may be withdrawn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. I think the objection is well taken as to a number of questions which the court has permitted right along.

Mr. LINFORTH. I will keep within the rule, Mr. President.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. While acting as night traffic manager for the Western Union Telegraph Co., what were your hours of duty?—A. Four p.m. to midnight.

Q. Are you acquainted with the respondent Judge Louderback?—A. I am.

Q. How long have you known Judge Louderback?—A. Fifteen or sixteen or seventeen years.

Q. Do you recall how you became acquainted with him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you state, briefly, how it was, without going into details?—A. I first met Judge Louderback when he was running for police judge in San Francisco. I became active in his campaign at that time, and I have met him frequently ever since.

Q. From then on have you been good friends with Judge Louderback?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you acquainted with Mr. W. S. Leake?—A. I am.

Q. How long have you been acquainted with Mr. Leake?—A. I would say from 15 to 20 years.

Q. Has he been a close friend of yours during that time?—
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has your wife been a patient of his?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is she a believer in the Christian Science faith or doctrine?—A. She is.

Q. Was that the reason—

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, I do not know the purpose of this examination and how far it is intended to go, but we suggest that until counsel has established the fact that Mr. Leake is a Christian Science healer, or however he desires to be designated, information as to the witness' wife's peculiar religious belief is not pertinent to this inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. I think the objection is well taken.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, merely for the benefit of the court, I desired at the outset to show the relations of the witness with Mr. Leake.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. I think one or two questions are enough along that line.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Have you, during your acquaintanceship with Mr. Leake, been a patient of his?—A. Yes, sir; to a limited extent.

Q. Mr. Gilbert, in the 5 years that Judge Louderback has been judge of the District Court of the Northern District, in how many cases have you been appointed receiver by him?—A. Four cases.

Q. In the 8 years that he was judge of the superior court of California were you appointed receiver by him in any case?—A. No, sir.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I could not hear the answer of the witness when he was asked as to how many times he had been appointed receiver.

Mr. KING. He stated in no cases while the respondent was judge of the State court.

Mr. LINFORTH. Shall I proceed?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes; proceed.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Did you ever meet the firm of Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel, or either one of them, prior to your appointment as receiver in the Sonora Phonograph case?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Do you know John Douglas Short?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you known him?—A. Since about 1928 or 1929. I do not recall the exact time.

Q. In the time that you have been acquainted with him in how many matters has he acted—and when I say "he" I mean he or the firm with which he is associated, Keyes & Erskine—in how many matters has he acted for you as attorney for the receiver?—A. One time only.

Q. To what matter do you refer?—A. The Stempel-Cooley bankruptcy case.

Q. Was that the only matter of employment by you, as receiver, of him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever employ him in any other matter?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. The fee allowed you as receiver in the case to which you have referred was how much?—A. $500.

Q. Who allowed that, what judge?—A. Referee Sheridan, of San Francisco.

Q. Were you appointed receiver in the Sonora Phonograph case, so called?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In that matter did Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel represent you as attorneys?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did that receivership last?—A. Approximately 7 months.

Q. What time did you devote to your duties of receivership in that matter, about? I do not intend that you shall be exact, but I want you to make it as brief as possible.—A. From about 8:30 in the morning to 3:30 in the afternoon every day.

Q. In round numbers, how much did you collect as receiver in that matter?—A. The total assets, you mean?

Q. I mean the amount of money you collected as receiver in the Sonora Phonograph matter.—A. Approximately $300,000.

Q. Did you operate that concern as a going business down to the time when you closed it out as receiver?—A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. What compensation was allowed you in that matter?—A. Sixty-eight hundred and some odd dollars.

Q. Was that amount determined by the statute?—A. Yes, sir; a statutory fee.

Q. What person fixed the fee, if you recall?—A. Well, it was heard before Judge Louderback. A petition for the statutory fees was heard before Judge Louderback.

Q. And the order was made by Judge Louderback?—A. Judge Louderback; yes, sir.

Q. In the Fageol Motor matter, were you the receiver appointed in that case?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Upon being appointed, did you suspend your service with the Western Union Telegraph Co.?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, we want the witness to tell what happened. We think this witness is being led beyond reason.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. I could not hear the question. I should like to have the last question read.

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. Upon being appointed, did you suspend your service with the Western Union Telegraph Co.?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. I think he may be permitted to answer this question, but I will ask counsel to desist asking leading questions following this question.

Mr. LINFORTH. May the question be again read?

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. Upon being appointed, did you suspend your service with the Western Union Telegraph Co.?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. He did not make the point clear. The point is whether this witness suspended his connection, or whether this witness was suspended.

Mr. LINFORTH. I withdraw the question and put it in another form, and try to meet the objection, Mr. Manager.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Upon your appointment as receiver in the Fageol Motor Co. matter, what, if anything, did you do with reference to your position with the Western Union Telegraph Co.?—A. I requested a furlough, and it was granted.

Q. For how long?—A. For 6 months.

Q. What time—and make this as brief as possible—did you devote to the work of receivership in the Fageol Motor Co. matter?—A. My entire time ranged from 8 to 15 hours a day.

Q. And what did you do in the way of executive work, if anything?—A. I was the directing head of the entire company. I took care of the matters of insurance, matters of policy, conferred with the creditors on all major matters, took care of the bonding of employees, particularly followed up on the matter of cash receipts and disbursements. I signed all the disbursement checks for all branches on the Pacific coast; allowed no one to write any checks except myself from the 10 branches along the coast, and I did everything that was required of the head of a company to do.

Q. Did you do anything in the way of discharging any of the employees or officers?—A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. Who, upon investigation, did you discharge?—A. I released the president and took over his duties, one of the auditors, the superintendent of the shop, consolidating his job with the engineer's position. I eliminated quite a number of clerks and various employees in various shops in the plant, and I cut down the stenographic department. In fact I made curtailments according to the amount of the business we were handling.

Q. And what was the salary of the president and his son whom you removed?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. We object to that. When this witness came into responsibility, the right of any employee of this concern to remain in a position of responsibility terminated, and what happened prior to his cutting expenses we do not believe has any pertinency whatever with reference to the administration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands the interrogatory to encompass that. May the Chair have the interrogatory read?

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. And what was the salary of the president and his son whom you removed?

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, the purpose is to show executive management by the witness, who is alleged in the articles to be an incompetent employee, and to show a substantial saving to the Fageol Motors Co. by the action of the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair wishes to make this remark before ruling. It does seem to the Chair that this inquisition is going far afield in many respects, and the Chair thinks probably the time of the Senate is being taken up a great deal with some details that are not necessary. However, some of it has been brought out by the presentation of the case on the other side. The Chair has that in mind, and, having that in mind, he is going to permit one or two questions along this line, but is going to sustain objection to them very shortly.

Mr. LINFORTH. May I be permitted to add, Mr. President, that in the examination of the witnesses this morning I have endeavored to be very brief; I have also endeavored to be very brief with this and all other witnesses.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will suggest to counsel how the course being pursued might lead on indefinitely, and, of course, the Chair is not going to permit that.

Mr. LINFORTH. I will make the examination as brief as possible. I ask that the question may be again read.

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. And what was the salary of the president and his son whom you removed?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Not to stress the point unduly, we submit that the president of the company was removed by operation of law; he was not removed by this receiver.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair holds that the objection is well taken and sustains it.

Mr. LINFORTH. May I then put this question? Did you then, as receiver, reemploy the president or his son or somebody else?—A. I did not reemploy the president or his son, but I did employ other persons, including Mr. Lundstrom.

Q. And that resulted, did it or did it not, in a saving; and if so, how much, to the company?—A. It resulted—

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Now, Mr. President, there is no objection whatever to this witness stating the salaries paid by him and, to be broad about it, we do not object to testimony as to the salaries paid under the old regime except to have in mind the difference between the concern operating unlimitedly and the concern operating under very great limitation under a receiver.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is not that a matter of argument rather than of admissibility? The Chair is going to overrule the objection.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. He is stating it as a matter of argument.

Mr. LINFORTH. May the question again be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question will again be read.

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. And that resulted, did it or did it not, in a saving; and if so, how much, to the company?

The WITNESS. It did result in a saving of $800 per month.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. In the matter of the compensation of yourself as receiver, what amount was applied for?—A. Six thousand dollars.

Q. And what amount was applied for by your counsel?—A. Ten thousand dollars.

Q. Were you present at the hearings had before Judge Wyman on the hearing on that application?—A. I was; yes, sir.

Q. Did all creditors at that time agree to that allowance?—A. There were one or two objections from small creditors, but the principal creditors had agreed to the amount.

Q. And upon that taking place, what amount did the court allow them?—A. It allowed me as receiver $4,500 and my attorneys $6,000.

Q. In any of these fees that you have received, did Judge Loudback participate to any extent whatever?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the reporter read the question?

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. In any of these fees that you have received, did Judge Loudback participate to any extent whatever?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is counsel confining the question to one specific case or embracing all of them?

Mr. LINFORTH. All of them. We are trying to save time by asking one general question.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I think that we will obtain economy of time in that way. I do not think it would take very much time to point out how those fees were allowed.

Mr. LINFORTH. May the question be read and the witness answer it?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question will be read.

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. In any of these fees that you have received, did Judge Loudback participate to any extent whatever?

The WITNESS. No, sir.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Did anyone except yourself require any part or portion of those fees?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any division with anyone of any part or portion of those fees?—A. There was not.

Mr. LINFORTH. You may take the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Cross-examination of the witness will proceed.

Cross-examination by Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. Mr. Gilbert, you have been a long time connected or were a long time connected with the Western Union Telegraph Co.?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. For thirty-odd years, I believe?—A. For nearly 35 years.

Q. Are you connected with that company now?—A. No, sir; I am not.

Q. What is your present employment?—A. I am not employed at present.

Q. Have you been employed since the winding up of your receivership matters?—A. No, sir; I have not.

Q. In the discharge of your duties with the telegraph company, were you engaged in the business of buying and selling for the company?—A. For the Western Union?

Q. Yes.—A. No, sir.

Q. Your business had to do with the physical operation of the plant and the transmission of communications, did it not?—A. Well, yes; it did principally. Of course, there were a great many detail matters of investigation, service complaints, and things of that sort, that I was called upon to detail.

Q. You mean that when somebody complained that a telegram had not been properly received it was your responsibility to ascertain the facts?—A. Yes, sir. If a complaint was filed against the company for any lack of service of any kind, and they wanted the details of the handling of it, or to form the basis of a lawsuit, or anything of that kind, if the telegram concerned me as to the handling of it between 4 o'clock and midnight, I was the one called upon to detail the traffic handling and to place the responsibility, and things of that sort.

Q. What other business did you have? What were your other duties in connection with this telegraph company?—A. General supervision over seven departments.

Q. I know, but that does not mean anything to us. What did you do about it?—A. Well, I had to see that the costs were kept down with the amount of business filed.

Q. The costs of what?—A. The costs of operation, the cost of handling telegrams.

Q. Did that have to do with the salaries of employees?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you have to do with the employment of the other employees who worked under you?—A. I was on the advisory board of the traffic manager's office.

Q. Will you answer my question?

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a minute. We protest, Mr. President, against interruption of the witness when he is endeavoring to answer the question.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Yes; but we submit he is endeavoring—I do not mean he is deliberately doing so—but he is endeavoring to answer the question not responsively. I asked him the very direct question as to whether—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks the comment is well taken and will ask the witness to answer directly.

By Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. Did you have to do with the—

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, if I may be permitted, I should like to submit a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee propounds a question, which will be read by the clerk.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Q. What salary did you get from the telegraph company for the past 5 years?

The WITNESS. Three thousand and sixty dollars a year.

By Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. Will you answer my question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let the Official Reporter read the question to the witness.

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. Did you have to do with the employment of the other employees who worked under you?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. That is the question to which I want an answer.

The WITNESS. I did not employ anyone; no, sir.

Q. Did you have the responsibility of discharging employees?—A. Not exactly of discharging them, but of referring them to my superior officer in case they were not satisfactory.

Q. You made complaint to your superior officers with reference to inefficiency of service?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any business on the side, any additional business, or other business, than that of an employee of the telegraph company?—A. Well, I did some speculating in real estate, but that is the only thing.

Q. To what extent did you have experience in the real-estate market?—A. Well, I had been personally acquainted with some real-estate people who were speculators in real estate, and I became interested in that way. I bought and sold some real estate.

Q. How much in your 30 years—how many tracts?—A. Well, it is pretty hard to answer that question. I would say not over $10,000 worth, probably.

Q. Ten thousand dollars' worth in about 30 years. When you did that did you act upon your own responsibility as to real-estate values or take the judgment of the real-estate agencies through which you acted?—A. Both.

Q. In what other business did you engage?—A. Other than the receiverships that I have been connected with, I have no other business.

Q. I believe you stated that you were acquainted with Mr. Leake, Sam Leake?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you known him?—A. Fifteen or twenty years. I could not say just how long.

Q. I believe he designates himself as a mental healer or some such designation as that. Can you give us a more specific or correct designation of how Mr. Leake designates himself?—A. I think he refers to himself as a metaphysical student. Mr. Leake is a Christian Science practitioner.

Q. Is he recognized by the Christian Science organization as one of their practitioners?—A. I do not know.

Q. Do you not know he is not?—A. No; I do not know that he is not.

Q. Are you a patient or client, or whatever it is called, of his?—A. I have been to some extent.

Q. Members of your family?—A. Mrs. Gilbert has.

Q. Through how long a period of time?—A. Ever since I have known him, probably 15 years or so.

Q. Have you made any donations or payments to Mr. Leake for services?—A. Yes; I have occasionally.

Q. How much?—A. I have given Mr. Leake $5 at a time, occasionally.

Q. You gave him a check for $150 at one time, did you not?—A. I gave him a check of $150 at one time several years ago.

Q. I believe you say that the first employment under designation of the respondent was in the Stempel-Cooly case?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In that case you received a $500 fee?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Short was your attorney, Mr. John Douglas Short?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you consult Mr. Leake prior to the engagement of Mr. John Douglas Short as to his selection?—A. I did in this way, that I told Mr. Leake I had been appointed receiver and asked him if he could recommend anyone for an attorney for me. He stated that he had no particular choice in the matter, but he thought John Douglas Short would make a good attorney for me. I telephoned him there and went to his office and engaged him.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Short over the telephone that you contemplated engaging him and then went over to fix up the details with him?—A. I do not recall that. I asked if I could see him, if I remember correctly, and I went over to his office a very few minutes after that.

Q. Were you not pretty well acquainted with lawyers in San Francisco, or at least a number of them?—A. No; I would not say that I was. I have had no dealings with lawyers prior to that time.

Q. You did not have an independent attitude as to whom you should select?—A. Not in particular; no.

Q. Prior to this time you had served under appointment of Judge Louderback when he was a judge of the State court. You were acquainted with him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the style of that case?—A. Do I remember what?

Q. Do you remember the style of that case?—A. It was a probate matter.

Q. Was it in the Brickell case?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You served as an expert to appraise property, did you not?—A. I served as an appraiser.

Q. Do you know how much was involved in that estate?—A. I do not recall the amount.

Q. What did it consist of chiefly, just briefly?—A. The Brickell estate consisted principally of stocks in the Brickell Co., and the Brickell Co. holdings were principally real estate.

Q. You examined the stock and the real estate, did you?—A. No; I did not.

Q. You never saw a bit of the property, did you?—A. No; I did not.

Q. When the committee was in San Francisco you did not even remember the name of the estate or what it consisted of, did you?—A. No; I did not. I could not recall.

Q. You got a fee of $500?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do to earn that fee?—A. I was called to the office of the State inheritance-tax man, and I signed an appraiser's oath. He stated to me that he would call me after he had had time to look into the matter and see what further work we could do in it.

Q. Mr. Gilbert, are not these the facts, and did you not so testify in San Francisco—that you did not know what the estate was, you did not know what it consisted of, but the only thing you had to do was to sign your name?

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment. I submit, Mr. President, the witness was answering the question as to what he did when counsel interrupted him. I think he should be permitted, in all fairness, to finish the answer. If it does not agree with what he said in San Francisco, counsel should confront him with the record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Had you concluded your answer?

The WITNESS. No, sir.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Let him say anything else he wants to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let the question and answer be read.

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. What did you do to earn that fee?—A. I was called to the office of the State inheritance-tax man, and I signed an appraiser's oath. He stated to me that he would call me after he had had time to look into the matter and see what further work we could do in it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is that the conclusion of your answer?

The WITNESS. No, sir; it is not.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Proceed.

The WITNESS. I did not hear anything further from the State inheritance-tax collector until 4 or 5 months later. He called me to his office and said, "I have the inventories all prepared. I have gone into every detail of it." He said, "There is no occasion for duplication of work." So I signed the papers with him on his assurance to me that he had gone into all details in the matter.

By Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. I will ask you if this did not occur in San Francisco on the occasion of the presence of the special committee designated by the House of Representatives to investigate this matter. Were you not asked these questions, after having testified with reference to your selection in the Sonora case:

A. Well, I was appointed as an appraiser in an estate prior to that time.

Q. By whom?—A. By Judge Louderback.

Q. What was the nature of the appraisal?—A. There were three appraisers appointed in an estate, and I was one of them.

Q. What was the property that you had to appraise?—A. Well, I did very little work in that case. There was—I forget the man's name now that did look up the property—I did very little work in that case.

Q. What kind of property was it?—A. Well, I cannot recall.

Q. Was it land, real estate, or personal?—A. It was real estate; it was real estate. It was some estate, and I think it considered principally of real estate. The work was more accurately done by this gentleman, I cannot recall his name. I did practically nothing in that case.

Q. Do you remember the name of the case?—A. No; I cannot recall it.

Q. Do you remember about the time that you were designated as an appraiser by Judge Louderback?

Then you went on to state the period when it was. You stated you did not know where the property was located and that you did not go on the property. Is not that true?

Mr. LINFORTH. We object to that question as not in any sense contradictory of anything the witness is now stating.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks the objection is well taken.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I think we should take an appeal from the ruling of the Chair on that question. If the witness has given contradictory testimony it ought to be brought out here, and therefore I ask for a vote by the Senate sitting as a court.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate sitting as a court?

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, may I add—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This is not a question to be discussed.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, to save time we withdraw the objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is withdrawn. Counsel may proceed.

By Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. Do you recall the question?—A. Yes; I do.

Q. Was that the testimony you gave?—A. That was my testimony at San Francisco.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, the objection was withdrawn, but at the same time the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin] did not withdraw his point of no quorum. I ask unanimous consent that the request for the call of a quorum be withdrawn.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, without any coercion whatever, I withdraw the request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

By Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. Mr. Gilbert, is it not a fact that the only thing you did in this matter was to sign your name to a report which had been prepared, is not that a literal fact?—A. The oath and the inventory were prepared and I signed them.

Q. That is all you did, too, is it not?—A. That is all I did.

Q. Who served with you on that board?—A. Mr. Mogan is the only man that I had any dealings with on it. He was the State tax man.

Q. Do you know who the third man was on that board?—A. I have since heard.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Do you know?

The WITNESS. Yes; I know.

By Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. Who was it?—A. Mr. Leake.

Q. Mr. Sam Leake?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much did you get for your services in that connection?—A. $500.

Q. Do you know that the allowance under the laws of the State of California is $5 a day for these services?—A. I have since heard so; yes, sir.

Q. You got paid for 100 days' work by Judge Louderback for signing your name on one day?

Mr. LINFORTH. We object to that question as being argumentative. The facts are already in evidence.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is argumentative. Objection is well taken.

Q. I believe you have already testified to your designation in the Stempel-Cooley case?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Short was your attorney there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were the services of Mr. Short satisfactory?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which was the next appointment by Judge Louderback?—A. By Judge Louderback? It was the Sonora Phonograph case.

Q. That was a going concern? They were engaged in the purchase, sale, and distribution of phonographs and receivers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What experience prior to this time had you had in that kind of business?—A. None.

Q. How did you come to be designated, if you know, as receiver in that case?—A. I do not know.

Q. How did it come about?—A. I was appointed, and notified by the judge's secretary. I reported to his office, his chambers, the following morning, qualified, petitioned for counsel, and took active charge of the affairs of the company.

Q. Who prepared the petition for counsel in that case?—A. Mr. Dinkelspiel.

Q. Did you request that Mr. Dinkelspiel be designated as your attorney or did he request it?—A. I met Mr. Dinkelspiel—

Q. Wait a minute. I should like to have that question answered, if you can answer it.

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment. I do not believe that the honorable manager should shout and try to intimidate the witness in that way.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair does not see anything intimidating about it, but he thinks the question at this stage of the proceeding is rather disjointed or double-jointed. The Chair thinks the question should be read to the witness.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I should like the witness thoroughly to understand the question. May I ask the question in such a way that if there is any confusion I can remove the confusion?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is a question pending. Does the manager on the part of the House desire the court to rule on it, or does he desire to withdraw it?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I withdraw that question and will propound another question. I thought the objection was to my talking too loud. I withdraw the height of my speaking.

By Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. I want to know, as a matter of fact, whether the notion that you should employ Mr. Dinkelspiel originated with you or, as far as you know, originated with him?—A. It originated with Mr. Dinkelspiel, inasmuch as he was already in the case.

Q. How was he in the case?—A. He had been retained and filed a petition for the Irving Trust Co., of New York, the main receiver. Mr. Dinkelspiel stated that he had charge of the case when I first met him at the judge's chambers.

Q. He stated to you that the Irving Trust Co. had asked him to file this petition for ancillary receivership?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And because of that fact and that statement you consented to his employment?—A. I did, after conferring with Judge Louderback on the matter.

Q. After conferring with Judge Louderback? First you had the conversation which you have detailed with regard to Mr. Dinkelspiel and then you had a conference with Judge Louderback?—A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. And after the conference with Judge Louderback you consented to the application to have Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel designated as your attorneys in that case?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your preference had been for Douglas Short, had it not? He had represented you?—A. Well, I had in mind Mr. Short, but I had made no move in regard to having him appointed or filing a petition for it.

Q. Had you discussed your own selection with Mr. Leake?—A. No, sir.

Q. You did not go to him to make inquiry as to whom you should appoint?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. In the meantime, had you got acquainted with Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel?—A. No, sir. The first time I ever met Mr. Dinkelspiel was in the judge's chambers on the morning that I qualified in the Sonora case.

Q. Did you know him by reputation or personally?—A. Well, I had heard of the firm, but I had never seen either one of the gentlemen. I did not know them.

Q. Which one of the gentlemen was it that had the conversation with you in the judge's office?—A. Mr. John W. Dinkelspiel.

Q. I think you testified as to the transactions that took place in the administration of the estate of the Sonora Phonograph Co.—A. I did, as near as I could recall at the time.

Q. What was your next case?—A. The next case for Judge Louderback was the Prudential Holding Co. case.

Q. What was your fee in that case?—A. I did not receive any fee in the Prudential Holding Co. case at all.

Q. I believe that is the case where they were engaged in real-estate transactions. They had some apartment houses that they were operating?—A. Yes; they had four apartment houses.

Q. That is the case in which you said you did not come out very well, is it not? That is the case?—A. Yes; that is the case I did not come out very well on.

Q. You did not get any fee there. You were appointed receiver in equity in that case, and then an application to put the concern in bankruptcy was filed. Is that true?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that application to put the concern in bankruptcy fell in Judge St. Sure's court?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And during his absence the respondent sat in that division?—A. Well, I was not present at the hearing. I have heard so, but I do not know positively that that was the fact. I was not present.

Q. Then the petition in bankruptcy was granted and you were appointed receiver in that situation, were you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you did not get anything in either one?—A. I did not get anything; no, sir.

Q. The receivership in equity was dismissed. Who dismissed the bankruptcy matter?—A. I think Judge Louderback dismissed the bankruptcy matter. I think he did.

Q. Judge St. Sure did dismiss it.—A. Probably it was Judge St. Sure. I may have been mistaken.

Q. Which was the next case in which you were engaged?—A. The Fageol Motors Co.

Q. You have already testified in the main with reference to the Fageol Motors Co. case?—A. Yes. I testified in San Francisco on that.

Q. The Fageol Motors Co. was engaged rather extensively on the Pacific coast, was it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was engaged in the business of assembling automobiles, buying parts and assembling them, and also engaged in the business of manufacturing, to some degree at least, bodies for automobiles, was it not?—A. They assembled trucks, automotive trucks. They did not handle automobiles.

Q. Trucks?—A. And coaches—trucks and coaches.

Q. Do you mean by "coaches" those big automobile things that run up and down the road and carry passengers?—A. Yes, sir; look like street cars.

Q. What experience had you had in the automobile business prior to that time?—A. I had not had any experience in that particular line.

Q. I believe you have pretty well covered the character of service rendered. How were you able, without any experience in connection with the automobile business, to go in there and take charge and give intelligent direction to the affairs of that rather big concern?—A. Well, I knew organization for a big company through my experience with the Western Union. They had a rather large administrative force; and I conferred with the heads of each department, consolidated some, made a great many curtailments in every office on the Pacific coast, including the factory, closed out several offices when I found out they were not paying—

Q. If it would not interrupt you, how did you find that out?

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment, Mr. President. The witness was asked a question as to how he knew certain things and how he could do certain things. I submit he should be permitted to complete his answer.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. All right. That is perfectly all right. Go ahead.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Proceed with the answer.

The WITNESS. Well, I organized the Fageol Motors Co. or operated the business under my experience in the telegraph company as to organization and efficiency. As far as the shop, the mechanics, and men of that sort were concerned, each department was under an expert, with whom I conferred every day; but my principal duty was to get the thing down on a paying basis and rehabilitate the company if it was possible to do that.

I found a great many wastes there which I eliminated. For instance, the telephone bill was running around $700 a month when I went in there. I ordered about 17 telephones taken out that were absolutely unnecessary, and cut the bill down to about $285 a month. I stopped all long-distance telephone calls from the various departments unless they had an O.K. from my office. I sent letters out to every person owing the company, hired a collector, and followed up on all collections.

I collected a great deal of money that was outstanding. One thing I found on the books was some items, aggregating $6,000, that had been written off the books entirely. I had them put back on the books, and sent a man out to collect them, and he was successful in collecting $2,000 of that amount; and we had good prospects, or believed we did, of collecting the balance.

I also found that the company had overpaid their income tax something like $12,000. I made arrangements to have that refunded. Those negotiations were under way at the time my receivership was terminated.

There was any amount of detail in that way that I did. I do not suppose you want me to recite that, for reasons of time.

By Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. What I am trying to find out is, how your experience in the organization of a group of telegraph operators helped you in determining the operation of a great, big business concern, distributed over the western coast, assembling and manufacturing automobiles.—A. In my experience with the telegraph company, my executive experience with them, my training, I learned the matter of costs and operations, and the same principles apply in a telegraph company that apply anywhere else in that regard.

Q. In other words—I do not mean to argue it with you—but your notion is that any person who could be an efficient man as a supervisor of telegraph operators could take charge of a big business and run it right off the reel?

Mr. LINFORTH. One minute. We submit that that is objectionable as calling for his notion.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I withdraw it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is withdrawn. By Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. When were you paid for your services in this connection?—A. I think it was August of 1932. The receivership terminated on July 20. About a month later the fees were allowed.

Q. You had two savings accounts, did you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you had a safety-deposit box?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you distribute this fee?—A. The Fageol fee?

Q. Yes.—A. When I was paid I put the entire amount in my safe-deposit box, and left it there for some time. I have since deposited half of it in savings accounts and I have used considerable of it for living expenses.

Q. Was that drawn out of your safe-deposit box or out of your savings account?—A. Safe-deposit box.

Q. With regard to your separation from the Western Union Telegraph Co., I believe you stated that during all your receiverships, except the last, you continued in your employment with the Western Union Telegraph Co.?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you were selected in the last case, did not difficulty arise between you and one of the superintendents of the telegraph company?—A. No; there was no difficulty. I requested a furlough, and I was granted the customary 6 months' furlough from the company.

Q. But did you not tell the respondent here that trouble had developed between you and one of the superintendents, and that you were up against a situation, in effect, of having to separate either from the receivership or separate from the Western Union Telegraph Co.?

Mr. LINFORTH. We object to that question as not being cross-examination and not germane to any issue here involved.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is overruled.

By Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. Is not that true?—A. I had no difficulty with the superintendent—

Q. I did not ask you that.

Mr. LINFORTH. May the question be read?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let the question be read. The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. But did you not tell the respondent here that trouble had developed between you and one of the superintendents, and that you were up against a situation, in effect, of having to separate either from the receivership or separate from the Western Union Telegraph Co.?

By Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. Let me add this much before you answer. And did not the judge tell you to remain with the telegraph company?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Answer "yes" or "no", and then explain if you wish to.

The WITNESS. Yes, sir. I mentioned to Judge Louderback in a conversation one day that my furlough was about to expire, and that I had made application to have an extension, but it had not been granted. The judge advised me to continue with the telegraph company. That was his advice to me. That is practically all the conversation I had with the judge on the matter.

By Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. That is the question I asked you.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have already stated that you got approximately $6,800 in the Sonora Phonograph Co. case?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. For how long a period of time was that?—A. About 7 months, I think.

Q. How much did you get in the final wind-up of the business?—A. The last payment?

Q. That is right.—A. Twenty-eight hundred and some odd dollars.

Q. Will you indicate briefly what you did with that fund? In order to refresh your memory and to save you time, I will ask you if you did not deposit $1,200 in one savings account?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if you did not deposit $2,000 in another bank?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you paid off a note of $500?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the rest of it you deposited in your vault?—A. I paid out about a thousand dollars, including a note of $510. At the time I stated that, I could not recall exactly all my disbursements, but I paid out around a thousand dollars, and the balance I put in a safe-deposit box.

Q. I believe you stated that a good deal of that you have used up for living expenses?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, may I propound an inquiry? I did not clearly get the answer about the safe-deposit box.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama submits a question, which the clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. What was the amount of your compensation you put in the safe-deposit box, and when did you do that?

Q. In what case?

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I will add to the question, in the first case that was testified about, where he said he took half out at a later date and deposited it in the bank.

The WITNESS. That was the Fageol case. I put in half of my Fageol fees in the safe-deposit box and deposited the other half in the bank.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, may the question be read again?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. What was the amount of your compensation in the first case you put in the safe-deposit box, and when did you do that?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the Fageol case to which the Senator refers.

The WITNESS. The amount was $4,500, and I put it all in the safe-deposit box at the time I received it, the latter part of August 1932.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the other question propounded by the Senator from Alabama.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. When did you deposit half of the compensation in the bank?

The WITNESS. Within the last 2 months, when they got to questioning hoarders for keeping their money in safety-deposit boxes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the next question of the Senator from Alabama?

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. What bank did you put the money in, and in what bank did you have a safe-deposit box?

The WITNESS. I put the money in three different accounts—in the Bank of California, in the San Francisco Bank, and the American Trust Co. My safe-deposit box is in the American Trust Co.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The managers may proceed with the examination.

By Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. May I ask on what date you put this money in the safe-deposit box?—A. The Fageol matter money I put in the day I got paid. I do not know what day that was. I can not remember that—the latter part of August, as I recall it.

Q. In order to save time, have you your deposit slips, or the things which indicate at what time deposits were made by you of these amounts which you received in the receivership matters?—A. No, sir; I haven't them with me.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, we may want to recall this witness a little later, but this is all we desire to ask the witness at this time.

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a question or two in redirect.

Redirect examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Gilbert, when you paid Mr. Leake the $150 referred to in the questions by opposing counsel, was that for services rendered to your wife?—A. It was; my wife and myself.

Q. How many years before you were ever appointed receiver in any of these matters did that take place?—A. I would say 4 or 5 or 6 years prior.

Q. With reference to your bank accounts, to which you have referred, were they submitted to Mr. LaGuardia when he was in California on the investigation had in September of last year?—A. I did not submit my books to him, but I stated the facts to him on his interrogations.

Q. Did he ask for your books at that time?—A. He did not ask for my books; no, sir.

Mr. LINFORTH. That is all we desire to ask.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. That is all at the present time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. You may recall the witness again?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Yes; we may recall him again.

Mr. BLACK. I desire to propound other questions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the questions.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. When did you get your compensation in the Sonora case, and how much was it?

The WITNESS. I received my Sonora fees in three different installments. The last one was in July or August of 1930. The total amount aggregated six thousand eight hundred and some-odd dollars.

Q. What did you do with it, and when?

The WITNESS. I deposited $3,200 in savings accounts, paid off a note and some bills that I owed to the extent of about a thousand or eleven hundred dollars, and put the remainder in a safe-deposit box.

Mr. BLACK. I submit another question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. How much did you put in the box, and when?

The WITNESS. I put in the box all except what I deposited in the bank, and about eleven or twelve hundred dollars that I paid out on bills. The remainder I put in the box.

Mr. BLACK. May the question be read to him again?

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. How much did you put in the box, and when?

The WITNESS. About $2,400 I put in the box immediately after I received it.

Q. When did you pay out the money you mentioned?

The WITNESS. Within a very few days after receiving it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any further questions?

Mr. McKELLAR. I submit a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the question submitted by the Senator from Tennessee.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. When was the first time you ever rented a safety-deposit box?

The WITNESS. About 20 years ago.

Q. Have you a box now?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you any money in the box now?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. No further questions.

Mr. TYDINGS. I should like to ask the witness a question.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. It is understood that when I say we have no further questions, we mean at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that. The clerk will read the question submitted by the Senator from Maryland.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. Why did you put part of the money in the safe-deposit box?

The WITNESS. It has always been my custom to keep some money in a safe deposit box.

Q. Why in three banks?

The WITNESS. Well, I did not want to put all my eggs in one basket.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any further questions? If not, the witness may stand aside.

(The witness retired from the stand.)

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, at this time we offer in evidence a letter from Judge A. F. St. Sure which, by stipulation of the parties, may stand as his testimony in the matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That stipulation has been entered?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, I am advised by my associates that that stipulation has been entered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The letter may be filed.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, the letter is upon one of the letterheads of the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, it is dated April 25, 1933, and reads:

U.S.S. EXHIBIT F

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA,
CHAMBERS OF A. F. ST. SURE,
San Francisco, Calif., April 25, 1933.

HON. HAROLD LOUDERBACK,
United States District Judge,
San Francisco, Calif.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA v. HAROLD LOUDERBACK, UPON ARTICLES OF IMPEACHMENT PRESENTED BY THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

MY DEAR JUDGE LOUDERBACK: You have asked for my interpretation of the last paragraph of our court rule no. 53, which reads as follows: "Receivers shall employ counsel only after obtaining an order of the court therefor."

When this rule was adopted in 1928, we had before us report pamphlet no. 1 of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, which contained recommendations upon the appointment of equity receivers and the employment of counsel by the receivers. One recommendation in particular read as follows: "That counsel for the receiver should be designated only after order of court and upon appropriate affidavit by the receiver."

After a full discussion the judges of this court were of the opinion that the rule would prove a useful one, and it has so proved. It gives the court discretion in the matter of the appointment of attorneys for the receiver, to the end that no attorney shall be appointed who for good and sufficient reasons is deemed disqualified—who has appeared for or acts for a party or for any creditor of the defendant (whether intervenor or not), or for any other person interested in the cause or the estate; and in case where the court appoints as ancillary receiver a person who is the primary receiver in another jurisdiction, it gives the court the power to appoint, as representing the court, a local attorney of good standing at the bar.

I have read the above to our associate, Judge Kerrigan, and he gives me permission to say that he agrees with my interpretation.

In the matter of one judge sitting in the absence of another. Our rules provide "that court shall be held at Sacramento in each month except for the months of July and August", and that "court shall be held in Eureka in July, * * *. The Sacramento and Eureka terms of court shall be held by the several judges, turn and turn alike, and in regular rotation; subject to such temporary variations as are agreed upon by a majority of the judges." When I have been sitting in Sacramento or Eureka, you have courteously presided in my department in San Francisco, called my calendar, heard and ruled upon ex parte and other motions, and when you have been absent from San Francisco, I have performed a like service for you.

In the matter of the Prudential Holding Co. of Los Angeles, a Nevada corporation, alleged bankrupt. You have called my attention to testimony given by Attorney H. H. McPike, who was a witness at the hearing before the special committee of the House of Representatives, Seventy-second Congress, pursuant to House Resolution 239, held in San Francisco from September 6 to September 12, 1932. It appears that there had been made before me a motion to dismiss a bankruptcy proceeding, which was granted, and that thereafter a motion to set aside the order of dismissal was made. Mr. McPike testified that in denying the latter motion, I said "I found there was a bad smell about the case." I have no recollection of having made the remark quoted, but as Mr. McPike has so testified under oath, it is probable that I did. You inform me it has been suggested that the remark quoted was a personal allusion to you. I am certain I did not have you in mind when the alleged remark was made.

Yours truly,

A. F. ST. SURE,
United States District Judge.

AFS/BA.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. May I see that paper, Judge?

Mr. LINFORTH. Certainly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under stipulation the Chair understands that the letter is to be filed and become of record.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I will hand it up in just a moment. I have the privilege of making an examination of it.

Mr. LINFORTH. May I inquire, does the Presiding Officer desire me to file this stipulation with the letter?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No; it is understood that it is stipulated that it may be received.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. To make it clear, the concession is that this letter may go in as though it were a deposition or the testimony of Judge St. Sure.

Mr. LINFORTH. That is my understanding, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the record.

RECESS

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I did not understand the honorable attorney. Did he ask me a question?

Mr. LINFORTH. I had a thought in mind that we had reached a point where we might take a recess.

Mr. ASHURST. Have you no other witness?

Mr. LINFORTH. I am quite fatigued and weary. I worked very late last night, and I am under the impression—

Mr. Manager PERKINS. There is a witness waiting in the lobby to be called, and we could consume 25 or 30 minutes more.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is the desire of the Presiding Officer at this time that the proceeding go on and that time be saved just as much as possible.

Mr. ASHURST. I suggest that we proceed until 1:30 o'clock, at least.

Mr. LINFORTH. May I add this statement, Mr. President? I have been under a good deal of stress in this matter. My working hours have been about 20 each day from the time of my arrival in Washington. I have reached that point in age where I feel fatigued a little more early than I did many years ago. I feel, Mr. President, that when I reach that point I cannot discharge to the full extent of my ability my duty to my client. I should like, if it may be done, that at this time we take a recess until next Monday. I am quite confident, cutting matters as I have cut them out this morning, that we may be able, and I hope we shall be able, to conclude the evidence by next Monday; and I am perfectly willing for the honorable court to make such order as it may deem necessary to lengthen the hours on Monday, if necessary, to that effect.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senators have heard the statement of counsel. What is the suggestion of the Senate?

Mr. ASHURST. It was not anticipated that the court would take a recess until 1:30 o'clock today, but in view of the statement of the honorable attorney, I feel that I ought to make such motion as he suggests.

I am about to say something that doubtless I should not say, but I am going to say it at the risk of impropriety. The honorable attorneys are weary, but there are others who are weary from hearing questions that have no relation to the subject repeated over and over and over again. Other men grow weary as well as the honorable attorneys. I therefore move that the Senate, sitting as a Court of Impeachment, take a recess until 12 o'clock noon on Monday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, I want to add my thanks to our friends.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Arizona.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 1 o'clock and 10 minutes p.m.) the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment, took a recess until Monday, May 22, 1933, at 12 o'clock meridian.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The Senate, pursuant to the order for the recess entered yesterday, resumed legislative session.

LONG, a Senator from the State of Louisiana, condemning attacks made upon him and remonstrating against a senatorial investigation of his alleged acts and conduct, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also laid before the Senate a petition of sundry citizens of Bay Ridge, Brooklyn, N.Y., praying the Senate to adopt a resolution to the effect that it does not endorse the inquiry for which "the taxpayers' money was paid to Gen. Samuel T. Ansell" in connection with the senatorial campaign investigation in Louisiana, etc., which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

TREATMENT OF JEWS IN GERMANY

Mr. KEAN presented resolutions adopted at a meeting of American-Jewish citizens of Monmouth County, in the city of Asbury Park, N.J., which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas a protest has been made heretofore on the 27th day of March 1933 at the high-school auditorium in the city of Asbury Park, county of Monmouth and State of New Jersey, against the intolerant policy of the Hitler government in relation to the Jews of Germany, in which protest participated the lay and spiritual leaders of Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant religions of the Monmouth County seaboard, as well as civic, political, and industrial leaders of said county; and

Whereas this formal protest was delivered to the State Department of our Federal Government and to the German Ambassador, Wilhelm von Prittwitz; and

Whereas verified and confirmed reports from Germany have since that time brought to America, day after day, the news of a systematic and thorough exclusion of Jews from the civic and political life of Germany by the Hitler government, an exclusion which expresses itself in the elimination of Jews from all federal, state, and local offices; the wholesale dismissal of Jewish physicians; the forced retirement of Jewish professors and instructors from the colleges and universities and smaller educational institutions; the ejection of Jewish judges from the courts; the expulsion of Jewish lawyers from the bar; the limitation and restriction of the attendance of Jewish students in all the higher educational institutions: Be it therefore

Resolved at this meeting of American-Jewish citizens of the county of Monmouth, State aforesaid, held this 10th day of May 1933, at the Synagogue, Sons of Israel, in the city of Asbury Park, county of Monmouth and State aforesaid, That we do hereby most emphatically condemn the unjust, intolerant, and outrageous anti-Semitic measures, policies, and discriminations of the Hitler regime; and be it further

Resolved, That we do hereby call upon the Honorable W. WARREN BARBOUR and the Honorable HAMILTON F. KEAN, United States Senators for the State of New Jersey, and also upon the Honorable WILLIAM H. SUTPHIN, Congressman of the Third Congressional District of the State of New Jersey, to raise their voice of protest in the Halls of the United States Congress, move for the adoption of the resolution by the Congress and the Senate denouncing the unjust, unwarranted, and inhuman exclusion of Jews from the civic, political, and professional life of the country in which they have lived over sixteen hundred years, and to which they brought untold glory and distinction in every field of endeavor; and be it further

Resolved, That we call upon the Honorable Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of these United States, to use his good offices in behalf of the oppressed and persecuted Jews in Germany.

Respectfully submitted by the resolutions committee.

There being no objection, the resolution (S.Res. 83) was read, considered, and agreed to, as follows:

WORLD ECONOMIC CONFERENCE—ARTICLE BY FORMER AMBASSADOR EDGE

Mr. KEAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article by former Ambassador Edge in regard to the forthcoming World Economic Conference, published in the New York Tribune of last Sunday.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Herald Tribune, May 14, 1933]

EDGE URGES UNITED STATES TO RENOUNCE INTERNATIONAL SANTA CLAUS ROLE BEFORE NEW CONFERENCE OPENS—SEVERAL NATIONS ALREADY IN LINE FOR ECONOMIC HORSE TRADING AND AMERICA SHOULD NOT FORGET HER CREDITOR POSITION WHILE CONSIDERING LOWER TARIFFS AND TRADE PACTS, FORMER ENVOY WARNS

By Walter E. Edge, former American Ambassador to France

These are days when every citizen, irrespective of previous political or economic convictions, should contribute all in his power in the interests of national solidarity. However, in my judgment, this goal can best be reached, or at least more headway made, through frankly facing the facts.

Of course, we should approach the responsibilities of the World Economic Conference wholeheartedly, enthusiastically, and with determination to secure definite results. In fact, the recent Washington conversations certainly demonstrate that intention. Nevertheless, in the interest of harmonious and constructive action, it occurs to me it might be just as well for the United States, in advance of the convening of the conference, to let it be known that we do not propose to be an international Santa Claus.

The apparent diffidence of the nations invited to enter into a tariff armistice before and during the duration of the conference is in itself significant. It must not be overlooked that some of the countries abroad have for months been preparing and arming themselves for future bartering and horse trading. While our Government has been suggesting the lowering of tariffs and the elimination of other trade restrictions, European nations have been adding them on as well as concluding new treaties which exclude the United States. Now that a definite proposal is made by us to stop this practice, at least during the period of discussion, we are met generally with a lack of enthusiasm and, in fact, in some instances, with definite reservations.

This should serve as a note of warning that, notwithstanding the optimism which seemed to surround the Washington conversations, some foreign governments, nevertheless, are still recalcitrant. If, in the hope of increasing our export trade, we are to face a proposition for the cancellation, or at least a substantial revision, of war debts, the validity and legality of which no nation has questioned; if we are to remove protection from local producers through lowering our tariff and then in the final analysis we are expected to again loan Europe money in order to buy our goods, as obviously Europe will not take many of our wares without new loans, then a little advance figuring from a domestic standpoint would seem to be quite justified.

Our experience in international conferences in terms of the results obtained does not warrant much optimism—except where we are prepared to make the major sacrifices.

STEPS TOWARD DISARMAMENT

Consider, for instance, the various steps toward a disarmament agreement.

At Washington in 1921 real progress was made in the direction of the limitation and reduction of capital ships when the United States agreed to scrap ships built or building while other nations nobly sacrificed their blueprints.

At London the results were relatively negligible and limited to three naval powers, while at Geneva, despite our many proposals for real reduction, notably former President Hoover's move for a one-third curtailment, nothing has eventuated except generous discussion. Nevertheless, even with all these previous discouragements, it is obviously our clear duty to press on in the hope that present world conditions will ultimately compel broader understandings and more liberal reactions.

After 3 years abroad in the Foreign Service, I am more than ever convinced that America is basically dependent economically on a scientific preparation and application of a protective tariff that fully protects. If the present disinclination on the part of other nations to enter into a tariff truce is any criterion, then they must hold the same opinion as applying to their own problem.

I do not attempt to defend many inconsistencies and inequalities in our existing tariff schedules. Nevertheless, I feel quite positive that tariff trades, unless they followed a comprehensive and individual study which justified reductions, would add significantly to our economic difficulties by inviting sectional discord and still further reduce our standard of living as well as increase unemployment, all without comparable compensation in the form of greater markets for our goods abroad.

WORLD CARTEL IDEA IMPRACTICABLE

If the producing countries of the world could form an international cartel, as it were, control production and amicably divide the world's markets, the situation might be improved. But, apart from the absolute impossibility of reaching, or at least carrying out, such a utopian agreement, I greatly doubt the wisdom or efficacy of this course.

The world, generally speaking, has prospered through healthy competition. It only started on the downgrade when an uncontrolled orgy of speculation set aside all normal practices and precedents.

Following my retirement from the ambassadorship, I visited the capitals of all the Balkan States, as well as other countries in southern and eastern Europe. I had the privilege of chatting unofficially and informally with many of the rulers and cabinet officers of those different states. I was particularly impressed with the unanimity of opinion, freely expressed, that nothing concrete could come out of the proposed economic congress if the disarmament conference failed to reach real agreements. The pessimism in this regard was universal.

I am far from being an extreme nationalist. But I feel strongly that in the present zeal for international idealism we should not evade the facts or practice self-deception.

LITTLE ACCOMPLISHED SO FAR

The years since the war have been replete with fruitless conferences. The interests of the people are so diverse, their ambitions and emotions so complex, that little headway in the field of material international agreement has been found possible. I regret to admit it, but it is my firm conviction that most of our problems of national recovery must be worked out within our own borders, and we now seem to be making commendable headway in that direction.

Of course, progress was made at Lausanne toward the solution of the reparations problem. But it should not be overlooked that that agreement is apparently contingent upon further sacrifices by Uncle Sam. Moreover, it is not much of a concession to wipe off a type of credits that will not be paid in any event.

Possibly the United States is facing similar difficulties with war debts, but before these just claims become actual stage money there are some justifiable bargains and adjustments that can and should be made, and that without involving the destruction of vital protection to American labor and industries.

There are trade restrictions practiced by some of our debtors, many discriminatory, that should be adjusted before we seriously talk revision. We hold a very effective weapon and are from every standpoint justified in using it.

In short, in our negotiations we should not give up the cake and the penny too.

CRITICS ADVISED TO LOOK AFIELD

Those who charge against our protective system most of the present economic ills and particularly criticize our nonscalable tariff wall, as they characterize it, seldom make comparisons with what is being practiced by competitive nations.

Efforts to blame our protective system, even despite unfair and unjust trade restrictions in many parts of Europe, as the major cause of the depression is simply to evade existing facts. I cannot understand the policy of some of our own people, especially when they see what is taking place abroad, of pointing to the United States as a glaring example of trade barriers and prohibitive tariffs.

In point of fact, the United States presents the fairest tariff policy in the world today. While some of our individual schedules are undoubtedly too high and should, when not justified by trade or production facts, be lowered, nevertheless our general application of the most-favored-nation principle treats all competitors alike and establishes the United States as an open market without any favorites among the nations.

The same cannot be said for many of our neighbors. Quota restrictions which are nothing more nor less than partial embargoes, discriminatory turn-over and license taxes (none of which are in effect in the United States) form trade barriers against American imports which cannot be surmounted. The United States has been able to close commercial treaties with but few nations because of these obvious discriminations.

While a reversal of our economic policy and the substitution of a bilateral or bargaining system for general most-favored-nation treatment has some support, I am of the opinion that in the long run it would open the way to untold difficulties and surely invite reprisals. The fact must not be lost from sight that we are the greatest creditor nation in the world.

Again, when the proposal is made to discard our present open-door policy, careful consideration must be given to the character of our foreign trade. Even in normal or affluent times we have exported less than 15 percent of our production, divided into approximately 11 percent of raw materials and under 4 percent manufactured goods. In other words, the outside world purchases from us mainly such materials as it cannot buy on equal terms from other nations in the open market for purposes of domestic manufacture.

While I do not minimize the importance of disposing of even this relatively small proportion of our production, at the same time I fail to see where our protective system, which is similar to the system prevailing in all other countries, influences, much less controls, purchases of our goods by foreign countries at world's prices. It has not in the past and in normal times will not in the future, if we have the required material to sell.

It is plain, ordinary common sense that a foreign nation purchases from the outside only what it does not produce at home and then at the best prices it can obtain. As a rule the tariff only indirectly enters into these sales as these needed commodities are usually on the free list.

DOMESTIC MARKET COMES FIRST

The same applies moreover to the small foreign consumption of our manufactured goods, accentuated considerably by inventions and styles. For example, American automobiles and farm machinery have a market everywhere because to date no other country has turned out such satisfactory products.

As a consequence I am convinced that our main effort should be to reinvigorate our domestic market. It is estimated that sales at home have declined about 45 percent as compared with normal times. Most certainly a blanket reduction of our import duty would not correct this situation. Every additional invoice of competitive goods imported must necessarily still further reduce domestic production. This, of course, is an old story, but to me it lies at the very root of the whole situation. Likewise, our exports abroad will increase only with a return of general business activity greatly contingent upon a return of confidence at home which, fortunately, now seems to be on the upgrade. Our energy should be expended still further on that domestic effort.

European countries, unfortunately, are frequently compelled to give more attention to the prevention of warlike outbreaks and to adjust political problems with each other than to the readjustment of international commerce across the sea. It is our duty to help in every way we can without becoming embroiled. In our own interest it is imperative to keep in close touch with every development. But at this time we have, first and foremost, a man's job at home, and I cannot see how a general reduction of the tariff will regenerate American confidence or increase American sales.

At the outset of this article I frankly admitted the existence of many inconsistencies in the American tariff schedules and stated my opinion that they should be readjusted. There is no doubt in my mind that there have been individual cases of unjustifiable tariff boosts. These have doubtless been the origin of much of the criticism of the tariff. To overprotect a commodity is as wicked as to expose it to the raids of cheap foreign importations. In the former case the consumer is unfairly gouged; in the latter instance the American workman is thrown out of employment.

AN EXAMPLE OF MISJUDGMENT

During the period of my official responsibility in France I witnessed one particularly glaring example of attempted overprotection, and I did not hesitate to denounce it publicly. One branch of Congress proposed to raise the ad valorem duty on certain types of hand-made lace, principally produced in northern France and Belgium. The old rate was from 80 to 90 percent ad valorem; the new rate soared as high as 300 percent. Of course, such a raise would have been tantamount to an embargo. The effort failed. Without any doubt if it had been enacted it would have exaggerated the cost to the American consumer.

And while I hope I am a consistent protectionist, nevertheless I refuse to believe that any industry, whether a so-called "infant industry" or otherwise, is entitled to such high protection. If we are unable to produce a commodity at a cost less than 3 times the average world cost, we should permit the other fellow to enjoy the trade. I am no more opposed to embargoes, quota allotments, or discriminatory levies than I am to overprotection.

But if our tariff, equal to all, has seriously contributed to the world's economic troubles, as some insist, then let us repair the error along scientific and not political lines. And if our debt contracts, duly accepted and ratified, are to be reopened and revised, the discriminations and inconsistencies now faced by American exporters must in all fairness be first permanently adjusted.

PUBLIC-WORKS PROGRAM—ARTICLE BY JAMES M. THOMSON

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD an article by James M. Thomson published in the New Orleans Item of May 15, 1933.

There being no objection, the article was ordered printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From New Orleans Item, May 15, 1933]

LARGER WORKS ISSUE FAVORED—INCOME TAX TO CARRY BONDS

By James M. Thomson

Senator NYE, of North Dakota, offers an amendment to the forthcoming tax bill which may avoid the necessity for a sales tax for the impending public-improvement bond issue. He shows that reflation must necessarily bring vast profits to those who have picked up real estate, stocks, bonds, and other bargains at pre-closure or sacrifice sales. So he proposes a supertax on incomes above $100,000 a year. He would grade this tax up to 75 percent of net incomes above $1,000,000 so long as the war on depression and unemployment lasts. He would also enlarge Federal inheritance and gift taxes. In other words, he would follow the course pursued by our Government in income taxation during the late war on Germany.

All taxes are unpleasant and most of them undesirable. The tax which falls heaviest on the consuming masses is a sales tax, for the workingman with a large family necessarily pays more sales tax than a rich but smaller family does, and far more than wealthy individuals who put their time on increasing their accumulations. Sales taxes necessarily tend to impede business, and at this time what we want above all is to speed business up.

Increasing the prices of farm products will put a sales tax running to a billion dollars a year on consumers; in general, most of them city and town people. Likewise limitation of farm production will have the same effect. Yet we have already adopted this policy in the new farm bill in order to restore farmers and farm laborers to industry and give them purchasing power.

I favor not a $3,000,000,000 public-works bond issue but five or even six billion dollars for that purpose.

The war in America is a war to put our unemployed to work. It is a more serious war than the one we waged in Europe. It justifies Federal expenditures on a scale which will insure our winning that war.

As inflation brings back values speculators and gamblers will count their profits by millions and billions. The same men who got income-tax rebates of five or six billions of dollars under the Mellon-Mills administration of the Treasury, following the Hoover panic, will pick up surplus profits of billions of dollars. There is every reason in equity that they should pay a considerable part of this back into the Treasury at a time when it is needed to fight a war on superdeflation and depression. They paid taxes of this kind to aid in the World War. Many of them expressed themselves as glorying in the sacrifice. Surely the condition of unemployment among their fellow citizens should have an even stronger appeal to them. For this expenditure is entirely constructive.

For one I have not sympathized with the agitation for cutting the wages or salaries of either our better-paid Government employees or of our Senators and Representatives. Nor am I in favor of the cutting of the salaries of our presidents of our life-insurance companies or our railroads or of our great manufacturing or industrial organizations. Men of great ability, of experience and skill, men who carry great responsibilities are entitled to a handsome reward for their talents. Congressmen get not too much but too little. Cabinet members and their executive assistants are woefully underpaid. The President of the United States gets too little.

But in times like these there is a moral value in the gesture they make of cutting their salaries while they are cutting Government expenses all round. The people who make the country a going concern are the people who furnish it with brains and brawn. The men and women who live on "unearned increment", who shoot craps in a large way, can in this emergency well afford to contribute to government more of their surplus incomes over a hundred thousand and over a million net per year. They can afford, for a while at least, to pay some additional inheritance and gift taxes.

This talk about all the rich in America being broke is hokum. If it were true, no one would oppose taxes of the kind Senator NYE proposes.

Plenty of concerns in America have net incomes above $10,000,000 this year. There are plenty of individuals whose net income will vary between a million and $5,000,000. And these people can well afford to give part of their surplus which is not invested in tax-exempt bonds and securities.

In England this class of people pay real income taxes and real inheritance taxes. England has used this tax to keep a great dole going to millions of her idle people over a long period. This policy is all wrong, in my opinion. Our people should have work at good wages, not doles. And if we sustain a real public-improvement program with taxes of this kind, we will give our people work, speed up business, stabilize values, and add enormously to the real wealth of the very people who are paying the super taxes. Meantime the little fellow who has been out of work for some years will not have to pay a sales tax on everything he consumes.

NOMINATION OF FEDERAL RELIEF ADMINISTRATOR

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Out of order, and as in executive session, I ask that the Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER], the Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, may report a nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McCARRAN in the chair). Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. FLETCHER. From the Committee on Banking and Currency I report favorably the nomination of Harry L. Hopkins, of New York, to be Federal Emergency Relief Administrator, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I stated yesterday the general practice and the desire not to take up matters of this kind until reported by a committee. I understand that the report on this nomination was unanimous.

Mr. FLETCHER. That is correct.

Mr. McNARY. And in view of the emergent situation about which the able Senator from Arkansas told me, I have no objection to having the nomination acted upon, and, going farther, to having the President notified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed, and the President will be notified.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I thank the Chair and the Senator from Oregon.

OPPOSITION TO SECURITIES REGULATION BILL

The Senate resumed legislative session.

Mr. LEWIS obtained the floor.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. LEWIS. The distinguished Senator from Florida has a matter which he feels that he would like to present at this time and it is more or less dependent upon a matter waiting outside. I yield to the Senator, with the understanding that I do not yield the floor and that I may take the floor immediately following the conclusion of the remarks of the Senator from Florida.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, it was not to be expected that a measure, such as the Federal securities bill, now in conference, designed to protect the public from the financial racketeering of certain classes of so-called "investment bankers", could be enacted without arousing the most determined opposition on the part of that profession which has mulct the people of some $50,000,000,000 during the past 10 years.

These interests were given their day in court in the hearings before both the Senate and House committees and submitted voluminous briefs, but it is evident from the almost unanimous approval of the bill in both Houses, that their arguments made little impression.

Every effort was made by both committees to satisfy every reasonable criticism or objection made to the bills. It became necessary, therefore, for opponents to resort to other expedients, and this has taken the form of inspired telegrams and letters to the members of the conference committee, seeking to influence their decision and to postpone further action on the bill until the next session of Congress when, these interests hope, sufficient time will have elapsed for the public and the Congress to have forgotten to some extent the occurrences of the past few years.

Not all the firms, however, to whom they sent instructions to wire protests to committee members were in sympathy with the suggestion. One of these latter has sent to the committee a copy of the telegram of instructions they received, which, the writer states, was sent by "representatives of perhaps a thousand investment bankers in the United States, including especially the principal ones in New York City." This telegram reads in part as follows:

Vitally important that you contact immediately executives of important industries, urging that they wire immediately Hon. SAM RAYBURN, House Office Building, and Hon. DUNCAN U. FLETCHER, Senate Office Building, Washington, the ranking members of the conference committee, stating in own language that while intent of Federal legislation approved, both bills as drafted are unworkable and constitute serious menace to industry.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Florida who signed that telegram?

Mr. FLETCHER. I have not the original telegram with me, but it comes, I believe, from St. Louis.

Mr. COUZENS. They have been coming to Senators other than the conferees.

Mr. FLETCHER. Yes; undoubtedly.

The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] made it clear in the Senate on May 4 that the president of the United States Chamber of Commerce has always been essentially a promoter and director in numerous public-utility companies. He listed more than 20 power companies which Mr. Harriman had either promoted or in which he serves as an executive or member of the board of directors. The report of the Senator from Nebraska stated that—

Mr. Harriman has exhibited no grief over billions of watered stock on which the consumers must pay higher rates to maintain dividends.

Moreover, it is well known the United States Chamber of Commerce includes numerous investment bankers, brokers, and dealers among its membership. That organization's instructions, transmitted through local chambers to their more important members, reads as follows:

Believing that you should interest yourself in opposition to these bills which are now being considered by the conference committee of Congress, I urge that you immediately wire the Honorable DUNCAN U. FLETCHER, Senate Office Building, and the Honorable SAMUEL RAYBURN, House Office Building, Washington, D.C., stating in your own language that—

You are in sympathy with the intent of Congress to regulate the issuance of securities but believe both bills (giving their numbers), as drafted, are unworkable and also are a serious menace to industry and business generally.

The securities bill, now in conference, received the most careful consideration by two Federal departments before being submitted to Congress and has been minutely studied by the committees of both Houses for some weeks past with the assistance of recognized authorities on investment matters, who have gladly contributed their aid in drafting and editing this measure. When its provisions were first released to the public, it was received with editorial acclaim throughout the entire country, including that financial authority, the Wall Street Journal.

The proposal was also well received by most of those financial institutions that desire to do a legitimate business and realize the absolute necessity of restoring public confidence before they can prosper. One firm, for example, that had been asked by certain investment bankers to wire a protest, did the contrary and telegraphed the committee as follows:

Earnestly against this organized effort of bankers to thwart just legislation by the administration and that they were still subjected to efforts to whip them into old-gang line, whereas they conceive the salvation of investment banking business solely dependent upon restoration of confidence by assurance that past crookedness will not occur again in short time.

Truly, these instructions sent out by the chamber of commerce and the investment brokers have had quite a contrary effect of that intended and, boomeranglike, have done their cause far more harm than good.

While pretending to be favorable to the President's message and declaring they were in accord with the purpose of the legislation, they insisted on delaying action, and although they had been offered every opportunity for being heard, and were heard for weeks, they urged, after the hearings closed and the bills were reported, that they be given additional time and opportunity to present their views. They simply wish to be let alone, have their own way, pursue their own course, without any restriction or regulation, as in the past.

The country justly demands that the public have some protection, real investors some safeguards, and honest business a legitimate chance.

The conferees have agreed, and helpful and needful legislation will be enacted shortly.

I wanted to make this statement in connection with the bill because I know that Senators have been bombarded by this kind of telegrams stating in a general way that the bill is not workable and will do more harm than good, and asking to have it postponed for future consideration. I ask that the Senate, when the time comes, will take action at once and that this legislation may be placed upon the statute books.

Mr. President, I ask to have printed in the Record a copy of my letter to Mr. Harriman with reference to the legislation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The letter is as follows:

MAY 8, 1933.

Mr. HENRY I. HARRIMAN,
President Chamber of Commerce of the United States,
Washington, D.C.

MY DEAR MR. HARRIMAN: Yours of May 8 came to me just after the bill passed the Senate today.

We passed the Senate bill with some amendments and then substituted it for the House bill, so the whole matter will now go to conference. The Senate today named conferees and probably tomorrow the House will name conferees, and they will endeavor to harmonize the differences between the two bills.

This will give an opportunity for the conferees to consider any suggestions you may make. There will be no hearings, but if you will submit your views in writing, or make any suggestions, I am certain the conferees will give them due consideration.

I am very much afraid the people you are hearing from are against the legislation entirely.

The President submitted a special message asking for the legislation March 29.

The bill, S. 875, was introduced on March 29 and referred to the Judiciary Committee.

On March 30 the Committee on the Judiciary was discharged and the bill was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

That committee took it up at once and proceeded with the hearings, day after day, until everyone who had applied had an opportunity to be heard.

The newspapers carried notices of the fact we were holding hearings on the bill; numerous persons testified and submitted arguments and briefs.

Many amendments were made to the original bill—so many, in fact, that the committee decided to report a substitute bill, and that was done on April 17 (calendar day April 27).

The hearings had been held almost daily from March 30 to April 27. Everyone who wanted to be heard was heard. Investment bankers, accountants, business men, brokers, and what not were heard. There was scarcely a day that the press did not carry notices regarding this bill and these hearings.

Now for these people to speak about not having an opportunity to be heard on the bill is ridiculous.

The House committee held hearings, and finally when their hearings were closed a subcommittee got together with their experts and drafting force to prepare the bill, and did so, and the House finally passed the bill H.R. 5480 May 4.

Today the calendar was taken up in the Senate, and the Senate proceeded to consider S. 875.

A few amendments were offered to it and agreed to.

As amended, it was substituted for the House bill, and the conferees on the part of the Senate were named.

We would be here until Christmas if every individual had to be satisfied about the bill; in fact, we would never have any legislation at all.

All I can say is, as I have stated above, if anyone has anything to say about the bill or any views or suggestions to offer, I feel certain the conferees will consider them. As the case now stands, both the House and Senate bills are in conference and each provision in each bill can be dealt with by the conferees.

Very truly yours,

DUNCAN U. FLETCHER, Chairman.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Florida, in reference to the correspondence about which he has just commented, whether the letter from the president of the chamber of commerce was a recent one or whether it had reference to the House bill?

Mr. FLETCHER. It was a recent letter. His letter was dated May 9.

Mr. FESS. I had a letter earlier from the president of the United States Chamber of Commerce to the same effect, but I thought the Senate bill had largely cured the objections which were being made and which were directed to the House bill. I am receiving a great number of letters from Ohio that have probably been stimulated by this interest coming from Washington. I answered them to the effect that in my judgment the Senate committee reported the bill which the Senate passed and sent to conference that cured very largely the specific objections that had been made.

Mr. FLETCHER. I think the Senator is quite right. There has been a great deal of confusion. Some have had the Senate bill and some have had the House bill, and they have been filing complaints about them when neither of them will be the bill that is to be reported.

Mr. FESS. That is why I wanted to know whether the letter was a recent one.

Mr. FLETCHER. Yes; it was dated May 9. It had reference to one bill or the other, but the bill that will be reported is still another bill. It is partly the House bill and partly the Senate bill. I think many criticisms are not well founded at all because they have been cured by subsequent action of the Senate or House.

CONFERRING OF DEGREES UPON NAVAL ACADEMY GRADUATES

Mr. TRAMMELL submitted the following report, which was ordered to lie on the table:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 753) to confer the degree of bachelor of science upon graduates of the Naval Academy having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the text of the bill and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the word "academies", at the end of the said amendment, insert the following: "from and after the date of the accrediting of said academies by the Association of American Universities"; and the House agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the title of the bill and agree to the same.

PARK TRAMMELL,
FREDERICK HALE,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

CARL VINSON,
FRED A. BRITTON,

Managers on the part of the House.

RESIGNATION OF JOHN MARRINAN

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, Mr. John Marrinan, a trusted investigator of the Committee on Banking and Currency, recently resigned. He desires placed in the RECORD—and I am glad to comply with the suggestion by requesting its insertion—some correspondence relating to his resignation. There has been some misunderstanding of the reasons for his resignation, and of his helpful offer in connection with it to assist the committee through the hearings set for the coming week, and otherwise to aid as a consultant.

There being no objection, the correspondence was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES SENATE, COMMITTEE ON BANKING AND CURRENCY,
May 20, 1933.

Hon. EDWARD P. COSTIGAN,
United States Senate, Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR COSTIGAN: A public misapprehension seems to have arisen through publication of an incomplete account of my tender of resignation as an employee of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency in connection with the inquiry into investment practices. As you were advised when my resignation was offered, it was to become effective at the end of the present month. I have had an active part in the investigation of private-banking practices, regarding which public hearings are to be held next week. I have intended, and still intend, to give every assistance to the committee until this phase of the inquiry is concluded. You are aware of my further offer to serve as a consultant to the committee during the future conduct of the investigation upon invitation to do so.

Will you be good enough to have printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD the two attached letters pertaining to my resignation? They make it clear, I believe, that I have had no desire to retire until the forthcoming public hearings on the affairs of J. P. Morgan & Co. and other private bankers have been closed.

Yours sincerely,

JOHN MARRINAN.

MAY 17, 1933.

Ferdinand Pecora, Esq.,
Suite 1110, 285 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y.

DEAR FRED: The attached copy of letter to Senator FLETCHER will require no explanation. All I can add to it is that I dislike leaving the very agreeable association I have had with you. I have been in this picture since the investigation started. In retrospect, I count my most valuable contribution to be the part I played in retaining you as counsel.

It is needless for me to add that I am under no obligation whatsoever to anybody until June 1. You may, therefore, count upon me fully until that time.

Yours sincerely,

JOHN MARRINAN.

MAY 17, 1933.

HON. DUNCAN U. FLETCHER,

United States Senate, Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR FLETCHER: I wish to tender my resignation as economic adviser to the Senate Subcommittee on Banking and Currency which is conducting the investigation into investment practices under the terms of Senate Resolution 56, Seventy-third Congress, first session. If agreeable to you and to the committee, I should like to terminate my services as of May 31 next.

I am taking this step with reluctance by reason of my interest in the work of the committee and the personal satisfaction I have derived from being associated with you and with Mr. Pecora. However, my personal circumstances have moved from bad to worse over the past year by reason of the salary limitation imposed in the Legislative Appropriation Acts of 1933 and 1934, and I find myself unable to continue on my present income. Moreover, there does not appear to be any easy remedy within the power of the committee, because I am already receiving the maximum permitted by law, namely $255 per month net. It should be added that other members of the staff are in the more fortunate position of having supplementary sources of income.

I desire to express to you and to the individual members of the subcommittee my sincere gratitude for the consideration shown me during my period of service. If I can be of assistance without remuneration as a consultant during the further course of the committee inquiry, I would be glad to have you call on me.

Yours sincerely,

JOHN MARRINAN.

PROJECTED CONSULTATIVE PACT—ITS DANGERS IF MISUNDERSTOOD

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I beg for a moment to enter to a subject that is not akin to finance and the banking bill, as to which addresses have just been made by the honorable Senators from Florida and Michigan. I embark, sir, on a theme to which I am moved by assertions from international publications—all of eminent source—that do injustice to the United States.

Mr. President, an eminent philosopher-poet has left for our consideration the suggestion that Falsehood upon the wings of Mercury will take its course, in winding ways, and proclaim itself all virtue—and with such rapid strides find abiding places, and from these herald posts hiss its mists of deadening miasma, while Truth, with her leaden heel and slow approach, will move so slow behind the masked cavalcade that she will never overtake to convert to right the legions who, trembling with alarm and disturbing concern, are fixed breathless in fear.

The European press, flashing its continental sensation, makes free to announce that the eminent spokesmen of the great nations of Europe, whose representatives have had the honor of being lately in consultation at Washington with the distinguished President of the United States—these renowned envoys were received with that courtesy which becomes, of course, the ever-hospitable manners of the United States and the welcome of its people to the strangers within our gates—sirs, we today have it reported that these ambassadors of international unity proclaim that there was an agreement made between those who represented a European national situation with the President of the United States that the United States and its people will enter into a "consultative pact"; that this so-called "consultative pact" binds the United States to become a party to whatever controversy should arise between those foreign nations as between themselves, or as between themselves and the Asiatic countries, should such arise.

The impress is very clearly conveyed to affirm that the United States is on the eve of closing into some form of understanding which the writers characterize and the parliamentary spokesmen in public assemblages define as a pact in which the United States will, upon invitation, enter into the consideration of whatever controversy or conflict there is pending or threatened between any countries of Europe, or that of any countries of Europe and Asia. It is asserted that under this compact we will adjudge which of these in contest or conflict is the aggressor nation. May I use the exact language as I read it, saying—

It will be left to the United States to judge which is the aggressor to be punished.

It is claimed that when one has been determined as the aggressor the form of punishment to be inflicted will be decided, or at least will be controlled, by the course that the United States may suggest should be taken.

Mr. President, to ourselves in the United States these projected boastings mean little. We in public life, in all public posts—my eminent colleagues who sit about me on both sides of the Senate—know how often exaggerated observations are indulged. Sometimes such is fulminated to serve some local purpose in Europe, or, perchance, to serve an object at home here in America. Then oftentimes, as is the case now, when such will enhance the value of eminent representatives or when such will impart certain credit to the foreign nations which are busy in sending forth the propaganda that best serves its immediate object then in hand.

Mr. President, I make bold, as a Member of this honorable body and as a citizen of the United States, to say it is an error of fact from any source which asserts that the United States has now entered, or in the future will enter upon, any form of an arrangement called "a consultative pact" in which we volunteer to sit in judgment in the controversies between European nations that do not touch us in any form. Or, sirs, to enter in the controversies between European nations and Asiatic nations which in no wise affect our interests, but did we so depart, would leave us as an intruder or offensive trespasser.

Sirs, from this forum we tell the world that the people of the United States have never authorized any President of the United States of the past, nor, if I conceive them correctly—as I feel I do—for any future, will the United States be directed or authorized to enter into any form of an arrangement by which we are to sit in council and judgment touching the conflicts of foreign nations with each other, and never in our own behalf, ex cathedra, adjudge and decide who is the aggressor in any national conflict of Europe or Asia and proceed upon our verdict to inflict a form of penalty—these penalties as is reported in one of these statements I hold in my hand, by "withdrawing commercial credit", "withholding governmental association", and then latterly to determine what form of force we will put behind the decision in order that it shall be executed according to the will of the United States. Now, sirs, our Nation has a President who never could be allured by seductive glamor nor forced by intimidations to offend the spirit of his Nation or violate his fixed principles of a constitutional officer now fulfilling oath and duty. To hold him out as capable of either offense is to slander his wisdom and impeach his patriotism.

Sir, this country ought not be subjected to the charge by these eminent sources of Europe of ever having been willing to enter into the broils of the governments of foreign lands, nor to consent to act as a judge as between their conflicts, and decide which, from our point of view, is an aggressor, and then proceed to inflict such punishment as the European nation will define, as called for and justified from the circumstances as presented to us by these European contestants.

Sirs, we can say for our President that through him the United States will not enter into any arrangement called a "consultative pact" that calls for any other consultation than that to which it may be invited to offer its advice and counsel as to the best manner of maintaining the peace, avoiding conflict, and, in every possible instance that we can command, obstructing war. Sirs, the people of the United States shall not now be deluded with the theory, visioned from foreign report, that there has been any secret understanding indulged here at Washington between these eminent representatives of foreign nations and the distinguished President of the United States that would so violate the traditions of our land as to intimate that we have voluntarily assumed to come into an offensive pact whenever invited, to the end that we may render judgment in favor of one and against another of the foreign nations, and then suggest, in the plenitude of our trespass, the form of penalty that should follow, and thereupon be prepared to see that the penalty should be executed by whatever force may be demanded by these foreign representatives to carry out the principle of whatever their contest may be. This violation of our basic principles of self-government and home rule will never be inaugurated by a democratic United States of true republican form.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, will the Senator permit an interruption?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. LEWIS. Certainly; I am pleased to yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. FESS. My inquiry is as to how far we could go in consultation and still be free from the application of any penalty. In other words, I have never felt any great hesitancy about the Government of the United States consulting with others, but my fear has always been that a judgment to be arrived at might carry with it the inference of sanctions or enforcements of it; and my query to the Senator is, How far could we go in the former without being subject to the criticism of the latter?

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, the eminent Senator from Ohio, learned, as we know, by his experience in public affairs of the great possibility of danger of this United States entering into either a conflict of words or a conference where we will make a decision as to the right of one foreign nation and the wrong of another, propounds a pertinent query. I answer the Senator: The furthest it was ever the intent of our countrymen to authorize our representatives to enter into that which would be called a consultative pact is that which has ever been their privilege and ever been their offering in every instance of conflict—which is the mere advice and counsel as to the manner in which peace may be preserved and to act as some interceding agency looking to the restoring of good feeling and complete harmony; but never, I answer the able Senator from Ohio, was it the intent of our country, nor, I make bold to say, the intent of the distinguished President of the United States now sitting, that we should be called into any pact that must result in our passing judgment and being left in a position where the nation against which we offer judgment is to be our enemy and carry within its bosom a hatred of us; while that which we favor would immediately expect of us strength and force sufficient to carry out the decision that was in its favor and benefit. For the reason, sir, that either one of these may transpire, I will assume that no consultation beyond that which we have ever indulged—to wit, the advices of a good friend—can go, and no farther should it assume to go.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President—

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. LEWIS. I yield to my friend from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. I desire to ask the Senator whether he opposes this country consulting with other countries, or with representatives of other countries, in a mutual, world-wide effort to bring about peace or prevent armed conflict? And if the United States should enter into an agreement to sit down at a table and consult about the best methods by which peace could be preserved, does the Senator think there would be any implication in such consultation that if there was failure of the consultation, and armed conflict should finally result somewhere, we would be under any obligation to enter into that conflict?

Mr. LEWIS. I answer my able friend from Kentucky by saying that, if we are asked to sit at table for conference looking to the general peace of mankind, we fulfill that spirit that loves peace and serves humanity that is ever that of the United States. Yet, sir, to be seduced into a conference where already conflict has ensued, and war is threatened, and where the question to be determined is as to which is the aggressor in that particular matter, I say to my able friend from Kentucky that such course is no part of the duty of the United States; and, should it enter upon such, that action would involve the United States rendering judgment against one country in order to favor the other with a decision affirmatively asserting its innocence. We should keep out of intermeddling with the affairs of European countries which in no wise affect ourselves. Therefore, I can see great danger from it; and, I answer my able friend from Kentucky, so great a danger that I would advise my country under all considerations to avoid any gathering or such pact with such baleful object.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield further—

Mr. LEWIS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have never understood that the suggestion of a consultative pact carried with it anything more than an obligation or agreement to consult about the world's difficulties and troubles. I have never understood that if a failure to agree upon any policy, or a failure to prevent warfare, should result from such a conference, there was any implication that we thereby obligated ourselves, whatever might have been our position in the consultation, to follow into war for or against any nation which might take part in the conference.

Mr. LEWIS. I answer the able Senator from Kentucky by reminding him that we were invited from time to time into conferences looking to what many of us felt was some order of peace and intercession and mediation as between the countries that were at war—Germany, France, and England—we all remember the final act; and we will not forget that our entrance in being invited through the insidious propaganda with its effect drew us to where our judgments and announcements were held as offenses against other countries involved, and our entrance into these consultations touching the affairs of these outside nations was treated as a violation of treaty and neutrality, and we found ourselves in war, the results of which we are depicting from day to day from this great Chamber, while we suffer the burdens and miseries—and all the unhappy consequences which followed.

Therefore I insist that any pact that this land should enter into, whether through the action of the honorable President of the United States or otherwise, can go no farther than the entrance into a consideration of friendship looking to advice and counsel with the view of avoiding war and preventing conflict. But, sirs, when we are asked by any foreign people or nation to participate in a consultative pact touching relations and conflicts which have already begun in some form, and we are by our pact to pass a judgment as to which is the aggressor, and an intimation as to how the aggressor should be punished, that, I declare, sir, is no part of the duty of the United States. Where our interests are not involved, we should in no wise be brought into such entanglement; and, to avoid such, I respectfully insist there is no privilege on the part of any foreign government to assert that any arrangement has been made with the United States to enter into consultative pacts touching the conflicts already opened in disputive diplomacy or battlefield contest between foreign countries in which we have neither interest nor a part.

Mr. President, I therefore speak of things that are a little too far geographically for all of us to understand. This morning the eminent Senator from Florida spoke as to telegrams which had come to this honorable body. The Senator from Ohio joined in calling attention to similar matters touching purely civic legislation, all urging action on the Senate to serve private interest.

Now comes from our country, particularly in the West, the sheaf of telegrams asserting that certain societies of citizens believe that we have entered into an understanding which is to step in and participate in conferences which are to arrive at which is guilty or which is innocent as between these who have already begun a contest among themselves and anticipate conflicts and wars that would ensue from such. Our people are frightened by this fleshless and unbodied specter.

Our countrymen must be free from any such fear. America must understand that her public officials have never assumed, without the consent of their countrymen, to enter into the affairs of any foreign country, either for the adjustment of their military arrangements or their private financial disputes, and pass judgment as though we were acting as guardian of their affairs or the conservator of their interests. Sirs, from such imaginings we are likely to awaken from our own countrymen a very serious suspicion of our conduct and lose the confidence of the great masses of our people now being so greatly enjoyed by the distinguished

President of the United States. This confidence and trust should not be shattered by the misinterpretations which are going abroad and coming from abroad, and are being published now, recoiling in their influence against the United States.

Mr. President, one other observation I make bold to tender. It is inseparable from the gossip and false whispers as to our Nation surrendering its principles at demand of foreign power. It is said in all quarters that there is something mysterious or hidden in the relationship of the war debts. It is now charged that they have been injected in the movement for the economic conference that is assumed soon to be begun.

I respectfully assert that there is no one who can justify the charge that the President of the United States, or the representatives of this honorable Government, of any political organization, have ever conceded to the theory by which the war debt should be made a basis of discussion and preliminary to the entrance upon the economic conference, the conference that has for its object the purpose only of adjustment of the matters of international trade.

Mr. President, I make bold further to say that if the time shall come when the President of the United States shall assume that there are justifications for entering again upon consultations and conferences as to the debts, looking to the modification of terms or the extension of time, or for whatever reasons urged, I respectfully assert that since we are now going to Europe at the instance of the European nations to assemble at London, and then at Geneva, at London on the economic question, what is ascertained and designated as the tariff truce, and at Geneva in the matter which we define as looking to some method of disarmament.

Then, sir, if the question of the international debts, particularly the war debts, is to be taken up, and then considered anew, separate and apart from these others which at London or at Geneva are to be indulged, I propose that then those discussions, of whatever nature they may be on the war debts now in dispute, this new consideration be taken up here in the United States; I ask that the meeting on that subject, if it shall ever be held, shall be held here, and I would suggest at the Capital of this Nation at Washington. Here it is where the whole question may be free, sir, from the prejudice of the environment which has surrounded the discussion at each previous time it has been entered upon. Here we would be rescued from that prejudice of inherited hatred which followed the World War, and which is still so indulged by certain countries that we see each morning the flickering lights upon the skies indicative of the new flames that flash the fires of war as between some of these nations who are to sit in the deliberations.

If, therefore, this question is, out of the generosity of our hearts, or for the purpose of some justice which we see could follow as a result—I say, if it is to be taken up in a new conference and for a new consideration, justified in the mind of the President of the United States, or the Congress—then, sir, let it be at such a place that the result, whatever it will be, cannot be imputed to the transmitted hatred of nations, and all subject to the mad moments we glimpse in the political upheavals of our surrounding nations.

Sirs, we offer such peaceful and quiet atmosphere to our foreign visitors who come as delegates and envoys. Sirs, all the world knows we are a people who seek no territory; we are a people who seek no penalty. We are of a nation that looks for peace. We are a great government that cries out to the world for the harmony of friendship, the prosperity of nations, and the happiness of man. Let that latter question, if it is to be entered, be entered here, where the arena is calm, where the surroundings are just, and where the environment is such that all mankind will see that, whatever comes from it, comes in the spirit of American justice, to the end that all the world will see our distributed justice—to all people—while America to her own people stands firm in the right and to all her people ever true.

I thank the Senate.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE PRESIDENT—THE OIL INDUSTRY

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, which was read, as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, May 20, 1933.

HON. JOHN N. GARNER,

President of the Senate.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: As the Congress is doubtless aware, a serious situation confronts the oil-producing industry. Because oil taken from the ground is a natural resource which once used cannot be replaced, it is of interest to the Nation that its production should be under reasonable control for the best interests of the present and future generations.

My administration for many weeks has been in conference with the Governors of the oil-producing States and with component parts of the industry, but it seems difficult, if not impossible, to bring order out of chaos only by State action. In fact, this is recognized by most of the Governors concerned.

There is a wide-spread demand for Federal legislation. May I request that this subject be given immediate attention by the appropriate committee or committees? The Secretary of the Interior stands ready to present any information or data desired.

May I suggest further that in order to save the time of the special session it might be possible to incorporate action relating to the oil industry with whatever action the Congress decides to take in regard to other industries—in other words, that consideration could be given at the same time that action is taken on the bills already introduced and now pending in committee.

Very sincerely yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The communication will be referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the message of the President which has just been read, if I properly interpret it, may call for an abrogation or a material modification of existing laws against trusts and combinations in restraint of trade. Certainly any measure that would accomplish what the President's message seems to show he desires to have accomplished would require that the Clayton Act and the Sherman antitrust law be modified, that the provisions of the latter be temporarily suspended, or something of the kind. It seems to me, in view of the significance of this question and its importance, and the legal questions involved, the message ought to go to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the Chair say to the Senator from Utah that a bill dealing with the entire matter involved in the letter from the President to the Presiding Officer of the Senate was introduced yesterday or the day before and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce. In view of that fact, the Chair thought that the letter from the President should be referred to the same committee.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, in view of the measure to which the President refers, I shall not insist upon any change of reference of the President's letter, but I do insist that the committee which considers this question should take into account the fact that, as we are advised, there is a disposition upon the part of industry, including the oil industry, so to modify the Sherman antitrust law and the Clayton Act as that industries may combine in order to conduct their operations.

Of course, the suggestion is made that these combinations shall be effected under the control and supervision of some Federal agency. It seems to presage an introduction into our industrial life of the cartel system of Germany, changing materially the competitive systems under which our country has been led to great heights of prosperity in the past.

Mr. President, something may be said later upon these efforts to destroy our competitive system, repeal the Sherman antitrust law and the Clayton Act, or further so to modify them as that combinations may form and a monopolistic control of industry be brought about in our country.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I desire to add a few words to the discussion that has been taking place.

The communication of the President of the United States to the Vice President relates to a subject matter of very great importance. The oil industry apparently is in very great distress. The prices being received for the raw product are so low that they do not even approach the cost of production.

The object of the message which has been received by the Vice President, and kindly laid before the Senate by him, is to assure that prompt consideration will be given to this subject matter. It expresses the hope that the subject matter may be dealt with in one of the general bills which are now pending before the Congress, and I express the hope that the committees having jurisdiction of those bills will heed the suggestion that has been made, and give the matter attention.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I suppose I have no authority to speak for the committee to which this communication and the bill have been referred, or for the chairman of the committee, but I think it is safe to give assurance that the committee will give earnest and thoughtful consideration to this message and to any measure that may be framed along that line.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. The Senator refers to the Committee on Finance?

Mr. BARKLEY. The Committee on Finance and the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Both committees?

Mr. BARKLEY. Both committees; yes.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Very well. I am very happy to receive that assurance.

RELIEF FOR HOME OWNERS

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, in the noon edition of the Washington Times I notice, in an article commenting on the emergency legislation which is to be proposed before the conclusion of this session, that the home loan bank bill which passed the House and is pending before a committee of the Senate may be abandoned if the opposition proves stubborn. That is a bill which has inspired hope in the breasts of millions and millions of home owners throughout the United States—hope that they will be able to secure some relief in the nature of loans to them for the purpose of refinancing and saving their homes from foreclosure.

Mr. President, I have gone over that measure. I do not think it is as broad and as generous as it should be, and I have contemplated offering some amendment to it so that an owner may be able to obtain a loan. Most everyone has been taken care of in legislation, and will be, except the individual home owner who has a mortgage upon his property, or desires to obtain a loan upon his home. I just rose to state that I hope this article in the Times is a mistake, and that the measure referred to will not be abandoned, regardless of the stubbornness of the opposition. I myself do not know of any opposition, but the bill has been pending for some time; it was referred to the committee on May 1 but has not yet been reported back to the Senate.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President—

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. I wish to say that I join wholeheartedly in the sentiments expressed by the Senator from Florida. I have many letters every day, probably a score of them, from people in my State whose homes are about to be sold. They are intensely interested in this subject. I do not think that there is anybody in the country more interested in legislation than are the home owners. So I sincerely hope that this bill will not be abandoned, but that, on the contrary, it will be passed at the earliest practicable moment.

Mr. BARKLEY and others addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Florida yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I yield the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. I want to say that I did not hear the reading of the newspaper article by the Senator from Florida, and I do not know what the article contains; but, as I am a member of the subcommittee of the Committee on Banking and Currency, considering the home loan bank bill, I can say that, so far as that subcommittee is concerned, and so far as the full committee is concerned, there has been no discussion of abandoning this proposed legislation; there has been no intimation that it is to be abandoned; but there has been some delay in the ability of the subcommittee to get the bill ready and to report it to the full committee, largely because the members of the subcommittee have been engaged in the preparation of other important legislation and have found difficulty in attending to their multifarious duties all at the same time. However, we expect and hope early next week to report the measure to the full committee and get it reported to the Senate and put upon the calendar.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I am very glad to hear the statement of the Senator from Kentucky, and from it I gather the impression that the writer of the article to which I have referred was mistaken when he stated that the bill would probably be abandoned if it was stubbornly opposed.

Mr. McADOO. Mr. President, I may say, supplementing what my colleague on the committee, the distinguished Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] has just said, that as a member of the subcommittee dealing with this subject I can inform the Senator from Florida that the subcommittee has almost perfected this bill. I think we succeeded in putting the final touches on it this morning. There has been great difficulty in dealing with this very complex subject, and no time has been lost in trying to work it out, but many members of the committee, as the Senator from Kentucky has stated, are engaged on other subcommittees, and it has not always been possible to have meetings as promptly as we desired. I think, however, that the report of the subcommittee will go to the full committee early next week, and we hope to have the bill reported to the Senate during the same week.

A NEW MEDIEVALISM—ARTICLE BY GUGLIELMO FERRERO

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, the unhappy and somber picture presented by the present world conditions has impelled the President recently to address a communication to all the leading countries of the world. A gentleman who, I think, is an outstanding historian, Professor Ferrero, has recently prepared a very brief, lucid, and penetrating article dealing with world conditions which I think is as fine a bit of writing dealing with that matter as I have seen in many months. I ask unanimous consent that it may be inserted in the RECORD. It is very brief.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Herald, May 17, 1933]

A NEW MEDIEVALISM

By Guglielmo Ferrero

GENEVA.—Happily there are still the Jews in the world! They, at least, scream and struggle when they are flayed alive.

For 15 years the world has been full of horrors. On all sides there is massacre, pillage, deportation; scaffolds are erected, prisons are filled, and entire peoples are reduced to a state of slavery. No one is moved; no one even knows about it.

Millions have been spent on laying cables across the earth, wireless telegraphy has been invented, we can telephone from one continent to another. Newspapers spend fabulous sums in order to have the latest news. And never as at the present time have the free peoples so completely ignored the violence to which the enslaved peoples are subjected. It is a silent strangling of all liberty.

In certain countries of old civilization the inquisition has been restored, the liberty to think, speak, or print suppressed; savants, professors, and journalists have been reduced to the rank of salaried agents of force. In what free country have the savants, professors, and journalists been moved? How much have they exerted themselves, even to merely sign a protest? It seems that the liberty of others is a matter which concerns no one.

In certain countries it is religion, in others science, which is persecuted. Many thousands of young men languish in the prisons of Europe because they wished to pray to God or study and judge the world according to the free aspiration of their own souls. The world does not even know. The churches are as indifferent as the universities. The tribunals of the countries under dictatorship are highly perfected machines; they massacre in silence.

The world seems to have no more sensibility or conscience. The indifference to liberty of the free countries is one of the most alarming phenomena of our epoch. After allowing 10,000,000 men to be butchered for liberty in the Great War, France, England, and the United States look on unmoved while tyranny takes possession of nearly all countries. Sometimes they even encourage it with their imprudent sympathy.

Germany would also have been trampled on and stained with blood by despotism, without the world perceiving it, had not Hitler conceived the idea of attacking the Jews. In this case, happily, a dictatorship has for the first time come into collision with a race and a religion capable of resistance. May this reaction be welcomed by all free men as a sign of hope.

Once more the Jews will have suffered for themselves and for humanity. Their cries of rage and pain have partially awakened the West. And it begins to ask:

"But what are these dictatorships which render possible persecutions of which only the Middle Ages were capable?"

Let us hope that the West is not about to relapse into its cowardly somnolence. On the day when the West asks itself seriously where the world is going it will perceive that this persecution of the Jews is not the only medieval barbarity which is reviving in the war-devastated world. There are others not less grave. It is time to perceive them and be moved by them. For little by little we are unconsciously sinking into a Middle Age far worse than the first, for it will be a Middle Age with nitroglycerine.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

SATURDAY, MAY 20, 1933

The House met at 11 o'clock a.m.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Amid this sweet stillness, while we bow, Lord of mercy, hear us and forgive. As we live in Thy presence, so we live in Thy strength. Let this benediction of love supply a fresh reason why we should delight in Thee and acknowledge our daily blessings as Thy bountiful gifts. Heavenly Father, come with us; give us Thy guidance, that we may not indulge in intemperate speech or in pride or in willfulness. O keep our whole lives with large thoughts, fine emotions, and in fellowship with the things above. These blessings, dear Lord, will be a precious discipline against the day of friction and in the hour of humiliation. Bless all of us with good health, with the joy and peace of a good life. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

CONTROL OF OIL PRODUCTION

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following communication from the President of the United States:

THE WHITE HOUSE,

Very sincerely yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

HON. HENRY T. RAINEY,

Speaker of the House of Representatives,

Washington, D.C.

Mr. MARLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 10 minutes on the subject of oil.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I have not objected to this request, but I shall be compelled to object to any other request for time to discuss matters foreign to the two matters we have up today. We want to get through with this general debate today on the banking bill.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. Does the gentleman expect to bring up the program he referred to yesterday?

Mr. BYRNS. Yes. The first matter under consideration will be the rule relating to the Agricultural Institute, and then it is expected that a rule relating to the banking bill will be taken up for consideration. We are very anxious to conclude the general debate on the last bill today, so that we can take it up under the 5-minute rule on Monday and complete it. I do not know that anybody is going to ask for time to speak, and I make this statement in advance. I shall be compelled to object to any further requests for time.

Mr. WOODRUM. Mr. Speaker, I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that yesterday it was tentatively agreed that my colleague should have permission to ask unanimous consent.

Mr. BYRNS. Oh, I have no objection to giving unanimous consent in the case referred to, which I recall; but I shall object to anyone who desires to make a speech.

Mr. MARLAND. Mr. Speaker, I am presenting today a bill which is the result of many weeks of effort by the Government and the oil industry to atone for the crime of the century, the despoliation of the oil fields of this country through the lack of technical knowledge of some and the greed of other producers, causing the waste of that great natural resource. Since the geology of petroleum has become better-known, the oil-producing States have recognized this waste and have passed conservation laws to protect their oil resources. The present Interstate Commerce Act interferes with the proper operation of the State conservation laws and permits the shipment in interstate commerce of oil produced in violation of those laws. The purpose of this bill is to aid and assist the oil-producing States in enforcing those laws intended to prevent both physical and economic waste.

The greatest problem confronting the petroleum industry today lies in the fact that, while the market demand for crude petroleum in the United States is very large, the State of California alone can produce the amount required; the State of Texas alone can produce the required amount; the State of Oklahoma alone can produce the required amount at the present time and for a short space of time. The resources of Venezuela, Rumania, Russia, and Iraq are each of them capable of satisfying this demand without any assistance from other fields.

Continued uncontrolled production will mean closing many fields in other States, destroying hundreds of thousands of small wells whose ultimate production will be greater than the total ultimate production of the 30,000 wells whose open flow is now destroying the market for the 300,000 older wells. These wells with settled production represent the most valuable known petroleum resources in the country and must not be destroyed.

To assist the States in carrying out the purpose of their conservation laws, Congress should authorize someone to act as umpire between these various States who after consultation with the authorities of the several oil-producing States might allocate to each of the oil-producing States its fair share of the general market, in this way protecting the correlative rights of the oil-producing States in the enjoyment of a common market. For the purpose of protecting our oil fields in this country, Congress must also limit the amount of oil that can be brought into our market from foreign countries.

No dictator is provided in this bill whose purpose is "to preserve and protect the correlative rights of the oil-producing States and to assist them in the proper enforcement of their oil-conservation laws." The Secretary of the Interior is given power to act in conjunction with State officials in order to protect these correlated rights.

After setting forth the emergency nature of this legislation and its limit to 2 years from the date of enactment, the bill declares that it is the policy of Congress to protect the Nation's oil supplies for present use and future necessities, for the national defense, and to prevent waste in their production and marketing in excess of the reasonable market demand or in violation of the laws of the producing State. This bill also declares it unlawful to deliver or receive for transportation in any manner any natural gas, petroleum, or petroleum products produced or withdrawn from storage in excess of the market demand determined by the Secretary of the Interior or in violation of any of the laws of the producing State.

No crude petroleum or its products may be imported, under this bill, into the United States without a certificate from the Secretary of the Interior stating that such crude petroleum or its products are imported in accordance with regulations concerning the market demand, provided that so long as the United States has the capacity to produce sufficient crude petroleum to supply the Nation's consumption demands and its export trade, the Secretary is directed to limit petroleum imports to the daily average during the last 6 months of 1932. Imports under bond for the purpose of exporting after processing or refining in this country are exempted from this provision.

Allocations to the oil-producing States of their equitable proportions of the total market demand are to be made by the Secretary of the Interior in order to protect the correlative rights of the oil-producing States. Where any State fails to accept the amount determined as its equitable proportion of the Nation's production, the Secretary is authorized to appoint an emergency committee, representative of the public interest in such State, to prorate equitably the State's production to pools, areas, or common sources of supply. In case such a committee cannot agree, the Secretary himself may establish these production allowables.

The Secretary is directed in order to prevent the premature abandonment of wells of settled production to establish a minimum price no less than the average costs of such wells and in determining when such abandonment would be premature is directed to take into consideration the interests of the purchasing and consuming public and the oil industry as a whole.

The investigation of any monopolistic practices, investigation of the feasibility of divorcing pipe lines from affiliated refineries or holding companies, devising practical means for attaining such divorce and initiation of rates and regulations on transportation and storage, the establishment of minimum rates of pay after conference with employers and employees, power to seek mandatory or other injunctions against violators, recommendations to the States that they enact uniform conservation laws, including control of drilling and producing, retention underground of crude petroleum whose production would be in excess of the market demand, equitable apportionment to owners of a common source of oil and authorization for unit operation are other provisions set forth in the bill.

A tax of 50 cents per barrel in addition to all other taxes is levied upon all petroleum produced in excess of the market demand as established by the Secretary. A tax of one fourth of a cent per barrel is levied upon all petroleum produced in accordance with the market demand, the proceeds of this tax to be used in providing funds to meet the expenses incurred in enforcement of the measure.

Fines from $1,000 to $5,000 with imprisonment of 1 year to 5 years are provided for individual violators of this act, while corporations violating it are to be subject to fines from $5,000 to $10,000 for each day of such violation.

The bill is the result of many weeks of work in the Interior Department, after the hearings held before the Secretary of the Interior, at which the Governors of the oil-producing States were represented, and after many consultations with oil men representing all branches of the industry. The bill was finally prepared by the Solicitor for the Interior Department and introduced by me yesterday at his request. It is intended to preserve the petroleum industry from total collapse. That industry is now losing at the rate of a million dollars a day in its various branches.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARLAND. Yes.

Mr. HASTINGS. What is the average price of oil now in the Oklahoma-Texas field?

Mr. MARLAND. Oil is selling today in Texas, Oklahoma, and Kansas for 25 cents a barrel.

Mr. HASTINGS. The gentleman is an experienced oil man. About what does it cost to produce oil in that field and under those circumstances?

Mr. MARLAND. The average cost of production in the midcontinent field of the United States is figured at $1.07 per barrel.

Mr. HASTINGS. So that there is a loss of 82 cents a barrel?

Mr. MARLAND. Yes.

Mr. FORD. Is that price paid for oil due to the fact that there is an overproduction or to the fact that the oil companies, the big crowd, own and control the pipe lines and can pay any price that they want to pay?

Mr. MARLAND. That is a double-barreled question. So far as overproduction is concerned, it is not the result of actual overproduction so much as it is the result of the threat of overproduction. As to the second part of the question, the pipe-line companies or their purchasing companies do post the price of oil and control the price of oil at the well. There are thousands of producing and refining companies in this country that will go to the wall this summer if Congress does not take some action at this special session to stop the racketeers and the bootleggers in the petroleum industry. The oil-producing States in the mid-continent field have passed sane, fair, well-considered legislation to conserve their oil resources, but those States are helpless to protect themselves against the racket of unlawful production of oil and the shipment of that illegally produced oil in interstate commerce.

Mr. DUNN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARLAND. Yes.

Mr. DUNN. Does the gentleman know how much oil is shipped in from foreign countries at the present time?

Mr. MARLAND. At the present time approximately 150,000 barrels a day.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARLAND. Yes.
